General opinion in the capitol was that the move represented the most sweeping effort in the country's history to provide against the "hazards" of life.

Stehn Demolishes Furniture When Band Chairs Collapse When the chair which, theoretically, is supposed to hold a band musician off the floor, collapses in that mesmeric hush while the baton is poised in mid-air, it's funny—but when two musicians hit the floor within 30 seconds of each other amid the wreckage of erstwhile chairs, it's a riot! That is, unless it's the culmination of six years' stehning talking.

Audience Acclaims Campus Premiere of "The Amazons"

Acclaiming it as one of the most entertaining plays ever to be staged on the campus, the large audience which attended the first performance of "The Amazons" at the Guild theater last night was enthusiastic in its praise of the production.

Getting the audience into the light, sparkling mood of the play, the minute they stepped on the stage, Dorothy Parks as the eccentric Lady Castlejorden and Horace Robinson as the well-meaning old family retainer, gave outstanding performances.

Not a little enjoyment was provided by Rud Winstead as the aristocratic little Lord Tweenways, who always managed to keep his composure in any circumstance and who could not forget for a minute that "we never do" such things.

Stalin 'Deal' Brings Death During 1932, 1933

A balance sheet showing the loss of lives and the suffering of humanity in Soviet Russia against the gains of industry, during her period of violent change in the drive toward the goals of greater industrialization and collectivization, would show the cost far greater than the gains, was the opinion expressed by William Henry Chamberlin, in his address in Gerlinger hall Thursday.
