Rooks, Frosh Go at It Tonight; Webfoots in Good Shape at Train

EUGENE and Oregon sport fans (that is, all of those Oregon fans who couldn't scrape together the necessary amount of simoleons, or are flat on their backs, so that they can't follow the Webfoots north today and see them slap down Jimmy Phelan's Huskies) will get a treat tonight when Oregon State's rooks meet in the opening clash of the "little civil war." The game is to be at Hayward field, right here on our own campus.

Billy Reinhart and Slats Gill have met many times on the maple court, but tonight will mark the first time the two hoop strategists have matched wits on the gridiron. Both mentors have a wealth of material this fall . . . in fact, more than they knew what to do with, and the two elevens that will meet each other tonight will be the pick of two squads which have been pared down from around the eighty mark.

Last year the two yearling elevens of the class of 1933 battled twice to a scoreless tie, but this time something warns us that neither Duckling nor Orange Babe is going to be satisfied with an even break tonight, and some one is going to be disappointed.

There's always a lot of spirit and fight in the yearling squads. It seems that by the time a player has worked his way into the varsity ranks he has lost all that fire and primitive love of battle that characterizes the play of the first year teams . . . in a word he is sophisticated . . . Not so with the freshman. He is out to win, and at any cost. There is nothing more pleasing to a frosh team than the opportunity of handing a rook a sound drubbing . . . and the same can be said of the orange yearlings.

So look for lots of action tonight . . . maybe a fight or two . . . and lots of blood and thunder. Go get 'em, frosh!

Oregon's crippled varsity didn't look so bad at the train yesterday afternoon. In fact, in their Sunday's best, they looked more like a winning team than ever. A few limps here and there, perhaps, but watch 'em tear into those Huskies. Any Duck player on the field could lose a leg at the knee, and he wouldn't be aware of the casualty for at least a quarter, or when he stooped to tie his shoestring.

If Eugene football fans only had the kind of a home schedule that rookers will enjoy at Berkeley, California, this year, little would be said about the "traveling Webfoots." The home-towners at the site of the University of California each week see some team representing the Golden Bears in action. The varsity has seven out of its ten games on the home lot, and the few times that the regulars are not on hand, the frosh eleven will put on the show for Bear fans.

Here is the home game schedule that all football fans dream about:
 Sept. 23—Santa Clara vs. California; Cal. Frosh vs. Los Angeles J. C.
 Sept. 30—Cal. Aggies, Nevada

29 Ducks on Way to Meet Washington

Huskies Plan to Break Oregon Jinx

Purple and Gold Will Be Decided Favorite in Annual Grid Encounter

With the cheers of 1000 Oregon rookers to send them on their way, Prink Callison and his Webfoot football squad, 29 strong, boarded the Southern Pacific's Shasta Limited last night at 5:30, and were on their way to Seattle. The Ducks, minus the services of their ace of tackles, Biff Nilsson, meet the University of Washington Huskies in the Sound City tomorrow afternoon.

Betting odds decidedly favor the Huskies to throw off the yoke of Webfoot dominance which has held them scoreless for the past five years. Two facts stand out as the reasons for the swing of the experts toward the Huskies—the first, Oregon looked unseasoned and ragged against Columbia university, a much weaker eleven, last Saturday—secondly, the fiend "Injury," always active in the Webfoot ranks before the annual game with the Purple, worked overtime this year, leaving many of the Webfoot stars far from their best for Saturday's tilt.

All of the Webfoot hard luck tales, except that about Biff's knee, have partially cleared now, and every man that stepped on the train yesterday was in condition to put in some hard football at Seattle. Mark Temple, co-captain of the Webfoots, is nearly recovered from the injured leg muscle which kept him on crutches for a week after the Gonzaga game. Cuppoletti, Morse, Gagnon, Van Vliet, Milligan, and Gee, all of whom have been on the invalid list during the past week, were in good shape, and should play plenty of football against the Huskies.

Mason McCoy, reserve end who made the trip, was not included in the list published yesterday in the Emerald. The rest of the squad remains the same.

Women's Athletics

Galloping Gaels Will Be Ready for Mix With Trojans

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE, Oct. 12.—Smarting from a close defeat administered to them by the California Bears, the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's today went into intensive practice sessions to prepare for their tussle with the Trojans at Los Angeles next Saturday before a large crowd of Southern California fans.

The last team to defeat the present national champions, the Gaels come south out of the sweltering foothills of Moraga valley with a host of men who are said to match Jones' cohorts man for man in practically every position. Rated as underdogs in the coming contest, they bring their full strength against the Trojans, with the exception of Ed Gilbert, 223-lb., guard, and John Yezerski, mammoth tackle, both of whom were badly shattered in the Bear-Gael melee.

