UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1935

Sport Quacks

By Tom McCall

The lapping of the azure waters on the beach at Walkiki was much sweeter music to the ears of Keith Cruickshank, than was the whacking of the icy rain drops on the sidewalks of Eugene. It was just for that reason that the Hawaiian youth sped homeward bound from Oregon last Sunday night. Add to the adversity of the elements, the fact that Cruickshank had a badly pulled muscle which would keep him from football all this season... Really not much use to stick around. Incidentally the pulled muscle was worth about $800 to Cruickshank. If he hadn't injured himself he would have been in Astoria with the Frosh squad on the day of the Idaho game. It was on that day that 5000 numbered ticket stubs were put into a big box at Hayward. Each represented a chance to win a new Ford. One was drawn out with but two minutes allowed for the owner of the number to put in his appearance. There was a deafening silence as the number was announced. Then a bustle and a growing chatter of excitement from the stands. Heads were turned excitedly, here and there, as a minute passed. Then all eyes focused on the east grandstand where a figure leaped among the crowd, down, across the field, and up to the judges of the drawing it went, waving the victorious ticket... Yes, it was Keith Cruickshank, and everyone of the 4999 potential winners glowered as he drove "his" or "her" car possessively around the track.

Next year Cruickshank will be chanting "Aloha" to his native isle. He will be back at Oregon again, kicking those barefooted 60 yard punts and flipping bullet passes in his own inimitable manner... Wonder if he'll bring his Ford with him, or leave it, with expectations of picking another 5000-1 shot?

Chi Psi's Lose To Phi Delt Mermen, 4-0

Phi Psis Beat Omega Hall, 6-0; Yeomen Aces Troupon Alpha

Two rough and tough water polo teams, Phi Delta Theta and Chi Psi, played to a capacity house on Oregon last Sunday night. Add to the adversity of the elements, the fact that Cruickshank had a badly pulled muscle which would keep him from football all this season... Really not much use to stick around. Incidentally the pulled muscle was worth about $800 to Cruickshank. If he hadn't injured himself he would have been in Astoria with the Frosh squad on the day of the Idaho game. Injured

Jim Nichol森, freshman quarterback and outstanding triple-threat, who sprained an ankle in scrimmage Monday night. From all reports, he will be unable to participate in the Washington Babe tussle this Saturday.

Ducks Forget Uclan Defeat

Goodin and Lasselle In Shape for Civil War

Casting aside unpleasant thoughts of last Saturday's debacle at Los Angeles, Oregon's gridiron Webfoots yesterday afternoon began pointing to the homecoming fray with Oregon State here November 9.

As no game is slated for this weekend, the Ducks have two weeks in which to prepare for the brilliant young Beavers. Prink Callison ordered the lads through a light workout yesterday afternoon, twelve hours after their return from the land where Chuck Cheshire carries on his mutilating maneuvers.

The esteemed Mr. Cheshire is being ballyhooed for All-American honors by California critics. As far as the Webfoots are concerned, Mr. Cheshire can be all-time All-American and a few other things to boot.

Goodin, Lasselle in Shape

A cheerful note in the Oregon camp as drill for the "Civil War" begins is the complete recovery of left halfbacks, Bud Goodin and Dale Lasselle. With those two young gentlemen out of the lineup against UCLA, the Webfoot attack was seriously hampered.

Now, however, both Goodin, who has been out since the California game with an ankle injury, and Lasselle, whose ailment was a shoulder bruise received in the Idaho tilt, are back in shape and both will be ready to harrass the homecoming visitors from Corvallis.

The return of Goodin and Lasselle to playing condition means that the Webfoots will be in tip-top physical fettle for the Beaver battle. Not a single player suffered the semblance of an injury in the Bruin rout.

An interesting duel for the starting call at right half will be waged by Bob Braddock and little Ray Lopez during the coming ten days. Lopez' remarkable showing in Los Angeles gives him a good chance to oust Braddock from the first string berth.

While the Ducks are resting Saturday, Oregon State will take on up-and-coming Portland university in what may develop into a strenuous struggle.

dent that he will never forget was the tremendous upset that the University of Oregon team handed the New York university in 1932.

