

400 Teachers Study Phases Of Education

Technique of Guidance Requires Research, Says Kefauver

Educational guidance in its various phases was discussed before more than 400 teachers and school executives at the two day guidance conference held Friday and Saturday in Villard hall. The meeting was regarded by those in attendance as one of the most significant educational sessions held in the country this year.

Dr. Grayson N. Kefauver, dean of the school of education at Stanford university, explained guidance as something to "help students to attain a high level of efficiency and satisfaction in the appropriate activities to which they will distribute themselves." The technique of guidance requires a great deal of research and study if the teacher is to be efficient.

Boyer Gives Application
"Guidance to be properly appreciated, must be viewed as a factor of education as a whole," stated Dr. C. V. Boyer, president of the University, in reviewing the conference. It can be applied to grammar and high schools as well as college students, but also to create greater interest in the work of the teachers, which is certain to advance the profession."

Prominent Speakers Secured
Prominent Pacific coast educators including Dr. Francis F. Powers and Dr. John E. Corbally, professors of education at the University of Washington; Mr. S. E. Fleming, assistant superintendent of schools of Seattle, and Dr. Kefauver, were secured as speakers for the meeting by the local chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, national educational honorary and the University of Oregon school of education, who sponsored the conference.

Little Art Gallery Houses Modern Textiles Display

Sigma Kappa Sponsors of Print Exhibit

A modern treatment of textiles in color and pattern is shown in the textile display now on exhibit in the Little Art gallery of the school of architecture and allied arts. The display has Sigma Kappa as sponsors.

Most of the prints are the work of prominent contemporary textile designers, while some of them are by University art students. According to Louise Beers, who is in charge of the exhibit, the prints are educationally valuable not only to art students, but to other students as well.

The display was opened Friday afternoon with a tea for housemothers, faculty members, and their wives. At that time the designs were explained and the designers were discussed. The glass cases in the gallery contain magazine articles explaining and commenting upon the textiles.

The exhibit, which will be up until April 23, is open to anyone. The gallery is open from 9 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. on week days and from 2 to 5 p. m. on Sundays.

Foundling May Win $30,000

Life is a $30,000 gamble for this foundling baby abandoned in a New York rooming house by his mother. Besides his swaddling clothes, his sole possession was a sweepstake lottery ticket, worth $30,000 if drawn on the winning horse in a race to be run May 8.

Whiskerino Winners Display Unusual Growths of Beards

The dogs once more reign supreme on the campus as the only animals with fuzz on their faces!

Masculine sophomores who have been hiding behind beards of all sizes and colors in preparation for the "Days of '49" Whiskerino which was held Friday night once more look like themselves and will undoubtedly be much more popular with the fairer sex who seem to prefer the smooth face.

At the dance there were all kinds of whiskers. Van Mollison, the boyish looking lad from down near the millrace, walked off with honors for having the least whiskers of the sophs who attended the dance. Al Davis, patriotic sophomore president, won the sweepstakes prize for displaying the best all-round group of hairs on his face.

Campbell Takes Honors
Red whiskers? No, Newton

Stearns did not win this event, even though it is rumored that he did use a whole box of henna so he could amply qualify to compete in this division. Harry Campbell took honors in this division, exhibiting a most unusual scarlet colored whisker.

Appearing in the most genuine frontier garb, Don Thomas was awarded a special prize. Mel Johnson, walked off with the prize for the darkest beard. For the longest species of whiskers, Walter Mason took individual honors.

Chairmen Give Thanks
David Lowry and Muriel Gabriel, co-chairmen, expressed their gratitude last night for the cooperation given them in helping to make the dance successful, including the merchants who contributed prizes for the whisker awards and the students who added to the effectiveness of the "Days of '49" theme by wearing appropriate costumes.

Corvallis Gains Class A Trophy In Band Contest

Eugene High Wins Legion Marching Award

Permanent possession of the Morning Oregonian trophy and the first leg on the Seiberling-Lucas cup were awarded to the Corvallis high school band, adjudged state champions of the class A bands at the close of the twelfth annual high school band contest held on the Oregon campus Friday and Saturday. Ervin Kleffman directed the red-jacketed Corvallis players.