Ten of the Gael squad saw action in the last defeat administered to the Trojans in 1931—the southerners winning 24 contests in a row since then. Vets of St. Mary's last victory are: Yates, center; Shaefer and Gilbert, guards; Jorgensen, tackle; Fred and George Canrinus, ends; Ahern, quarter, and Partee and Dodson, fullbacks. This gives Madigan virtually the same assortment of players that beat the Trojans in 1931, but he comes south this year with added backfield material in Plese, Wilson and Nichelini.

A Sad Story

That's what Bill Reinhart, above, has been telling about freshman football hopes this fall. However, he has promised to round up 11 frosh gridsters if Slats Gill, Rook coach, can find an equal number of Oregon State yearlings for the "little civil war" tonight at Hayward field.

Kappa Sigma Scores Win Over Phi Psi

Newport Breaks Record In 40-Yd. Event

Sigma Phi Epsilon and Phi Gamma Delta Advance in Donut Tournament

Monday's Swimming Schedule
 4:00—Beta Theta Pi vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon.
 4:30—Phi Gamma Delta vs. Kappa Sigma.

Coming from behind to win the last two events, Kappa Sigma scored an impressive 22-17 victory over Phi Kappa Psi yesterday afternoon.

In the other two matches of the day, Phi Gamma Delta downed Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Sigma Phi Epsilon won from Alpha Tau Omega by default.

The Kappa Sig-Phi Psi affair was by far the most thrilling match of the tournament. Both teams fought a nip and tuck battle with each individual race being won by only a small margin. Newport of the Kappa Sigs led his team, by shattering the intramural record for the 40-yard free style event. He covered this distance in 19.5 seconds to clip a half second off the previous record.

Idaho's Vandals Have Game With College of Idaho

The College of Idaho football team will play host to Coach Leo Caldwell's Idaho Vandals tonight at Caldwell. The Idaho squad, led by Willis Smith, their half-pint halfback, showed a strong offensive last week in smothering the Whitman team under a 60-to-0 score. Since the Vandals invade Eugene next Friday night for a game with the Webfoot, tonight's clash will be watched with much interest here.

Ringrose and Brooke did some fine swimming for the losers.

Due to the football game in Seattle Saturday, no matches will be held this week-end. The semifinals are scheduled for Monday.

OREGON FROSH MEET ROOKS IN TILT TONIGHT

 will undoubtedly face each other. It is also reported that Wayne Valley, rook passing ace, and Bill Griswold have been declared ineligible. Another questionable point is whether or not Ray Woodman will play. He has been kept on ice for the game, having an early season injury, but the dope says he will not be in condition.

Hub Tuttle, end, is the outstanding lineman of the O.S.C. yearlings. Don Fisher and Ken Demaring, tackles, are also reported to be good. Pete Delano, center, is another reported cripple, and Demaring may play the pivot position.

Passing Offense Stressed By Washington Grid Coach

SEATTLE, Oct. 12.—(Special)—Every night of practice this week genial Jimmy Phelan has had his men practicing the art of developing a perfect pass offense for the Oregon game Saturday. Tuesday night the Husky mentor had his boys shooting passes so long it was necessary to burn the Kleig lights for almost two hours.

During the practice session three out of every four plays were passes with Art Ahonen and Ole Hansen alternating on the tossing end. When one did the tossing the other was usually the receiver, so the fans can expect to see plenty of passes from Ahonen to Hansen or vice versa Saturday. When Phelan had called a halt to the day's work he seemed to be well pleased with the work of his squad, especially that of his two above mentioned halfbacks who completed three out of every four passes attempted.

Many Passes Used
 Phelan is using a variety of passes, short ones, long ones, passes into the flats and short ones on the flanks—even the new lateral now and then—all were tried with the same high degree of success. The Washington coach realizes the weakness of the Webfoot pass defense and means to do all in his power to take advantage of the situation.

Bill Smith, stellar end, is figured to play a great part in the Husky pass offense although he did not take part in the scrimmage session due to an injured thumb. Last night "Pest" Welch, frosh grid tutor, directed his yearlings against the varsity using Oregon offensive plays throughout with the varsity on defense. The varsity squad stopped the freshmen on most every play, showing their knowledge of the Callison system.

Smalling May Play
 It looks as if Ralph Smalling, reserve fullback, will replace the injured Sulkosky at the line jarring post. Matt Muczynski continued to play his post at quarterback in the first team backfield. Muczynski looked so well in there that it is expected he will keep on at his new position of signal barker and that Jay Hornbeak, disposed quarterback, will hold down the bench.

Vacation Spent at Lake
 As attending physician representing the medical service of the department of interior, Dr. Fred Miller, head of the University service, spent the entire summer at Crater Lake.
