

The Tip-Off

By BILL PHIPPS

Joker in the Deck for Tennis Dopesters; Egan On Walker Cup Team

WHEN Ellsworth Vines, the lanky California youth, who staged a meteoric rise to the top of the tennis world in 1932 and just as rapidly toppled from his place in the last summer, turned professional a yowl went up around these United States. The hullabaloo came from those pessimists who despite Vines' poor showing in 1933 were still convinced the success of the Davis Cup squad this year depended upon him.

Regardless of what some of the American followers of the net game think about the 1934 team, none other than Henri Cochet, the ace of the French tennis contingent, is of the opinion the Americans will not fare so badly. He bases his statements on the fact that the United States players will have an advantage this year because the matches will be played in England on grass courts, and because the Americans never lose the doubles anyway.

Cochet has it all figured out that Shields and Wood are about on a par with Austin and Perry on the grass and that with any kind of a break the singles should be divided evenly, leaving the Americans to continue their policy of taking the doubles.

That is figuring it out pretty well if the Americans and the British meet. The only joker to Cochet's diagnosis is that he has completely forgotten Australia. The boys from "down under" are likely to be the camouflaged wolf as far as the United States is concerned, so it will not be a complete shock if McGrath and Crawford bob up to knock over the Americans during the zone play.

H. Chandler Egan, the "grand old man" of amateur golf, this year joins the select rank of those few Oregonians who have ever participated for the United States on the Walker Cup team. Egan has for years been a successful orchardist living in Medford, although now he spends a good portion of his time in Del Monte, California.

Back in 1904-5 Eagan, then a young man, won the national amateur title. Since that time he has played golf steadily, and although winning many championships, he never approached top form again until he made a comeback during the last few years.

His inclusion on the Walker Cup roster this year is attributed directly to his sensational upset of Johnny Goodman, the open champion, in the first round of the national amateur at Kenwood.

It is no secret, however, that the selection of the 51-year-old Medford man is directly attributed to the desire of the czars of the U. S. G. A. to lend romance and drama to the historic competition of the links.

The British amateur titlist is Michael Scott, who himself has passed 55 summers, so the coming match play between Egan and Scott is a true natural. With this pair of veterans, who together represent more than a century of golfing, pitted against each other the Walker Cup play will be an epic—the most colorful event since Great Britain and the United States began sending competing teams across the Atlantic.

Fish Named Head Of Faculty Group

The Faculty club held its annual meeting Monday evening, at which three new directors, Ray P. Bowen, C. G. Howard, and Andrew Fish, were elected for the coming year. Following the annual meeting the board of directors met and elected Andrew Fish president of the club. Howard was re-elected secretary and Orville Lindstrom was elected treasurer.

It was voted to reduce the annual membership fees to $5 a calendar year, with the understanding that this reduction was to begin with the year 1934. The treasurer's report showed that the club is now entirely out of debt.

S. Stephenson Smith, who was the first president of the Faculty club of the University of Oregon, and who aided greatly in its organization and success, gave a brief address, and C. V. Boyer, president of the University, spoke to the group.

Huskies Practically Cinch Title as Idaho Downs Oregon State

Washington Margin and Cougar Jinx Favors Hec Edmundson's Five For California Playoff

By BILL AETZEL

Washington rests practically assured of representing the northern division in the coast conference playoff in California this year as a result of the upset win of the Idaho Vandals over Oregon State last evening at Corvallis by a score of 34 to 22. The Beavers won last night's game, 40 to 14.

The only remaining hope of the Orangemen to defend their 1933 title would be for the Huskies to lose their last four games, two of which are played with Oregon State this coming weekend. Washington winds up the season with Washington State in two games at Seattle, and a Cougar sweep of this series appears very unlikely since W. S. C. has never won a single game from the Purple and Gold at Seattle in 14 seasons of play.

The Orangemen, in turn, must win, in addition to the Washington series, the last two games of the season from the strong Oregon Webfoots.

Oregon Faces Test

Oregon takes to the road this week for a test of five games in six nights. The Webfoots meet Washington State in two games at Pullman Friday and Saturday, then journey to Moscow to play a return engagement with the Idaho outfit Monday and Tuesday nights. Wednesday they engage Gonzaga in a non-conference tilt.

Coach Reinhart's boys have evidenced in games to date that they are fully capable of sweeping the four games on the road. This would carry them well over the 500 mark. Although definitely out of the title race, a whirlwind finish would brand Oregon as a formidable contender for honors next year.

