End, Tackle Berths of Rival Grid Teams Are Capably Taken Care of

IT'S about time that Oregon grid fans, if not the grid fans of the country as a whole, came forward to face the facts and admit that the old U. of O. has one top-notch football coach in Prince G. Callison.

It will be two years next spring that "Prink", only just graduated from the high school coaching Prink Callison class, took over the disjointed parts of a potentially great football team, left in his care by the illustrious, rotund Dr. C. W. Spears.

But the "soda stool sharks" didn't give a hang whether Oregon had an alumni coach or not. What they wanted was a coach that could win football games.

When Callison was named headman of the Webfoot camp, loud and many were the walls sent up by ambitious alums and self-appointed dopesters.

With as little a chance as Prink got to show his hand in his first season, a crowd of crepe-covered wolves were all for having him dumped out of his high position and inserting some new Knute Rockne, Howard Jones, or Andy Kerr who would be willing to put the Oregonians on top in the football world for a song.

Today it is broadcast in every sports section in the United States that the University of Oregon is one of the half dozen major college elevens in the country that is both undefeated and untied.

But that isn't the whole story. Prink Callison has won games. Yes. And what's more, he has won them smartly.

A brief summary of the season to date will give a clearer picture of the meaning of these facts:

The Linfield game: 56-0. All of the reserves playing. A hard-fought contest for places on the first string.

The Gonzaga game: 14-0. Straight football. Nothing given away to the Washington scouts.

The Columbia game: 14-7. A close call, but won by the wise use of the right men at the right time.

The Washington game: 6-0. A marvelous exhibition of spirit instilled at half-time. What did Prink tell 'em?

The Idaho game: 19-0. Straight football. Regulars used little.

The U. C. L. A. game: 7-0. A great fight to get the jump on the Bruins, then conservative, defensive football, content with the lead.

The Utah game: 26-7. Good psychology in starting reserves and sending in regulars at right moment. A display of a really diversified at-

Gee Is Leader of Oregon Attack; Pepelnjak and Arey Score In Final Period

The Redskins from the University of Utah found anything but a happy hunting ground on Hayward field last Saturday and were handed a 26-to-7 beating by the undefeated and untied Oregon Webfoots.

Coach Callison started mostly second stringers for Oregon, and Armstrong's forces got a little the best of the scoreless first period. In the second quarter the Webfoot tutor injected the first eleven with the exception of Co-captain Mark Temple and Bobby Parke, veteran backs, who are on the injured list.

Leighton Gee started off the Oregon scoring barrage in the second period by dashing 51 yards off tackle to a touchdown.

Gee Scores Again A few minutes later Gee again scored for the Oregonians when he caught Milligan's 29-yard pass from the Duck 40-yard stripe and galloped down the sidelines with the speed of a whippet, crossing the goal line untouched. This time "Stew" Milligan's try for point was good, making the half time score 13 to 0.

The Webfoot lineup in the third quarter was composed mostly of second and third stringers in order to give the regulars a chance to rest for the "big game" against the Oregon Aggies at Portland next week.

George "Pepper" Pepelnjak, who replaced Gee at right half, scored the third Duck touchdown in the early part of the fourth period when he made a miraculous catch of a 45-yard pass from little Maury Van Vliet, sub for Milligan at right half.

Arey Goes Over With but a few minutes until the final bark of the timer's gun was to be heard, Whit Arey, third string quarterback who played like a veteran, went through tackle and sidestepped the Utah secondary for 8 yards to score the final Oregon touchdown after a pass, Van Vliet to Simpson, put the ball in scoring territory.

But the fighting Utes weren't through as yet. With seconds left to play, Rinaldi took the kickoff on his own 5-yard line and gained 20 yards on the return. Cowley, pass tossing quarterback, then threw a short pass to Rinaldi, who shook off several Webfoot tacklers to run 60 yards for the lone Utah score. Grange converted the point with a place kick.

The Webfoot gridders gained 253 yards from scrimmage against 82 for the visitors, whereas Utah made 100 yards through the air against 79 for the local team.

Regulars rested for Oregon State.

