BETTER TRADE

High Mark of Business Since April, 1931

POLITICIANS OPTIMISTIC

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Statistical indications of improving business were joined today by a new call upon President Roosevelt to issue a statement of new deal objectives in furtherance of the move for effective cooperation between business leaders and the administration.

C. L. Bards, president of the national association of manufacturers, issued a statement asserting that business "must have more definite ideas as to the direction in which the government is headed."

The government, he said, "must project a course that can actually be followed."

Highest Total Since April

From the commerce department, meanwhile, came a report that American export business for October reached its highest total since April 1931. The figure was $206,352,000 as compared with imports of $129,629,000, producing a $76,723,000 balance of trade in favor of the United States.

At Warm Springs, coincidentally, two senate leaders, Robinson of Arkansas and Harrison of Mississippi, told President Roosevelt that the economic situation was showing definite signs of improvement. Rudolph S. Hecht, president of the American bankers association, carried a similar message to the chief executive.

Sloan Speaks

A prominent figure in the manufacturing world, George A. Sloan, president of the cotton-textile institute, speaking at Nashville, called for a concentration upon stirring up activity in the consumer goods industries, as a means of improving the situation in the durable goods field, which he termed the key to recovery.

At the same time, Senator LaFollette expressed in New Orleans an opinion that a continuation of relief appropriations will be essential "until the nation is able to recover its economic health under its own strength."

Roosevelt Questioned

Bards' statement recalled the action of the chamber of commerce of the United States in asking President Roosevelt to answer a six-point questionnaire covering his policies for the future. The chief executive made no reply.

Bards' appeal was made with the stated purpose of providing a basis for an adequately planned cooperation to be developed at a "congress of American industry" scheduled for December 5 in New York under the auspices of his organization. The meeting, to be attended by prominent industrialists, is directed at the formulation of "a platform for American industry."

WESTMINSTER MEETING

The officers conference of the Westminster association will be held Saturday, December 1 at 8 p. m. at the home of Helen Evans, 1127 Ferry street.

It was formerly planned to hold the meeting Wednesday evening but the date has been postponed due to the Thanksgiving holidays. Any members of the organization other than officers are invited to attend, according to Helen Evans, conference chairman for the group. Those planning to come are asked to sign up for the conference at Westminster house by Saturday noon.

WORK OF GEOLOGISTS ON OREGON MAP

Geology students under the direction of Dr. Warren Duper Smith, head of the geology department, are at work this week on a mineralogical map of the state of Oregon. The map is being prepared for study by the regional planning council of the SERA which meets in Seattle during December under the leadership of Marshall N. Dana of Portland.

The map, according to Dr. Smith will be used to determine possibilities for future SERA work in the state. "While provisional in character the map will be the first step in an inventory of the state's mineralogical resources," Dr. Smith said. "Development under the SERA cannot be planned without proper inventory first. It will probably affect present government projects in Oregon and open up new ones."

Withdrawal From Saar Territory

LESS TENSE SITUATION

By Melvin K. Whiteleather Associated Press Foreign Staff

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Territory, Nov. 26—(AP)—France, it was stated tonight in informed quarters, has virtually withdrawn from the Saar plebiscite fight, making a large Nazi victory probable in January.

Foreign Minister Pierre Laval and Chancellor Hitler, said an unconfirmed report, have reached an understanding under which France agrees not to press the anti-Nazi cause and to talk no more about sending the French army into the Saar.

In return, according to this report, the Nazis have agreed to negotiate a financial settlement for the Saar mines as soon as possible.

Laval, it was said, has indicated both to Berlin authorities and to anti-Nazis in the Saar that he is unwilling to continue the battle in favor of a status quo, which would leave the Saar under league of nations jurisdiction. The fight for this was waged by his predecessor, the late Louis Barthou.

Barthou was the mouthpiece for anti-Nazis at Geneva in their effort to obtain if possible a district or two for France and prevent Hitler from obtaining an overwhelming majority in the plebiscite.

Laval, more interested in settling the financial problems now being discussed at home, was not expected to give his active support to a request of the anti-Nazis that the league council grant the right to hold a second plebiscite "after Hitler is gone" should the Saar vote in January to continue indefinitely under the league.

Saarites, the anti-Nazis say, wish to rejoin the fatherland some day, but many who would vote no on league control now would vote yes if they knew they would get another chance to vote later.

The anti-Nazis also seek a clear definition of what a continuation of league government would mean.

Socialists, communists and dissident Catholics privately admit a change in the French attitude, but express the hope that Saarites going to Germany for the Christmas holidays will return so impressed with the Hitler regime that they will vote against joining the Reich.

Max Braun, leader of the German liberty front in the Saar, said today in his newspaper:

"Of course the second plebiscite will be held." Braun has protested from the first against any plebiscite being held. He is leader of the Socialist faction among the Germans in the Saar.

It was rumored a stiff fight was progressing in the French cabinet over Foreign Minister Laval's attitude toward the Saar. Edouard Herriot, leader of the National Socialists, was said to be opposing Laval and urging him to continue Barthou's firm policy.
