

F.D. Halts Investigation WASHINGTON—A direct request by President Roosevelt today halted impatient senate investigators as they sought to learn why the Colt Arms company had not been pressed into compliance with labor clauses of NRA.

The interference by the president came just as the senate munitions committee shaped plans for a formal demand on Donald R. Riechberg, chairman of the national recovery board, to explain alleged delay in snatching at once from the famous gun factory its blue eagle. This would have taken from the firm its right to do business with the government.

Chairman Nye (R-ND), declared the president asked him by telephone this morning to withdraw the committee's request for Mr. Riechberg's appearance. Mr. Roosevelt gave him assurance, Nye said, that the Colt controversy would be settled early next week.

Revise NRA Measure WASHINGTON—Working behind the scenes in an effort to meet the monopoly charges thrown against NRA by Senator Borah (R-Ida), and others, senate administration leaders started today to revise the bill for extending the blue eagle machine.

Senator Borah, called into conference by the administration spokesmen, insisted upon three major points. He demanded full restoration of the anti-trust laws, an affirmative prohibition against price fixing, a clear declaration that the government is not seeking to interfere with purely intrastate trade.

Those in charge of the legislation conceded privately that the administration measure introduced recently by Chairman Harrison of the senate finance committee leaned more heavily toward price fixing than does even the present law. There was agreement that it would do but little to restore the anti-trust laws. Virtually all agreed, too, that the measure would have to be modified in both respects to obtain congressional approval.

Over 1000 Students Protest Against War In Mass Gathering

Speeches, Parade Mark Military Program's Reputation

Peace Plan Lauded High Schools, Bible College Aid in Demonstration

With colorful banners and fiery speeches over 1000 University, Northwest Christian college and high school students gathered before the steps of the old Oregon library yesterday to make articulate their demand for a repudiation of the "war method."

The whole protest meeting was well organized and tinged with an atmosphere of good humor that would have labeled it a student funfest had it not been for the large and impressive signs and banners that waved over the crowd. A fringe of hecklers was on the job but nobody got excited and the demonstration proceeded in an orderly manner.

Six student speakers forced short, pithy messages over the home-rigger public address system. The demonstration was opened by Charles Paddock, who read a bit of doggerel about "kings in the background sending out commands; queens in the parlor as etiquette demands; bankers in the counting houses busy multiplying; and the rest of us up at the front, doing all the dying."

Louise Clark Speaks Louise Clark, University student, spoke first on "Why defend the munition makers?" She denounced their activities as a "racket" and a war breeder.

Ed Luckey, University high school debater, decried propaganda by Hearst and other alarmists and super-patriots as dangerous to peace.

A high school student protesting conscription into the ROTC when he enters college was John Luvaas, Eugene high debater. If military training be taught, he said, it should be presented as war reality, with mud, hunger, filth and whistling shells.

Conley Sibley Attacks War Conley Sibley, Northwest Christian college student body president, launched an attack on the proposed naval maneuvers in the Pacific. He illustrated the com-

Fee Referendum Pushed Strongly In Lane County

Radio Debate Is Scheduled For Thursday Night

Optimal fee enthusiasts outlined a plan last night for an intensive campaign of petition-pushing in Lane county. Referendum work has been at a standstill since the beginning of spring term but will swing into action today, when students begin contacting the network of Townsend clubs and granges in the county.

With 600 votes as a quota for Lane county it will be necessary to do house-to-house campaigning in Eugene and the larger towns, according to S. Eugene Allen, organization chairman. Allen divided Eugene's precincts among students last night. Letters were mailed to the presidents of all Eugene Townsend clubs. Speakers will present the optional fee cause at a mass meeting of Lane Townsend clubs next Tuesday night.

Allen is also making speaking dates with granges, and has sent petitions to several chapters which requested them. Allen was selected to represent the optionalists in a half-hour debate on KORE Thursday night between 8 and 8:30 p. m., discussing the merits of the referendum. A representative of the ASUC will soon be chosen to meet him, according to Joseph Renner, in charge of the compulsory side.

Raudsepp has named the following assistants: Dale Standley, Lyle Baker, Joe Hill, Bob DeArmand, Darrell Nelson, Margery O'Bannon, Stanley King, Kathleen Duffy, Frank Cooper, Elizabeth Pratt, Bob Pickens.

Hacks and Swats Bring Old Times Back to Violators

After a lapse of several years, the crisp sound of paddles once more resounded from the steps of the library yesterday, marking the beginning of the enforcement of traditions on the Oregon campus. "It seems like old times again," remarked students who ventured to the traditional hacking scene to witness the breakers of customs in their painful misery, yelping under the fire of swats from men of the Order of the 'O'.

If you break traditions, you'd better watch out! Why? Because next week another list of names will be published, asking for numerous students who disobey the rules to appear on the steps of the reference building to receive their allotments of hacks.

Several whose names were published yesterday morning failed to appear and the members of the committee stated last night that their names would be published again next week and that if they failed to appear at that time, they would be pursued by he men and given double doses of the "hazel tea."

$22 Register At Education Conference

Students Must Do Their Own Planning, Says Dr. Kefauver

Organization of Guidance This Morning's Topic

With the official registration for Friday's sessions totaling 322, an even larger attendance is expected for today's meetings of the state-wide educational guidance conference in Eugene and the larger towns, according to S. Eugene Allen, organization chairman. Allen divided Eugene's precincts among students last night. Letters were mailed to the presidents of all Eugene Townsend clubs. Speakers will present the optional fee cause at a mass meeting of Lane Townsend clubs next Tuesday night.

Allen is also making speaking dates with granges, and has sent petitions to several chapters which requested them. Allen was selected to represent the optionalists in a half-hour debate on KORE Thursday night between 8 and 8:30 p. m., discussing the merits of the referendum. A representative of the ASUC will soon be chosen to meet him, according to Joseph Renner, in charge of the compulsory side.

Following this idea, Dr. Grayson N. Kefauver, dean of the school of education at Stanford university, yesterday told the group that guidance gives the student only a basis on which to plan his work, but does not do the student's planning.

Following a noon luncheon at the Eugene hotel the conference will again convene in Villard hall for the closing meeting of the day. S. E. Fleming, assistant superintendent of schools of Seattle, will lead the discussion panel on the installation and operation of guidance service.

Friday's speakers included Dr. Kefauver, Dr. John E. Corbally, professor of education at University of Washington, and Dr. Francis F. Powers, professor of education at the University of Washington, who delivered the banquet address.

University Is Sponsor The two day conference has the University of Oregon school of education and the local chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, national education honorary as sponsors. W. Leighton and Dr. Nelson L. Bossing, of the University school of education.