It was this Utah game which really brought Callison to the fore as a great coach. Before, the customers were crying for him to "open up," and against the Redskins, Prink really did "open up" wide open. He threw everything in the bag, from long passes to complicated reverses at Armstrong's boys, and it all ended in four touchdowns for the Lemon-Yellow. That was the kind of football that made Prink famous as a prep coach at Medford high; and that is the kind of football, alternated with the straight, power game the Ducks have already proven themselves in that is going to beat Oregon State's Beavers next Saturday.

Webfoots Have Great Grid Coach; Record Is Proof of Statement

When Duck meets Beaver in the "Battle of the Century" in Portland Saturday, Prink Callison will offer at end a set of iconoclasts on the coast.

When Duck meets Beaver in the "Battle of the Century" in Portland Saturday, Prink Callison will offer at end a set of iconoclasts on the coast.

They are Raymond "Butch" Morse, left end; Anselmo Leonardo y Ferranti Del "Bud" Pozzo and Charles "Sphinx" Wishard, right wingmen. These three men have come from widely separated parts of the country to form one of the most dangerous wing combinations.

The Oregon end combination is one of the most dangerous on the coast, and in all fairness, it must be admitted that the Beavers will offer another highly potent pair of ends.

power of the right wing. The Orangemen reserves are almost forgotten men, but if it becomes necessary to replace Joslin or Curtin, Schultz will probably be the one to do it. He has been used at both end posts. Campbell or Jessup, left ends, and Woodard, right end, may be used, however.

Moving farther into the line, we find pitted against each other four linesmen who will make the tackle position plenty hot for each other.

In reserve the Webfoots probably have a great deal on the bench-warming Orange substitutes. At right end it is difficult to say just who is regular and who is reserve. Pozzo is sometimes called the regular, but Wishard usually starts the game. Whoever gets the call, Prink will have plenty in reserve for that position.

Mason McCoy must be counted upon in reckoning the reserve line. Besides Pozzo and Wishard, Ned Simpson and Mason McCoy must be counted upon in reckoning the reserve line.

Prink will have on the bench some potent reserve material for the tackle post. There are Gardner Frye, who may not be on the bench after all, but may play guard; Dwight Neilson, huge sophomore, as possible right tackle; Chuck Bishop, who has seen considerable service already this year, and who heads the reserve list for left tackle.

Also Stiner may be called upon to use Harold Brown, Dan Mitola, or Robert Rushing, for right tackle.

Oregon Still Leads Coast; Upsets Reduce Number of Teams In Select Group

Oregon's Webfoots were untouched by the general avalanche of disaster that overtook many major elevens last Saturday.

As a result the Ducks still lead the Coast race, with no defeats or ties, and are second from the top in nation-wide ratings. The major teams that as yet are unbeaten and untied and the number of games played by each are:

Ducks Clash With O.S.C. in Crucial Game

Saturday's Contest Is Set For Portland

Close Battle Predicted in Annual Grid Classic; Meeting Will Be 37th Time

The University of Oregon and the Oregon State college, traditional rivals, will meet for the 37th time on the gridiron Saturday when they clash on Multnomah stadium in the "battle of the century."

Both teams are undefeated and the result of the game will have a great deal to do with the outcome of the Pacific Coast conference championship.

Since the rivalry between the two institutions started way back in 1894 the University teams have won twenty of the games and the Aggies have emerged victorious in nine. Seven of the "civil wars" have resulted in tie scores.

Oregon has amassed 333 points against 187 for the Orangemen. The Eugene university also leads the list for the highest score in any one of the games played. In 1895 the Oregon Agricultural college was swamped by a 42 to 0 score.

This game at Portland will mark the third time that the Beavers and Ducks have met in the Rose City. The first game was played in 1908 which was won by the "U," 8 to 0. In 1917 the Corvallis collegians won a 14 to 0 thriller.

The oncoming game is a toss up with the Beaver supporters betting their "shirts" on the "Ironmen" and the Webfoot supporters betting what they have on the untied and undefeated conference leading Oregon eleven.

Oregon's great showing against Utah last week greatly raised the price of the Webfoots' stock.
