

Meeting Called By Kerr Lacks Definite Action

Board Opinion to Settle Membership Plan

ACTION PLAN MADE

Representatives to Submit Ideas to Subcommittee of Higher Education Group

Nothing definite which would indicate a solution to the optional student body membership problem was accomplished at a meeting, called by Chancellor Kerr, which included Dean C. V. Boyer, president of the University; Dean George W. Peavy, president of Oregon State; Tom Tongue, president of the A. S. U. O.; Fred Salinger, president of the A. S. O. S. C.; Hugh Rosson, graduate manager of the University; Carl Lodell, graduate manager of Oregon State, and representatives of the group demanding optional membership.

The meeting was called to determine when reports could be made on the question to submit to a committee of the state board of higher education and to fix a time for the meeting of the committee. No definite business was carried on at the meeting.

Tom Tongue, president of the A. S. U. O., at a late hour last night stated that his understanding of the matter was that the report of the student body and that of Dick Neuberger and Jim Landye, who represent the students behind the movement will be submitted jointly to a subcommittee of the state board of higher education which will meet sometime this week.

This subcommittee will then make a recommendation to the board itself at its regular meeting next Monday. It is understood that the board will act at that time.

Extension Department Publishes News Sheet

The Extension Star, a four-page news sheet telling news of the Portland extension center, the correspondence department, and radio station KOAC, is a new feature of extension division work. The publication will probably be published monthly and the first issue will be out this week.

Wallace Wharton, who is on the editorial staff of the Oregon Journal, will use his class in journalistic writing at the Portland center as a means of gathering some of the news. Miss Mozelle Hair of the correspondence department said that the paper will be similar to the Summer Sun, published at the summer sessions on the University campus.

Sales Tax Discussed

Miss Carrie Marie Tinker of the Edison school spoke on and led the further discussion of the sales tax at the discussion group meeting of Phi Lambda Theta, women's education honorary last night in the men's lounge of Gerlinger hall.

Life of Roland Hayes Marked By Much Dramatic Contrast

Dramatic contrast will not be lacking when some day the biography of Roland Hayes, who sings in McArthur court Thursday evening, January 25, is written. The singer, whose name few in the world do not know, was not very many years ago a farmer lad in a poor section of Georgia. He was one of a large family on the meager holding of his widowed mother, born in slavery. The boy had to take turns with his brothers helping at home and going to school.

Roland Hayes still bears a scar on his arm, the mark of his days as moulder in a stove factory—one of the many jobs he took eagerly as means to a college education.

He sang at his work, according to the way of his race, and friends noticed his voice. But he had no conception of a singer's career, or the world of song, until by chance he heard some phonograph records of Eames and Caruso. "It was as if a bell rang in my heart," he says, describing that moment

Decorations, which are being made to correspond with the Russian theater idea, will be blazing with the bright colors of Imperial Russia.

The color scheme of the programs will be red, black, and gold, with a red suede leather cover. Tickets for the ball are now on sale at the Co-op, the College Side, and the various living organizations. The same low price of last year prevails, one dollar.

Very Fatal Germ Of Nosholacietis Loose at Condon

Have you seen two morbid-looking students going around clutching their shoes every now and then with their hands?

Have you seen them hopping around on one foot while attempting to pull the other shoe out of a mud puddle, perhaps mumbling under their breath words which were not, "Oh, dear, how inconvenient!"

Have you wondered if they were not perhaps mildly insane, or at least suffering from some strange malady?

Well, you were right! They have a serious attack of nosholacietis. Sad cases, my friends, but never let it be said that they were not loyal. They suffered for their alma mammy, and as a result of their heroism, four (count 'em, 4) little pencils at the reserve library in Condon hall have nice new shoelaces tying them to the counter, in order to prevent their appropriation by absent-minded (?) students.

The attendants at Condon are waiting their opportunity to pop out of a dark corner and snatch your shoelaces, so beware! The University must be served.

Thunemann Will Discuss Retailing

There are also Gertrude Winslow as the priestess and Milton Pillette as the high priest of the temple of Kongross.

The above players with those already named make a cast of nearly 30, but there are still places for a few characters.

Music Recital Presented By Students Pleases Critics

A program worth more than passing notice was presented by student musicians at the music auditorium last night. Two pianists, Harriet Moore and Frances Mackin; one soprano, Arlene Soasey; and one violinist, Ellen Dixon, were those who appeared.

Kathryn Mishler and Frances Brockman furnished piano accompaniments for the players. Miss Mishler was substituting for Helene Robinson, who was originally scheduled to assist Miss Soasey.

Because of Miss Robinson's absence, it was necessary for Arlene Soasey to cut her number of presentations in half, so that those given were Warren's "Children of the Moon," "In Luxembourg Gardens," by Manning, and "Sweet Song of Long Ago," by Charles.

Harriet Moore appeared first on the program, playing the first movement of Mozart's Sonata in C, major, "MacDowell's "A. D. 1620," and Loldini's "Marche Mignonne." She displayed considerable versatility in expression, and an adequate and firm technique.

Williams to Talk Tomorrow Night About Discovery

Newly Found 'Panto-thenic' Acid To Be Discussed by Oregon State Professor

The Committee on Free Intellectual Activities and Sigma Xi, national science honorary, are the joint sponsors of the lecture.

