Third Beaver Battle
Looms Ahead of Ducks
In Corvallis Saturday

By Ned Simpson

It looks as if the Baevors were on their way to a second north-west basketball championship in three years. That is, of course, unless the Webfeet manage to win the next two games with them, and they don't succumb to Idaho and Washington State when they journey up around the northern reaches of the league. As it is now, they have six more games to play and all will be tough ones to win.

Saturday night when they run into the Ducks, for the third time this year, it will be like running into a bunch of wild-cats in a telephone booth, for the Webfeet are determined to win. Of course, if the Beavos get as hot as they did in the first game it may mean that the battling Ducks will take another on the chin—but it won't be by any 47-18 score. If the Orange crew play the kind of ball they did Monday night against Idaho, however, it is entirely safe to predict that they will be on the short end of the count when the final gun booms.

Predicting anything like the above is usually the same thing as committing suicide, for the fact is well known around these parts that when a Duck and a Beaver clash they are both usually in the finest of fettle—all pepped up, in fact. Therefore, amending the prior statement, we'll leave all score forecasting to the boys who smoke Philip Morris.

Getting back to the Idaho-Beaver game of Monday night, the Orangemen looked about as ragged as any ball team we've seen this year—including our own Ducks the first half last Friday night. They repeatedly threw the ball away, took long shots that either went over the back board or missed it altogether, and fouled everybody from the referees to the waterboys. Mose Lyman, the Missionary man on either team who had "his eye," and he scored all but four of the Beavers' 15 points the first half. Candidly, last night he looked three times as rough as "Red" McDonald ever did, and it ought to be quite a battle when he and Buddington Jones, our own rough-tough tornado of the maple, meet again.

Dance Bands

Seattle's Club Victor this month to play a return engagement at the Catalina Casino, to be followed up, as we have mentioned before, by both Ben Bernie and Jan Garber during the summer months. Ted Fio-Rito will be returning to the Coconut Grove in L. A. the later part of the summer season after playing various dates in the East and Mid-west, with Guy Lombardo and Henry Busse filling in, during the interim. Bernice Claire, stage and screen star who hails from the coast, and whose last film appearance was in "No, No, Nanette," has signed up with Isham Jones as featured vocalist of his band. The Ten Commanders still seem to be doing a good job of dishing out sweet music out there at the Park and sounded particularly well on "Blue Moon," with a fine arrangement of that swell old tune, "Love, Come Back to Me," and a good singing job by the trio in "Little Coquette."

Ye Mailbag . . . to J. F.: for some dope on Eddie Duchin . . . all we know is that he is 24 years old, graduated from the Boston Pharmacy college in '29 but took a job playing the piano in Leo Reisman's orchestra. He made a habit of playing at random during intermissions and soon became a featured attraction for his unique solos. When Reisman stepped out of the Central Park Casino, Duchin organized his own band and stepped in, and has had phenomenal success there and elsewhere ever since. . . . Duchin is barnstorming at present, but as to where, you're guess is as good as ours. . . . to W. R. (of the E.H.S. News): Dear Prep Stuff. . . . We are sorry that error regarding Noel Coward had to creep in, but when one pounds out around 2000 words per week, such is likely to happen now and then. . . . said error appeared in the press reports of a radio chain and was thus presumed by us to be authentic, only finding out soon

Frosh, Rooks Tangle In First Hoop Game On Friday

Young Ducks Have Tasted Victory Fruit

Orange Babes Outrated In Scoring Records; Both Confident

Lyman, Silver Feud May Burn Brightly

Vanelli, Lyman, Lewis, Hakala, and company, members of the Oregon State Rooks will visit the University of Oregon campus to present to basketball worshippers the first of a four-act drama entitled "The Little Civil War."

Opposition to these players will be the Lemon-Yellow Ducklings. Both teams will meet in the first game Friday night at 7:30 o'clock at the igloo, and the following afternoon will play once again at the men's gym in Oregantown. This contest will begin at 1 o'clock.

