Russia's Success In Five-Year Plan Explained by Talk

Lecture Based on Observations Made of Industry, Culture During Travels

The success of the Russian five-year plan and the part played by the women and children in the development of a great industrial system in Russia were stressed in a speech made last night in Villard hall by John E. Snider of Berkeley, representative of the Friends of the Soviet Union.

Snider's lecture was entitled "Mother, Child, and Youth Life in the Planned Economy in the Soviet Union," and was based on observations on Russian industry and culture made when the lecturer travelled through the Union in 1931, making a complete tour of the factories and schools developed through the five-year plan.

Women are acting in the capacities of policemen, street sweepers, and street car conductors, he said, taking the same part they have played in the progress of old Europe, with the addition of science.

Workers in Russian factories at the completion of half the time allotted the five-year plan were anxious to show Snider the unexpected results of their efforts, the unanticipated success in such fields as agriculture, electricity, and oil, as he travelled in Russia.

Around the lecture room and upon the stage in the Villard as-

Biography of Leaders Contains Life of U'Ren

"Upbuilders," Lincoln Steffens' biography of recent leaders, contains a chapter devoted to the life of William Simon U'Ren, father of direct legislation, who spoke last night at the Anchorage at a dinner given by The Score, University of Oregon Liberals' club.

The book is on display at the circulation desk of the old libe-

Mill Race Becomes Scene of Action as Work is Rushed

With the Canoe Fete but two days off, the work of building floats, decorating the stage and the queen's throne, and constructing the archway across the mill-race are all being rushed so that everything will be in readiness by Saturday afternoon. Judging from the elaborate floats now under construction above the Anchorage, this year's fete will be on of the finest, according to George Schenk, chairman.

The fete this year is entitled "Where Rolls the Oregon," and will be in keeping with the 75th anniversary of the state. The floats will each depict some phase of pioneer life or events, the programs, designed by Frances Heifrich, sophomore in art, will show an Indian and an aviator, typifying the old and the new, with their arms outstretched towards a cornucopia—typifying the fertility and opportunity of the state. The decorations in front of the grandstands will all be in the atmosphere of the early days of the state.

The archway across the mill-race will be decorated to represent a log blockhouse, and it is planned that as soon as the queen's barge appears, the orchestra will begin to play "Land of the Empire Builders." Ralph Schomp, varsity track star, will be master of ceremonies, and will unroll the pages of history as each float appears. He will be garbed in an appropriate costume, with a fur cap, and typical trapper's outfit.

A string of large, colored lights will be strung along the bottom of the race, and will add a colorful and unique effect to the whole proceedings. A telephone system is being installed from the chairman's stage so that each of the eleven floats participating in the fete may be started at the right moment. A public address system of loud-speakers also will be used, and every section of the grandstands will thus be enabled to hear all of the program. A special feature of the fete will be the appearance of the Eugene Gleemen, noted men's glee club. George Bishop and Don Eva, club students in the University school of

Governmental Trends Shown By U'Ren Talk

Speaker Praises Young Political Groups

FLAWS POINTED OUT

Modern Ruling Devices Explained In Address Sponsored by Local Liberal Group

Every man who is willing to work must "own a job." So William S. U'Ren, practical politician and originator of the Oregon system of direct legislation, declared last night at a dinner given in his honor at the Anchorage by Score, campus liberals' club.

"You must rebuild and reorganize this government of the people and by the people for economic justice for the common man," U'Ren said. "Your government is not, and can not be a success so long as one citizen who is willing to work does not enjoy all the creature comforts, material well-being, and all the opportunities for the highest mental and spiritual development."

While he criticized the initiative and referendum, his own "brain children," U'Ren pointed out that they were intended as tools to build a system rather than a system in themselves. Showing how the direct primary law has failed to fulfill the purposes of its authors, he described a proposed amendment which would mend its flaws.

U'Ren Expresses Delight

The main topic of U'Ren's talk was "Signs of Progress." The signs he indicated ranged from enacted and proposed laws to trends in social thought. He began by expressing his delight at the "growing independence of the faculties and individual professors in our institutions of higher learning." He also praised such organizations as Score, as well as the Young Republican and Young Democratic club movement.

Other forward steps he spoke of briefly included the constitutional amendment to be voted on

Doctor Talks to Group at Osburn On Clinic Results

80 Handicapped Children Treated By Project; Seven Returned To Normal Condition

Dr. H. H. Dixon, head of the psychiatric department in the medical school, spoke yesterday noon at the Osburn hotel before a group of townspersons interested in his work with the handicapped child and the clinic.

This group has been helping Dr. Dixon in his work with the handicapped children and hopes that the project may soon become a part of the state program. A bill is at present awaiting action by the legislature to establish state-wide traveling clinics to take care of more of these children and to correct their troubles so that they may continue with their normal education.

The children Dr. Dixon and two of his helpers have been working with are emotional, word blind, and environmental cases. In his special clinic or developing room as it is called Dr. Dixon has an instructor teaching four systems rather than the single one found in public schools. By this means the intelli-

Orient Policies Clash; France And America Take Same View

Note: This analysis of the present situation in the Far East was prepared Tuesday by Harold J. Noble, associate professor of history and authority on contemporary world problems, in an exclusive Emerald interview.

The recent Japanese declaration of their intention to supervise the foreign relations of China, and of their primary concern in maintaining the peace in Eastern Asia, is merely the culmination of a policy which has been developing for the past 60 years. It is one aiming at dominance and monopoly. This Japanese policy is diametrically opposed to an American policy which has been developing for a somewhat longer period, namely, assistance to Asiatic nations in the preservation of their independence, and in the maintenance of the principle of equal opportunity for the trade of all nations in the orient, especially in China.

In 1915 the Japanese attempt to gain control over China in large measure was checked by action of the United States. Again, in 1921-22 the United States acted to end Japanese occupation of eastern Siberia. In each case the Japanese changed their policies for a period of years.

Probably the Japanese chose this particular time for proclamation of their sweeping claims because of a combination of factors, including the depression, the impasse in Franco-German relations and the withdrawal of the American fleet to the Atlantic, where it is to remain for six months. Having made their declaration and not having retracted it in any significant respect, the Japanese can now wait a considerable time before acting upon it, in the meanwhile allowing the world to understand that its policy has been definitely fixed.
