Hamas in Line to Grab Max Baer's Spot; New Lightweight Champ Due

THE pounding gloves of young Steve Hamas, who before going into the professional fight racket was an athlete of the highest order at Penn State, have changed the complexion of the setup in the heavyweight division. The dead game Max Schmeling passes from the picture. The black Uhlan, trying for a comeback to regain his right to fight for the world's championship, took a neat pummeling from the rising youngster the other night.

If Maxie Baer continues his practice of developing footwork on the vaudeville stage, taking his roadwork a la Maxie Rosenbloom in the night spots on Broadway and polishing his fighting (or clinches, as the case might be) with the fair damsels who grace the silver screen, it is likely that Steve may go ahead until he will be the logical challenger to attempt to bring the division crown back from Mussolini's strong box. That is, assuming that "de Pream" manages to hold his own against the clever jabbing of Tom Loughran when they meet at Miami the end of this month.

This Hamas lad may go a long way in lifting the heavyweight fight game out of the doldrums. For too long the scum has been settling over the stagnant waters of the division, and the better it will be for all concerned when some new blood is injected into the ranks.

Baer had a perfect setting to put the prize ring in good standing with the public. He had color—he was reckless, a youngster with plenty of fire, a fighter with punch. The fans loved it. They, and even some of the hard-shelled critics, compared him with Dempsey. He had all the needed sparkle, and then he went upstage.

Unless he gets his feet back on the resin right away he won't have any more following than the proverbial corporal's guard, and Mr. Fan will continue to take it on the chin and pay through the nose until someone comes along who can fight and will fight. Hamas may turn the trick later and Loughran, who is an old man as fighters go, may help the situation although he hasn't the "killer" characteristics that draw the spectators out of their seats.

While on the boxing subject, Maxie Rosenbloom, who still by the grace of something-or-other reigns king of the lightweight, is about ready to fall. For years he has done his training in cabarets and by some miracle he still was able to slap his opponents often enough to keep his crown. But one of these bright days a youngster will plant a banana peel and the aged slapper will fall from his perch.

In his last title defense Joe Knight almost turned the trick. One judge voted for Knight; the other called it a draw. Then the referee saved Maxie his title by casting his ballot for a draw. But even though Maxie still had his crown, no one saw him as the winner.

A new champion is due in the light-heavyweight ranks.

Speaking of Joe Knight brings up the old southpaw question. Joe is one of the few who swing from the portside who ever get to the top. If he gives Maxie a drubbing in a title bout he will become the seventh left-hander to rule a division since the Marquis of Queensbury rules became the vogue.

Not since gloves have been used in the prize ring has a southpaw been at the top of the heavyweight heap. About a century ago a left-handed scrapper by the name of William Thompson won the championship of England, which at that time meant a world's title.

Young Corbett and Lou Broilard, both southpaws, were kings of the welters, though the reigns of both were short lived. Broil-

Oregon Hoop Fives Invade Washington

Husky Defeat of Beavers Will End Title Race

Bears Hope to Tighten Grasp On Lead in Southern Division Meets

Basketball squads of the University of Oregon and Oregon State college will invade the state of Washington this weekend to play games that should indicate what the positions of the teams will be when the northern division race ends March 3.

If the Washington Huskies can turn back the invading Beavers, the division gonfalon will wave in the breezes from Lake Washington this year. If Oregon State repeats the double victory scored over the Huskies at Corvallis, Washington must win two straight from the cellarite Cougars.

These Cougars will meet the Oregon Webfoots at Pullman Friday and Saturday. The contest stands one game each for the series played in Eugene between these teams. If Oregon drops one of these games, even the "mathematical possibility" of a first place tie will pass into the limbo. This so-called possibility is not seriously considered by many in doping first place, although as long as it exists, the loser of the Beaver-Husky series must face the possibility of Oregon taking second.

In the southern division of the conference, the division heading Bears meet their far southern brothers—both geographically and in standings—the Uclans at Los Angeles while Southern California will attempt to stay in the race by taking the third place Stanford Cards at Palo Alto. The race in the south is close with California holding six wins, the Trojans five and Stanford four wins out of eight games each team has played. U. C. L. A. is out of the picture with only one victory so far.

The games this weekend will probably result in California coming out with a strengthened grasp on first place, since the Bears should down the Bruins and the Trojans and Cards will not do any good to each other in their series.

At the present time it appears that neither of the divisional leaders who met for the conference title at Corvallis last year will repeat, although both of them, Oregon State and Southern California, are rated the team to win if Washington and California should go into a totally unlooked-for tailspin.