Annual Dinner of Lawyers Is Slated Tomorrow Night

Portland Attorney Will Discuss Admiralty Law as Topic At School Banquet

The annual law school banquet will be held tomorrow night at 6:15 at the Anchorage, with Erskine Wood as honored guest and principal speaker.

Wood, who is of the Portland law firm of Wood, Montague, Mathieson, and Rankin, will speak on "Admiralty Law." He is among the outstanding men in the Northwest in the field of admiralty law.

In his speech, Wood will present a type of law which is not taught at the University. This is in accordance with a law school custom of inviting as speakers men who are outstanding in a particular field, which cannot be obtained by law students in regular classroom work.

Members of the local bench and bar will be invited to the banquet, as well as law school faculty and students.

Jim Landye, third year law student, is in general charge of the banquet. He has announced that a turkey dinner will be served, and that cigars and cigarettes will be handed out by the faculty.

Art Clark is chairman of ticket sales. Tickets, which are 50 cents, can be obtained from Al Schneider, Bill Kinley, Dick Neal, Lyle Smith, Bob Thornton, Otto Vonderheist, Ed Schlessler, and Art Clark.

Co-op Gets New Rental Librarian

"We have ordered any number of new books," stated Mrs. Belknap when asked about the work.

In seeking the cooperation of the University, Mayor Elisha Large, of Eugene, appointed Tom Stoddard, assistant graduate manager; Virgil D. Sherwood Burr's 10-piece band will furnish the music. C. on the campus are also invited to attend in uniform.

Contrasts Made
Contrasting present and past days in more detail, he demonstrated by specific examples how at one time people were merely aware of broken homes, illicit love affairs, and the tragedies of both—how they seemed only outrageous flames of fortune. Present day children are subjected to these problems on every side, they are apparent in all phases of life.

"True love ending in true marriage is the very foundation of human society," Chaplain Beard repeated several times during the lecture. "True marriage is a physical, moral, legal, and spiritual unity for the purpose of erecting a home for the perpetuation of the race. Marriage is a sacrament, the outward symbol of an inner grace."

With a conviction that can be brought about only by direct contact with a great many people, Chaplain Beard stated that fortunately there still is a romance in love and marriage, a romance to

Speaker Says Romance Still Exists in Love

Chaplain Beard Opens Marriage Series

AUDIENCE IS LARGE

Marriage Institution Undergoes Change as Trial Wedding Grows, Pastor Shows

By PEGGY CHESSMAN
Using as his thesis the modern day tendency to question time-old standards, Chaplain John W. Beard, pastor of Mount Taber Presbyterian church of Portland, opened the series of four lectures on love and marriage at a crowded assembly held in Villard hall.

The present policy, he showed is to subject accepted institutions to the white light of analysis, to scorn them to a certain extent, and to institute new methods. Instead of beautiful poetry that has been the product of past ages, it is the policy now to write free verse, which Chaplain Beard calls the result of a mind not mature. In the place of the famous paintings created by the masters of old, present day artists give to the world a cubic art, unreal and lacking in the symmetry which has been a characteristic of art.

Change in Marriage
Instead of continuing the types of aristocracy and democracy that have governed the generations before us, we have originated a dictatorship.

Then, among the foremost of changes is that which has taken place in the institution of marriage, trial or companionate marriages gradually replacing the legal monogamous form.

"The whole institution of marriage, the obligations of both love and marriage," he emphasized, "are being questioned now more than ever before."

Effective Concert Presented By University Band Sunday

By J. A. NEWTON

The second division of the University band, which presented a concert Sunday in the Igloo, proved itself an able musical organization.

The group was handicapped by the lack of what little hangings have been heretofore used. The echoes were fantastic. Yet in spite of this, the renditions were enjoyable.

Credit for an effective presentation we feel is due John Stehn, director of the group. His shadings were many and varied, and chosen with good taste to match the moods of the music. While there were a few technical deficiencies noticeable amongst the players themselves, Stehn always had his group at the tip of his baton. He puts vigor into his directing—exactly what is necessary for effective band interpretation.

We will venture a few analytical remarks, and may the Lord have mercy on our soul. Favorable comments come first.

A couple of very small but well done clarinet solo passages were given by John Gribble.

The Marche and Cortège from "The Queen of Sheba" by Gounod, and the "One Beautiful Day Overture" by Hildreth, which were the first two numbers on the program, set the audience at ease. The first few rebounding notes made one wonder how soon the players would become confused. These two numbers showed that Stehn would not allow them to become confused, echoes notwithstanding.

"Hungarian Fantasia" presented more difficulties than the first two numbers, and the players appeared a bit uncertain. Yet taken as a whole it was very satisfactorily done.

It was in the fourth number, excerpts from "The Wizard of the Nile," by Victor Herbert, that one instrument, we believe an alto horn, appeared to be badly off key during the slow passages which comprised the middle half of the medley.

The concluding number was the "Coronation March" by Ellenberg, wherein the high standard established at the first of the program was again attained.

An encore was played, Sousa's "Thunder." It demonstrated the full capabilities of this second division of the band and left one eager to hear the first division, which is to play in about three weeks.
