

Music Recital Gives Variety Of Selections

Betty Wilson Starts With Piano Numbers

Kathryn Orme, Lindy Hango, and Leslie Irvin Assist in Program; Songs Presented

Presented on the regular Monday student recital last night were Betty Wilson, pianist, Leslie Irvin, baritone, Lindy Hango, soprano, and Kathryn Orme, pianist. The recital was held in the school of music auditorium.

Beginning the program, Miss Wilson played Handel's "Gavotte in E-flat," Beethoven's "Bagatelle in E-flat," Grieg's "Voglein," and Mendelssohn's "Etude in B-flat minor." Except for the last named these selections seemed but snatches of melody they were so brief. Unusual harmonizations characteristic of Grieg were dominant in the pert little number "Voglein," while the other three numbers were definitely classic. Miss Wilson handled the difficult trills and runs in the Mendelssohn number with apparent ease.

Two singers new to the campus, who appeared on the program, were Leslie Irvin and Lindy Hango. Their voices contrasted strongly, Irvin's being baritone and Miss Hango's soprano. Irvin did very well with Ireland's "Sea Fever," a number popular among baritones and basses, since it gives opportunities to the low range of

Sigma Delta Chi Delegate Tells of Chicago Meeting

Journalism Honorary Fraternity Representative Reports On Convention

A meeting of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, was held Sunday at 11 o'clock in the Journalism building, at which Jack Bellinger gave a report of the national convention of Sigma Delta Chi held October 13, 14, 15 at Northwestern university, Evanston, Ill. Bellinger was sent as a representative of the University of Oregon chapter.

In his talk Bellinger mentioned that Ralph D. Casey, head of the department of journalism at the University of Minnesota, who was formerly of the journalism department at the University of Oregon, was one of the speakers at the convention, using "Opportunities for Research in the Journalistic Field" as his subject. Bellinger reported a successful and pleasant trip, which took him to New York City, Washington, D. C., and Chicago. He returned by way of New Orleans and Los Angeles.

Pledging plans were also discussed at the meeting.

their voices. Although possessing a high clear voice, Miss Hango's extreme nervousness last night partially spoiled the effect of her songs which were Schubert's "Serenade" and Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

Finally, Kathryn Orme played two Chopin numbers, "Waltz in A-minor" and "Polonaise in C-minor." The various moods within each individual piece made these numbers interesting. Since she commands the technique demanded by these pieces, Miss Orme concluded the program with finish.

Folders for Traveling Obtainable at Library

Colorful travel folders are available in large numbers to people interested in travel, and may be obtained through inquiry at the reference desk on the main floor of the library.

There is a pamphlet about almost every city of any importance in Europe, and various aspects of each country are also treated. Art illustrations and photographs are numerous. There are also maps of towns, districts, and countries.

In addition to detailed descriptions of places, the booklets contain short summaries of information about points of interest, hotel accommodations, and other information.

MISS RANKIN SHOWS INTEREST IN GROUPS

(Continued from Page One) students may meet Miss Rankin and ask questions. She will also hold conferences with students; arrangements for personal conferences with the visitor may be made by calling Margaret Norton, at the campus Y.W.C.A.

Tomorrow noon Miss Rankin will be the guest of the American Association of University Women, at a luncheon given at the Eugene hotel. Betty Ann Macduff, graduate of the University of Oregon, is in charge. Students desiring to attend the luncheon may make reservations by calling the hotel.

DEAN OF WOMEN GIVES WARNING OF PROWLER

There are numerous places where deep shadows may hide misguided individuals. These places will be observed carefully by watchmen in the future—and a solitary coed should pass them only if she is expert at jiu-jitsu or handy at wielding an umbrella!

The Cut Up

It seems, from "The Private Life of Henry VIII," which is showing at the Colonial, that Hank wasn't a bad guy at all. True, he subjected a couple of wives to the axe cure, but as related in the picture, in only one case did he have no reason.

This production demonstrates the capabilities of the English motion picture producers. Heretofore they have sent poorly acted, poorly directed, and technically rather messy bits of work. "The Private Life of Henry VIII" is complete in every detail. The photography is excellent. The acting, especially that of Charles Laughton, who turns in his greatest performance, leaves nothing lacking. Direction and technical detail are flawless.

This show is neither tragedy nor comedy, though it does fade out on a humorous note. Regarding his sixth wife, who cares for him as though he were a child, Henry says, "Six wives, and the best is the worst!"

There is deep, touching drama in the execution sequences, though even in them a humorous note is injected. Drama and comedy are very finely balanced.

Although Laughton is capable of portraying a weak, sensual character so excellently, he shades his interpretation of Henry VIII just enough to present a higher type of man than he has played in the past. The king evidently was more the victim of political strategists who wished an heir for the throne than of his own personal weaknesses. In fact, a hint of fineness and nobility is given at several times in the picture.

This is another picture you should not miss. It is a tribute to the ability of the English.

New Glamour Girl

You can have Jean Harlow, gentlemen; I'll take Carole Lombard. Some smart producer has evidently taken it into his head to make her one of these slickery, droopy-eyed vamps. And he is doing it right! Witness "White Woman" at the Mac.

Beautiful blond taken home by the king of the river, Charles Laughton, one of the screen's finest actors, and there a bunch of crooks who haven't seen a white woman in ten years nearly melt every time they see the girl.

It seems strange that a woman who is annoyed by the attentions of bothersome men should evidently take so much care with her hair, makeup, and—interesting clothing.

"The Chief" has the Bowery for its setting, and 1890 for its time. Not blundering into popularity is put up for alderman by political bosses. Opposition kidnaps his mother. Story changes abruptly into one of Ed Wynn's radio operas.

Some pretty good Wynn gags.

Former Student Holds Position on Magazine

New among the magazines in the periodical department at the library is a small publication called the Literary Monthly, published in Portland. The magazine itself is new, the December issue being its first.

Pat Merrick, ex-'32, is business manager of the publication, which contains in its first number short stories and book reviews contributed for the most part by staff members.

In the future the magazine intends to publish suitable works from outside contributors.

Jewelry at Depot

Mae West vogue left its traces at McArthur court Saturday night. Sparkling jewelry in the form of bracelets, brooches, shoe buckles, etc., were found after the affair. The articles may be called for at the University depot.

The other newly elected members were Professor Robert H. Seashore, E. G. Moll, Samuel H. Jameson, and Paul Washke.

Former Student Here Receives Recognition

Carl Westdahl Heilborn, former student here, again received high recognition when a sketch by him appeared in the November issue of the American Architect. Heilborn is remembered for his independence while a student here. He came primarily to learn architecture, which he did, disregarding "cut and dried" curricula which was of no interest to him. His sketches appear frequently in such periodicals as Pencil Points.
