

Coeds Invite Men to Last Ball of Year

Senior Women's Group Arranges Mortar Board Dance

Campus coeds will escort their "favorites" to the Mortar Board ball at the Osburn hotel, tonight, and it will be "the woman who pays," since the women, according to campus traditions, buy flowers, furnish transportation, and take care of all other expenses connected with a formal dance.

The ball comes as a climax to the senior leapweek, and the Ten Commanders will strike up the band at the hour of 9.

The main feature of the evening will be the pledging of 19 outstanding freshmen coeds to Kwama, sophomore service honorary. The colors of the honorary will be pinned on the 19 elect by the members of this year's Kwama, as they pass under the arch of swords formed in their honor by Skull and Dagger, men's sophomore service honorary.

Summer formals, or tuxedos for men, and formals for women will be the order of attire, plus the traditional gardenia in every man's lapel—a gardenia sent by his feminine "date."

Tickets, selling for a dollar, may still be purchased at every living organization, and at the Co-op.

Elizabeth Bendstrup is in charge of arrangements for the ball.

Benefit Tea First Event For Seniors

Zane Speaks on Books For Commencement Week Feature

A silver tea, for the benefit of the Pauline Potter Homer collection of beautiful books, part of the University library, Friday, June 14, will be the first official event of the commencement week activities. The tea will be given from 3 to 5 in alumnae hall of Gerlinger, and a talk on "The Decorative Illustration of Books," by N. B. Zane, associate professor of design, has been announced as the main feature.

Mrs. Homer was a graduate of the University, and worked on the library staff during 1914-15.

Following her death, in 1918, the library staff began a collection of beautiful books in her memory. The collection was started with just a few books, but has increased, until now there are 650 volumes on the beautiful book shelves. A place in the "browsing room" of the new library is planned for the collection, among the books in the "read for pleasure" class.

All of the books are fine editions of the standard classics, many beautifully illustrated, and several volumes exemplify rare printing.

Two of the latest beautiful book acquisitions by the library are, "A Certain Young Man of Assisi," by May E. Southworth, illustrated by Will Wilke, and printed by John Henry Nash; and Tennyson's "Maud," printed in 1893 by the Kelmescott press, under the direction of William Morris.

Others included in the collection are, "Arabian Nights," edited by Kate Douglas Wiggin, and Nora A. Smith, and illustrated by Maxfield Parrish, "The Blessed Damozel" and "Sister Helen" by Rosetti, "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," illustrated by Willy Pogany, and scores of other famed works.

The silver tea idea was originated last year by Robert Lane, former student here, and a fine printer, who was determined that the University library have a Kelmescott in the collection. Mr. Lane was the speaker at last year's tea.

The silver tea will be open to the public, and is being sponsored by the American Association of University Women, and the State Association of University of Oregon Women, and will be an annual event hereafter.

Hayward

Col. Bill Hayward, Oregon's veteran track coach, who concludes his 31st year at the University today.

Order of 'O' To Give Bust Of Hayward

Track Coach Will Receive Tribute for Services To University

As a tribute to Col. Wm. Hayward for his service to the University, the Order of the O will present through Hugh Rosson, graduate manager, a bust made by Rex Sorenson, former art student at the University, before the opening of the Oregon-Oregon State track meet held tomorrow at 2:00 at Hayward field. Dr. C. V. Boyer will accept the bust on behalf of the University.

At the Order of the O banquet given last year in honor of Hayward's thirtieth year at Oregon, plans were made to present his bust to the University. Tomorrow will see his 31st anniversary of Oregon track.

Dean Virgil Earl, then track coach at the University, 31 years ago brought Hayward here following a track meet with Albany college where Hayward was then coach.

For six years before coming to Oregon, Hayward coached track at the University of California and at Albany. For the past five years he has been chosen either track trainer or coach of the U. S. Olympic track teams. Last year the Oregon track team coached by Hayward, placed second in the Northwest track meet. Washington State college took first place.

Hayward has turned out many well-known track men, chief among them: Dan Kelly, known as the fastest human in the world in the 100 yard dash a few years ago; Ralph Hill who was called "the essence of American sportsmanship" for his Olympic game performance, and who still holds the mile record at the University of Oregon; Paul Starr, the fastest white man in 1933 in the U. S.; Bob Parke, sprinter, George Scharpf, Shoemaker, and Walter Hopson who holds the interscholastic 1933 100 yard dash record are the newest stars in his crown.

Counselor Aide Chosen for Fall

Virginia Endicott Will Assist Pearl Johansen

The frosh counselor plans for next year have gotten under way with the appointment of Pearl Johansen, chairman, and Virginia Endicott, assistant chairman of the guidance group. The frosh counselors, composed of upperclass women, are organized each year to aid in the orientation of freshman students who enter the University each fall.

Virginia Endicott has been appointed assistant chairman of the frosh counselors, according to Pearl Johansen, chairman of the committee.

Those on the directorate are Eleanor French, Marjory Will, Ruth Ford, Crysanthie Nickachiou, Majory Kissling, Ebba Wicks, Helen Bartrum, and Virginia Endicott.

Mass meetings will be held next week for those on the directorate and for the 200 girls who will be chosen later to serve on the committee. Material to be learned in preparation for next fall will be handed out then.

The following week another mass meeting will be held where both dean of women, Hazel P. Schwerling and Dean Karl W. Onthank will speak.

Entering freshman women will not be assigned to any counselor until the fall in an attempt to avoid confusion.

Independent women who wish to serve as frosh counselors are to sign up in the dean of women's office giving their phone numbers and the houses at which they will be able to attend meetings, Miss Johansen said.

All petitions should be in as much before the end of the term as possible.

Students Probe Local Streams To Close Term

If you have noticed earnest looking students digging, probing, or examining the various streams in Eugene, it is not an indication that in contemplation of spring term exams they are looking for the deepest or best-suited pool in which to drown, they are just making a whole-hearted effort to complete their zoology projects, which are being carried out independently by each zoology laboratory member.

The students were given 14 problems to choose from last week and Saturday noon, June 8, will see the finish of the projects. At that time they are required to hand in a paper on the results of the work.

Animals living in rotten logs, or inhabiting the Amazon slough, the millrace or any rapidly flowing stream are being inspected by several students for their project material. Comparisons of the grasshopper to the honey bee and fly; a study of worms; and parasites of the frog are a few of the topics now under way.

University Will Be Given 55 Student Scholarships

Earl M. Palette, executive secretary, announced yesterday that 55 fee scholarships are to be awarded by the University of Oregon to students for the coming school year. Of this number 28 will go to freshmen entering school in the fall. The remainder, 27, will be available to students now attending the University or other schools throughout the United States.

The scholarships going to the freshman students, who are graduating from high schools this spring, will be distributed throughout Oregon on an even percentage, thus limiting the possibility of all scholarships going to students in the larger cities. In the case of high school students applying for the scholarships, financial assistance, ability and high scholastic rating will be required. For university or college students already enrolled in the schools, a grade point average of 1.5 will be required. The need of financial assistance and ability will be carefully considered.

The scholarships will include all fees to be paid to the University with the exception of health and building fee. Applications for the scholarships are secured from the executive secretary's office.

Announcements of the awards will be made July 15.