Mrs. Landros Is Banquet Speaker

Seven new and many older members of Pi Sigma, Latin honorary, heard Mrs. Edna Landros, assistant professor of Latin and Greek, speak on "When the Greeks Laughed," at the banquet held at the Anchorage last night following initiation into the honorary.

Mrs. Landros discussed the Greeks' sense of humor, giving illustrations through translations of Greek epigrams, both prose and verse.

Those who were initiated into Pi Sigma yesterday were A. J. Matthews, instructor in romance languages, Calista de la Fontaine, Helen Emery, Laura Goldsmith, Marjorie McNiece, Margaret Rugh, and Robert Volker.

Dr. J. E. Fontainerose, who came to the University at the first of the term as assistant Greek professor, was in charge of initiation. Dr. Fontainerose is a member of the original Pi Sigma chapter, in the University of California.

Jard also held the middleweight championship.

Freddie Miller, who since the decline of Kid Chocolate, is generally regarded as the best of the world's featherweights, is one.

The other three were all middleweights. The "old Deacon," Tiger Flowers, Johnny Wilson and Al McCoy cast their sleepers from the left side.

Handball Proves Popular Activity In Winter Term

Courts Are So Much in Demand Athletes Forced to Make Daily Reservations

Not only during this week's lull in donut sport competition but all through the year and especially during the winter term the handball courts next to the men's gym are constantly in use.

Campus athletes never seem to tire of this sport for their daily workout and the twelve courts are kept so busy that it is necessary to keep a schedule sheet where arrangements for reserving courts must be made before any games can be played.

In order to allow more men use of the courts each afternoon from the hour of 3 on is divided into 40-minute periods and players reserve a special court for one of these periods.

Certain hours of the day are of course reserved for classes or for matches during tournament play. The courts have all been repaired and repainted recently by CWA workers under the direction of Superintendent of Buildings Lewis and are in excellent shape.

OSC Team Makes 3 Wins, 2 Losses In Week's Meets

Rifle Squad Defeats Kentucky U. And Presbyterian College; Michigan Defaults

The Oregon State rifle team, which will compete with the University marksmen next week, made three wins and two losses during its last week's competition.

It defeated Kentucky university and Presbyterian college and won by default from Michigan M. and T. Losses were suffered from Montana State college and Alabama college.

Larry Gentner, freshman in forestry, was the high scorer on the state college squad, having scored 375 points.

None of the above teams have entered into competition with the University of Oregon men as yet, however Oregon's high point man, Horace Neely, made eight points more in last week's matches than did Gentner, the pride of the state college.

Riflemen Lose to Missouri in Meet

One loss to Missouri by 18 points and a very decided win from North Dakota are the only reports yet received, telling the results of the five-way marksmanship contest staged last week, in which the Oregon rifle team participated.

The University team, composed of 15 men, was led by Horace Neely, who scored 383 points, breaking the all-campus record and coming within 10 points of the world's record.

Reports from the other teams are expected before the end of the week.

New Concrete Track Replaces Wooden One

Work on the University track was completed today, winding up the second CWA project to be done on this campus.

The project was painting the interior of the Journalism building.

Twenty-five men have been engaged for the past three weeks running a concrete sill, replacing the old wooden one, completely around the track on both sides.