Salem Victimized

Looking over previous records of both teams, the Ducklings hold the upper hand in paper percentages. Both teams have played the Salem high school Senators and both have defeated the Capitol City quintet. It took the Rooks two games to accomplish this, losing to the preppers the first game, and then coming back to win the second game by a 37-26 margin. In their one and only meeting of the Senators, the Yearlings solidly trounced the prep team and sent them home smarting with a terrific walloping.

Starting the season out with two set-backs at the hands of the Irish Cash Store five of Eugene, the Ducklings came back in the third game, whipped the independents, and in their remaining six games have tasted the fruits of victory. They hold wins over Astoria high, Salem high, Eugene high, Longview high, Franklin high school of Portland, and the Lower Columbia Junior college.

Rooks Improve

While the Rooks' record is not as sparkling as their opponents, they have shown improvement in later games with schools whom they met previously. To date they have dropped games to Linfield frosh, split with Eastern Oregon normal, and split with Salem high. George Scott, freshman head man at Oregon State, will present to the Ducklings a quintet that rates almost on a par with the locals. While they will not be as tall as their opponents, the Rooks smooth over this disadvantage by showing a lot of fight.

Young Lyman Stars

In addition to being an inspiration to his team, Howard "Little Mose" Lyman, brother to Mose Lyman, the proverbial "chip off the old block," has yet to meet a center that he can't outjump. In meeting Dave "Hands" Silver, Lyman will find plenty of trouble in reaching further into the ozone than the Yearling pivot man. Although short in stature, he lays claim to being the most "rubber-legged man on the Rook quintet."

Gene Shields, mentor of the Ducklings, has been keeping his men's shooting eyes pretty clear with plenty of practices. Shields has kept his men busy this week with a scrimmage with the Salem high school, and will use the remaining two days with strenuous practices.

after, that it was not, so that's that. . . . as to your other beef, that "Best Ten List" was only the U. S. band leaders choice of the tunes of the month as stated at the top of said article, and was not copied from the BIG TEN nor any other list. . . . It was pulled from "Variety," which as you no doubt already know, being an authority on the matter, is THE amusement guide. . . . come around sometime, we can use some good "stooges" . . .

The stock in the Matinee Dance, Inc. dropped sharply yesterday following a meeting on the matter, for no suitable location on or near the campus, could be decided upon, although further inquiries will be made during the week. Jim Emmett informs us that the gallant Ten Commanders are willing to cooperate, should the scheme get under way, so that is one healthy sign in its favor. . . . more to follow on the morrow . . .

ASUO Plays Host To Lane County's Prep Hoop Stars

Annual Tourney Features 16 Games Today

Future Webfoot hoop stars from Lane county's crossroads will flash their talent across the broad floors of the igloo in a four-day romp starting this afternoon at one o'clock.

High school maple court stars from 16 communities meet each year in this most colossal of county prep school activities, the "B" league basketball tournament. The A.S.U.O. is playing host to the youngsters this year for the first time. The igloo has been placed at their disposal for four full days.

The main floor will be closed to all students unless they pay the regular tourney admission price, according to Tom Stoddard, assistant graduate manager. Season tickets are on sale. Single game ducats are 25 cents.

Both boys' and girls' teams meet in the elimination series which comes to a climax Saturday evening when the two undefeated male quintets battle it out. Preceding this a girls' championship game is run off. Consolation finalists also clash during the last evening.

Today's session opens with a girls' game between Oakridge and Crow and a boys' game between Crow and Blue River. Sixteen games are on the bill for today, two to be played simultaneously each hour. Every team entered in the tournament will be seen in action today. The youngsters will finish up at 11 p. m.

Four loving cups, a beautiful trophy and a new basketball are among the awards to successful teams. The Register-Guard is also giving new uniforms to the winning boys' team, providing it wins the district finals as well.

Many Oregon students will undoubtedly attend the tourney, not only because several Frosh possibilities will be seen in the boys' games, but because a large part of the University's enrollment represents students from these small communities.

feating Franklin high 31 to 28.

