COLONIAL — "The Black Cat" with Bela Lugosi, Boris Karloff, David Manners, Jacqueline Wells.

McDONALD — "The House of Rothschild" with George Arliss, Loretta Young, Robert Young, and Helen Westley.

By MARIAN JOHNSON
FOLLOWERS of George Arliss should find the current offering at the McDonald theater the most completely satisfying and perfect picture they have seen since "Disraeli." The story concerns the history of the House of Rothschild from its humble beginning in Jew Street, Frankfurt, long before Napoleon upset the map of Europe, until the gala day when Nathan Rothschild is made a baron by the English court. The story contains many thrilling episodes all leading up to the exciting moment when Arliss promises to support the bankrupt Allies against Napoleon and thereby brings everlasting glory to the House of Rothschild, and dignity and peace to his long suffering people.

A gentle homeliness and a delightful humor are woven into the story, which add to its effectiveness. Arliss' performance is fine, as is that of Helen Westley, who plays the dowager Rothschild. It is not without love interest, however, in the charming personage of Loretta Young, who plays the daughter of Nathan Rothschild, and who falls in love with Robert Young, an English nobleman. It is the old story of the love of a Gentile for a Jewess.

Again Boris Karloff brings a seemingly impossible and certainly highly improbable mystery before "his public," and almost makes them believe that his story could take place. Spiced with gun play, long galleries of mummified maidens, and inky black cats the plot moves rapidly, and not without an occasional reference to the supernatural. In fact the thrills become almost gruesome as Bela Lugosi proceeds to skin Mr. Karloff alive in the final scene.

MIKROFUN

 you can play it, or someone else will.

The idea is to make the whole thing informal. The kids should want to get into it just for the fun and kick they get out of it. And it surely would be a memorable experience for a lot of us. Many local boys and girls make good, but we don't know good what. This should be a good outlet.

From Held Last Night

Pioneer cabins, covered wagons, buffalo, and even Indians—all realistically portrayed on canvas—formed the historical background for the Junior Prom held in McArthur court last night. A canopy of vari-colored bands served as a ceiling, and the entire scene was illuminated by chandeliers at either end.

A special section of the balcony was arranged for the mothers, from which they could witness all the events taking place on the main floor.

Side drapes formed a gay background, and stripes of a softer hue were used as a setting for Queen Josephine's throne, and the orchestra stage.

Every detail of the dance was in accord with the general idea of the entire weekend, a commemoration of the 75th anniversary of Oregon.

Dinner Scheduled

Sunday all sororities and fraternities will entertain with informal dinner at noon in honor of the "Oregon Mothers."

Tonight after the Canoe Fete, members of Alpha Tau Omega will hold a "smoker."

Mr. Smith is a member of Alpha Tau Omega.