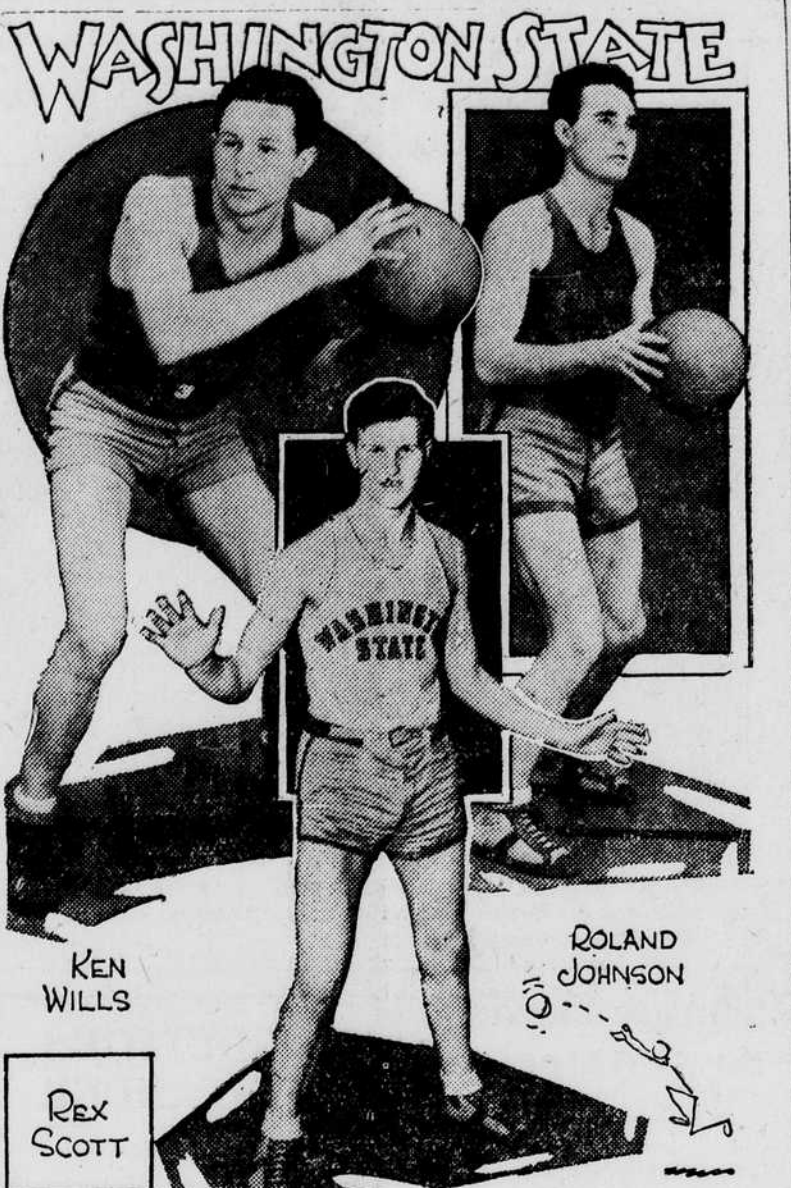

The new concrete sill was placed after the track had been measured, to insure accuracy of records made.

Other work being carried on under this project includes fixing gutters and broken seats in the grandstand.

Women Debaters Talk
Members of the women's debate team spoke at a Parent-Teacher association meeting at Scio Tuesday night, on the subject of educational reorganization. Speakers were Marguerite Sundstrup, Betty Bentley, and Eula Loomis. A group of students from Westminster house presented two plays, musical numbers, and Russian dances.

Liljeqvist to Tell How to Advertise

Cynthia Liljeqvist will speak before the Ad club, a group of Eugene advertisers, today at its weekly luncheon. The subject of the talk will be the "College Girls' Reaction to Advertisements and Selling."

Miss Liljeqvist has taken a cross section of Oregon Coeds' opinion on their reactions to window displays, the methods of sales women in inducing the college girl to buy, and newspaper advertisements.

OSC Pi Mu Epsilon Will Be at Meeting

Oregon State college members of Pi Mu Epsilon, national mathematics honorary, will attend tonight's meeting at 8 o'clock in room 206 in Deady hall.

Papers will be read by A. F. Moursund, instructor in mathematics in the University on "The Introduction to Summation," and John Caswell on "Maxwell Equations."

Under the present organization of the honorary, offices are maintained on both the Oregon State and the Oregon campuses. John Merryman of Oregon State is director of the fraternity, while Eileen Hickson and Aleta Kienzle of the Oregon campus are vice-director and secretary, respectively.

WEDDING DRESS OF 1784 WINS PRIZE AS OLDEST

George Hopkins was bride; Paul Lafferty, groom; Althea Peterson, maid of honor; Bob Zurecher, best man.

Bridesmaids were Peggy Carper, Adele Sheehy, Betty Curtis, Charlotte Ollitt, Roberta Moody, Betty Graham. George Birnie, Bob Hollivell, Mark Corey, Jerry Denslow, Jimmy Judd, and Bill Davis acted as ushers.

The prize for the oldest wedding dress modeled in the "Wedding Belles" parade, in which 60 women took part, was awarded to Barbara Webb, who modeled a dress first worn in 1784 by her great-grandmother.

Golden wedding couples were guests of honor for the evening, and a prize for the couple who was married the longest number of years was awarded to Rev. and Mrs. Henry Meyer, who have been married for 67 years.

Other features on the program included vocal numbers by Ferschel Scott, Mrs. Donald Young, Mrs. Buford Roach, and music by a string quartet composed of Josephine Chapman, Peggy Sweet-

Track Candidates Of Varsity, Frosh Teams Vie Today

Larger Number of Rivals Enter Competition; Events Will Commence at 3:30

Both varsity and freshmen track candidates will compete in the track tryouts to be held at Hayward field today at 3:30 p. m. Bill Hayward, track coach, said last night that the number of entries would be greater than the first two tryouts held on the past two Fridays.