It was Franklin's first loss and pulled the Quakers down to a first place tie with Benson and Lincoln. Just one game behind the leaders is Jefferson.

Franklin dashed away to an 8 to 1 lead as the game opened, then fell behind 14 to 18 at the half and moved ahead 28 to 25 with but a minute left to play. Then Mercer, Jones and Selberg caged goals to give Jefferson a win. Selberg was high scorer with 10 points.

Benson continued its winning stride with a 34 to 18 win over Grant. Burns scored 11 for Benson and Woltring 10.

Lincoln high celebrated Abraham Lincoln's birthday and kept abreast the other leaders by halt-

Snatch Donut Lead In Three Game Tussle

Phi Deltas Win First Tilt But Fall Before Expert Spiking of Winners

Lamp Walker Is Brilliant In Losers' Diadem

Cheered on by a crowd of enthusiastic supporters, Sigma Phi Epsilon made a clean sweep of donut volleyball honors by nosing out the Phi Deltas in a torrid three-game match at the men's gym yesterday afternoon.

The victory increased the all-year point total of the winners to 557 to strengthen their position at the top of the heap. Just 20 points behind the SPE's are the Betas with 537, while the Yeomen rank third with 529.

SPE's Drop Opener

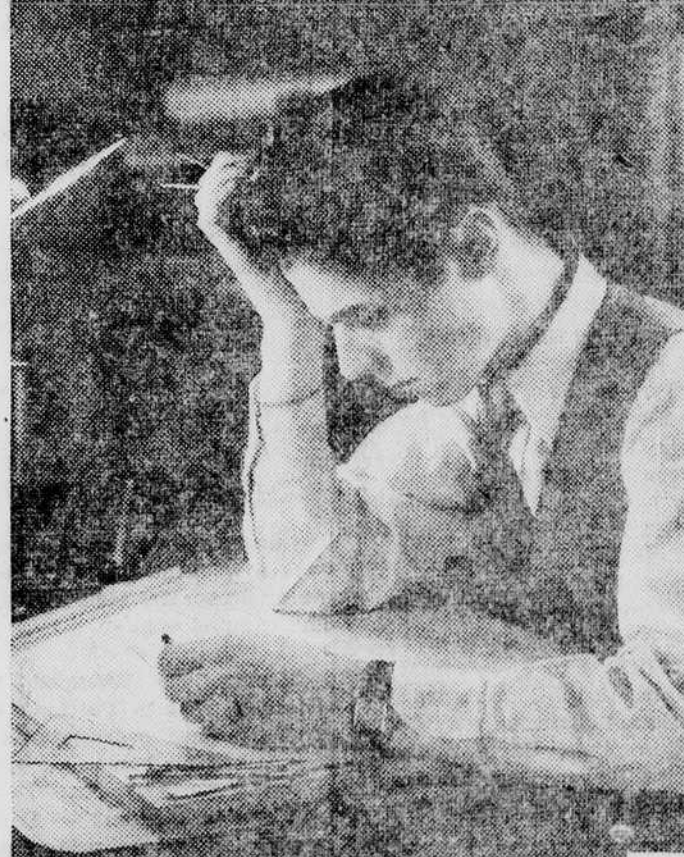

The Phi Deltas successfully opened the match by winning the first tilt 15-12, due mainly to the brilliant playing of big Lamp Walker at the net. With Walker killing the set-ups, Phi Delta Theta overcame a 9-6 lead, then went on to win in handy style.

Faced with the necessity of winning the next game or losing the match, the SPE's settled down to business and grabbed an early 5-0 advantage. With these points to work on the champs were able to repulse a determined Phi Delt rally and win by a 15-10 score.

The deciding game was all SPE by a 15-5 count, though the Phi Deltas made the winners work for every one of their points. Knauss, Cooper, and Clark of the SPE's, three of the best spikers in the league, proved to be just too much for their opposition both offensively and defensively.