Should Oregon State prove herself by winning this week's games, the Huskies would still have the advantage with her only two remaining games to be played against the Cougars. The advantage lies in the fact that not once in 14 seasons has W. S. C. won a game from the Huskies at Seattle. The Orangemen, who must engage the Webfoots in the final series, can hope for no such pre-game security.

Webfoots Move Up

The Ducks pulled out of their slump to severely trounce the invading Idaho team in both of the two-game series, and rose from the cellar position to undisputed holder of third place in the standings, with four wins and six losses.

The Oregon five was never seriously threatened in either game, winning Friday night 43-29, and easily quelling the Vandals Saturday, 31-22. Both contests were very ragged with poor passing and numerous missed shots on both sides. The roughness of the game is evidenced by the 23 fouls committed in the first game, and 29 in the second struggle, an extreme number for northern division play. The Webfoots have now won two more games than they chalked up last season.

In a non-conference series at Seattle the Washington Huskies were embarrassed by Montana Friday night, losing 32-29. The Husky regulars did not prove much more effective than the shock troops when put into the fray at the opening of the second half. Gaining revenge for this upset, the Huskies came back Saturday night to smother the invaders, 60-24.

California Leads

After Southern California had pulled up on an even basis with California by winning the game at Los Angeles Friday night, 41-34, they once more gave up the lead to the Bears when the latter humbled the Trojans Saturday evening, 37-28.

Led by Englehard, flashy forward, the Bears were decidedly "on" in the second struggle, and the Trojans were at no time able to forge ahead. They drew up within three points of the Berkeley team on several occasions, however. The four-game series between these two teams was split as a result of the weekend games, but California is enjoying a clear conference lead over the Southern California quintet, which lost one game to Stanford.

The Bears have only games with Stanford and U. C. L. A. left, and barring a most decided upset, have

DeNeffe Five Takes Frosh Team, 44-39

Eberhart, Rubenstein Lead Clothiers

Duckling Play Slow After Fast Start; Rooks Series Slated For Weekend

The Oregon Ducklings stepped out of their class last night, taking on DeNeffe's independent team, and were humbled 44-39, in a rough-and-tumble melee. It was the first loss in five starts for Gene Shields' proteges.

The yearlings started the contest as if they might keep up their victory string. They ran up nine points in the first five minutes. Max Rubenstein, diminutive forward on the DeNeffe team, sank a long shot. Each team then alternated in scoring, until about five minutes before the end of the half, when the frosh led, 18-14.

Clothiers Forge Ahead

At this stage the Clothiers started to sink baskets from all angles, while holding the yearlings scoreless. Rubenstein made a short shot, and Jean Eberhart fired in two, and added a foul shot. The half ended at 19-18 in favor of the independents.

Under the impetus of the first-half rally the Clothiers ran the count up to 29. Then Harry Helmken rang up a short one on a rebound, and John Lewis, frosh forward, batted the ball in on a rebound. Immediately afterwards Arnold Faust dribbled half the length of the floor to sink a crible, bringing the score to 29-24 in favor of the DeNeffe team.

The Clothiers, however, drew equal to the occasion, and drew away from the losers on baskets by Eberhart, Don Siegmund, and Rubenstein. Towards the end of the tilt, Coach "Plunks" Reinhart of the independents sent in a number of substitutes, at which time the frosh made a number of scores. Every time the yearlings came within striking distance, however, baskets by Eberhart and Rubenstein put the Clothiers farther ahead. Roy Williamson of the frosh made the last basket of the game, just before the end.

Frosh Erratic

The frosh seemed somewhat lethargic last night, and after their first-minute spurt slowed down quite a bit. Sam Liebowitz, in particular, was off of his usual game, and found Jean Eberhart too much to handle. Helmken and Faust played excellent games and showed a great deal of improvement. Lewis, like Liebowitz, fell down somewhat on his shooting and guarding.

Jean Eberhart, University high mentor, led the scoring with 16 counters. His one-handed flip shots and his effective checking were outstanding features of the game. Close behind was Max Rubenstein, who scored 14 points. Williamson, with 12 points, led the frosh.

Rook Tilts Next

Although the yearlings lost tonight's game, it gave them some much needed competition, and they should be fully prepared for the Rook series Friday and Saturday nights.
