Sports Calendar Full For This Week; Duck Ball Club Looks Good

With the track season opening up officially this coming Saturday, the first baseball game with Oregon State booked for the week-end, and the student body elections slated for Thursday, the campus will be in for a full week of sports activity.

Colonel Hayward is going to have his hands full figuring his winners in eight events. Four men in each event would take 32 runners if each man ran only in one race. Some of the veterans will be slated for two races, and if they are in too fine fettle will be work horses for possibly three races.

In the relays with Oregon State two years ago three records were broken by the Oregon runners, three men taking part in the breaking of all three records. That was when those glorious competitors John Marrs, Art Holman and Paul Starr were tearing up the cinders on Hayward field. Some of Bill's runners have the ability to match that performance, but it still remains to be seen if they have that same competitive spirit.

The baseball fans who follow the Oregon team will have a chance to have their eyes opened when they see the Oregon infield sparkle under real conference competition. There is something there. It is the best infield, or looks to be in pre-season performance, Oregon has had in years.

I have yet to see Harry McCall with his shirt tail in. He jaunts out toward the first base sack with his legs and arms setting their own pace independent of that shirt tail. But how that right fin laps up the baseballs when he is holding down first base. He is a southpaw and stands out there in his section in his disjointed, unconcerned manner carrying on a continual chatter in his lazy drawl.

In the game with Linfield last Saturday he stood non-commitally looking on while Ossie Edwards sent the last strike past a Linfield batter who whiffled so hard that the bat flew directly to Mark De-Launey on third base. McCall watched DeLauney doing a dance to dodge the bat, picked up a handful of dust, blew it out, and drawled "Nice stawp, Marcus."

Joe Gordon runs around in the short stop position in an alarming manner. He's a ball player. He takes it easy in his garden until the crack of a bat tells him that one is coming his way-then he is after it and makes the hard ones look easy. A lot of thos low, hard balls that should be hit are going to run into double play if Gordon keeps up the pace he

Ray Koch plays much the sam type of ball that Gordon does, tak ing it easy with possibly just a bi more chatter. He is not skipping all over the infield, but seems t sense where the ball is going b the crack of the bat and is ther waiting to welcome it and whip it to a base like a bullet. Bot Koch and Gordon waft a wicke willow, and have that home ru punch in the pinches.

DeLauney on third has the ho test corner of all. He is not quite so sure of himself as Gordon and Thuneman, 1b Koch, but he looks mighty nice on Buch those sizzling ground balls tha get so many men to first.