Hayward said that he expected that most of the shorter races would have to be run off in heats. The events to be held include:
Varsity events: 85-yard dash, 350-yard event.
Freshmen events: 85-yard dash, 300-yard event, discus throw and shot put.

Beaver Matmen And Boxers Mix

Oregon State matmen and fighters are mixing it tonight in the finals of an all-school wrestling and boxing tournament held in the men's gym at Corvallis.

Winners of the various weight classes are scheduled to be selected to represent the Beavers when they journey to the University campus next Friday to meet Webfoot athletes in a smoker to be held in McArthur court under the sponsorship of the Order of the O.

Representatives of the University will be determined following the combined donut and all-campus tournament the first of next week.

Among the Webfoot wrestlers already conceded as likely to appear on the program are Ray Clapp, Tom Mountain, and Chuck Johnson. Others of the newer members working out daily who are showing up well are Hahn and Bob Ludington.

The advisory board of the Y. W. C. A., who sponsored the pageant, wishes to extend its thanks to the Eugene Register-Guard, Morning News, and the Emerald for space devoted for publicity; to McMorgan and Washburne's for the programs; to the University florists for palms; and to Lester McDonald of the College flower shop for designing and furnishing the wedding bouquets.

All proceeds from the pageant are to go for work carried on by the campus Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Herschel Scott acted as general chairman for the event.

Frosh, Rooks to Vie Tonight in Igloo for Third Tilt of Series

Contest Will Begin at 7:30; Williamson Lewis, Helmken, Liebowitz, Faust Starting Duckling Lineup

Basketball fireworks are set to pop tonight when the yearling hoop teams of Oregon and O. S. C. clash at the Igloo. The game will start at 7:30. The rooks are confident of taking the frosh contingent's scalp back to Corvallis.

Gene Shields' proteges have different plans, however. Reports filtering out from the Igloo say that the entire squad has been getting the benefit of hard practice, and the Ducklings are pointing for the Corvallis babes.

For the first time this season the starting lineup has been practically decided on. Roy Williamson, high-scoring hooper from Seattle, will open at one forward. Williamson rarely fails to get under 10 points, but fell down somewhat in the last rook tilt. He will be after revenge tonight, and has a good chance of obtaining it.

John Lewis, the other forward, has not done so much scoring as Williamson, but has been somewhat more dependable. He and Williamson led the frosh attack against DeNeffe's.

Harry Helmken now has a strangle hold on the center post. At the beginning of the season, Joe Murray held down the position, but Helmken has come along fast lately, and is more of a scoring threat. Murray will probably get into the game at some stage, however, as his height gives the frosh team an advantage.

Liebowitz Dependable
Sam Liebowitz, like "ol' man river," has rolled through the whole season at guard. He experienced a setback Tuesday night against DeNeffe's, when he pitched against Jean Eberhart, ex-Webfoot captain. With his finished floorwork and smooth playing, however, he figures to be a valuable asset to the Ducklings tonight.

Arnold Faust, the other guard, has come out of his scoring slump, and will start the game. He is smaller than the other members of the first team, but is fast.

Dale Hardisty, forward, and Roy Northam, guard, may get into the game. "Red" Rotenberg, guard, has an outside chance of breaking in.

Rooks Improve
The rooks have an impressive string of victories since the last frosh game. After defeating the Ducklings at Corvallis, the rooks went on to crush Corvallis high, Salem high, and the Multnomah club intermediates. The play of the Corvallis babes is much smoother, and this will probably give them the edge in tonight's game.

A new star has risen on the rook horizon, with the addition of Kappel. He has been the scoring sensation of the Beaverlings lately, and will pair with Art Merryman at forwards. Duke Wellington, famous for his "Roy Regels" faux pas in the first frosh game, will open at center. Hub Tuttle

McKittrick Gets Degree In Corvallis Saturday

Ernest M. McKittrick, graduate assistant to Dr. Warren D. Smith of the Geology department, appeared before the examining board for his master's degree Saturday in Corvallis.

McKittrick passed a very fine examination, according to Dr. Smith.

He will remain at the University as assistant in geology at least until summer.

Dr. Smith and McKittrick will take their classes into the field in the region of Jasper Saturday and Sunday. Jasper, up the middle fork of the Willamette, is a sedimentary section, interesting for its fossil leaves, according to Dr. Smith.