La Grande, Burns and Beaverton, were crowned as champions of their respective classes. Under the direction of Andrew Loney, Jr., La Grande annexed first honors in the class B division. Beaverton and Burns won the class C and D contests. The class D contest was inaugurated this year for bands of 25 or fewer members.

Adding to the laurels which they won in street parade contest which brought them the Eugene American Legion trophy, Eugene's black and white clad performers were ranked with Grant high in the division close behind Corvallis. Al-

Orchestra Gives Sunday Concert

The Eugene Junior Symphony orchestra, under sponsorship of the Eugene Symphony society, played in concert at 8:15 last night in the Music building. The orchestra was under direction of Rex Underwood, University school of music faculty member.

The concert opened with "Marche Militaire," and "Overture Rosamunde," by Schubert. "Wiegand," Fitzenhagen, was presented as a cello quartet. Madge Conaway, Charlotte Cherry, Mary Booth and Jane Loney Hall appeared.

Molly Bob Small and Lois Koppe, violinists, Martha Hennigan, viola and Madge Conaway, cello, were presented in a string quartet. They played "Genius Loci," Thern and "Minuet," G. Valensin.

Bar Association Appoints Barker To High Position

Vice-President Will Head Western States

Word has come from Washington, D. C., from the American Institute for Endowments, that Burt Brown Barker, vice president of the University of Oregon, has been appointed by the American Bar association as a member of the national committee representing the Bar association. This is an outstanding honor for Oregon, as Mr. Barker will represent the western states in this great movement for higher education.

The American Institute for Endowments was organized last fall, to co-ordinate the interests of the 480 American colleges and universities, the more than 2500 trust institutions of America, the 300 or more life insurance companies as well as their general agencies, together with thousands of life insurance companies as well as their general agencies, together with thousands of life insurance underwriters and the vast membership of the American Bar association, in a co-operative movement that will secure to the colleges and universities gifts of money and property for their immediate and future needs by stimulating direct donations, bequests by wills, income under deeds of trust and the delivery of cash through proceeds of life insurance policies, thereby providing in an increasingly effective way for the maintenance and development of higher education in America.

Co-op Rental Lib Gets Latest Fact And Fiction Books

The Co-op rental library has an interesting assortment of new books. There are mystery stories, romances, novels, and biographies. The new mystery thrillers are "Vultures in the Sky" by Downing, "Death in the Air," by Agatha Christie, and "Spanish Cape Mystery" by Ellory Queen.

An extraordinary new romance novel is Rachel Field's, "Time Out of Mind." The "Books of the Month" pamphlet says of it: "A new kind of Maine novel—a story of the coast itself at the time of the dwindling of the shipping trade, and the coming of the summer people. The book itself is filled with incidents which stand out in one's memory—and through it all runs the tender love story of Kate."

Another new novel added is "Pylon" by William Faulkner. It is full of the adventures of an unorganized air circus touring the

The new biographies are Grave's "Claudius the God" and "Francis First" by Hackett. The former is a sequel to the successful, "I Claudius." "Francis First" is written by the same author who wrote "Henry Eighth" and it is written in the same anecdotal fashion.

Women's Choral Club Will Appear In First Concert

New Music Organization Is Directed by Evans

Thursday evening at 8:15 p. m., the Women's Choral club, a new musical organization in Eugene, under the baton of John Stark Evans, noted pipe organist and conductor, will appear in concert at the music building.

Laura Techner Ware, cellist, will be presented in solo work during the program. Incidental soloists with the group are Mrs. Glenn Haney, contralto, and Miss Monica Ruth, soprano. Robert Gould, an Oregon graduate, will accompany the choir.

Initial organization of the Women's Choral club was made by the patronesses of Mu Phi Epsilon, women's music honorary.

It is expected that this concert will be one of the most interesting of the year as John Stark Evans said they were striving not for power and volume, but rather for restraint and perfection of tone and harmony. The group, being new to this type of work in the main, is making but one appearance this year, striving for musical excellence rather than for number of performances and a wide repertoire.

Admission will be 40c, all seats reserved. It has been reported that about one half of the seats are already gone and many others have been promised. Tickets are available at McMorran and Washburne.