At half time the Oregon team had put up such a great game and had completely outplayed the Violets, that the Oregon players were almost smothered by the Gotham fans, including NYU supporters, who went among the Oregon players patting them on the backs and encouraging them. After the half time almost everybody in the huge crowd was rooting for Oregon. Oregon won 14 to 7. Romey will always remember this great support that he and his teammates received in that game so far from Hayward field.

Introducing--- Frosh Pigskin Players

(The following are the first in a series of minute biographies of freshman football players.)

Tom Blackman, six-foot, 185 pound halfback from Walla Walla, Washington, played half in the first annual Oregon-Washington game last year and starred for his losing team. Blackman is big and fast and once under way is a hard man to bring down.

Henry Nilsen, crashing end from Astoria high, "Handlebar Hank" tips the scales at 180 pounds and stands over six feet. He is a rugged defensive end and has a knack for diagnosing opponent's plays. Good blocker and accurate pass receiver.

Injury Puts Jim Nichol森 On Sidelines

Warren to Revamp Backfield Before Washington Tilt Next Saturday

With the fleet-footed Jimmy Nichol森 almost a certainty to be on the sidelines with a sprained ankle, "Honest John" Warren is working his frosh charges overtime in an effort to develop a new backfield combination for Saturday's game with the Washington Babes.

Warren experimented with several new backfields in yesterday's practice. Bob Anet takes care of the quarterback post in good shape and Dave Gammon has the fullback situation well in hand but the two halfback positions are unfilled.

"Foghorn" LaCau has been shifted from fullback to blocking back where he seems to fit in nicely. However, he is getting plenty of competition from Tony Veronda and either of the two may start against the Babes. Both are sure to see plenty of action.

At left half Tom Blackman, the former Walla Walla flash, and Al Bogue, former captain of the Prairie City eleven, are staging a battle royal. Both men are playing good ball and any sort of a let-down by either man will assure the other of a starting berth.

Bill Chrissman, sturdy center who hails from Santa Barbara, has taken over the center duties of "Doc" Taylor who was injured in the Rook game. Chrissman is learning to handle the ball and will undoubtedly see plenty of service Saturday.

Fallen Leaves From the Past

 Thirty teams formed into six leagues will open hostilities in the annual intramural basketball tournament beginning Monday. Three independent quintets are entered, which is a record for non-organizational participation. Both the Igloo and the men's gym will be drafted for use by the contestants.

Ten years ago today—
 The frosh football squad worked out last night with but one thought in mind, that of defeating the University of Washington babes Saturday. Coach Leslie's men were able to practice on Hayward field yesterday because of the absence of the varsity.

freed of drill. Members of the committee also questioned him in detail about his relationship to other students known to be sympathetic.

Connelly Replies
 As in the first hearing Connelly was asked whether or not he considered his original reasons for seeking exemption to constitute conscientious objection. Connelly replied that he was conscientiously opposed to war, but not to drill, since it did not involve killing. He said he felt sufficiently intelligent to discount propaganda which the military course might dispense.

Should Connelly succeed in placing his case before the entire faculty it will be the third time in as many years that the body has voted on the ROTC drill question.

BIG MOMENTS in the GRIDIRON HISTORY of OREGON FOOTBALLERS

(Following is the first of a series of "most thrilling moments" in the lives of Webfoot football players as told to Bruce Currie, Emerald sports reporter.)

ROMEY DE PITTARD

His prep team's Frank Merriwell finish to victory over their deadliest rivals furnished the biggest thrill in the football career of Romey de Pittard, promising Oregon halfback.

Romey offered blocking protection for a teammate who tossed two successive touchdown passes half the length of the field in the closing minutes of play, enabling McMinnville to edge out a 19 to 18 win over her bitter opponents from Hillsboro.

McMinnville was trailing the powerful Hillsboro eleven 18 to 7, with only a short time left to play. The game had been a hard fought battle from the starting gun, but the Hillsboro team had piled up what seemed to be a safe lead.

With only five minutes remaining de Pittard and his teammates started their scoring spree. Andy Peterson, flashy McMinnville star, faded back and tossed a 40-yard pass, that was completed for a touchdown. But the McMinnville team was not satisfied with the 6 points, and before the gun could end the game, Peterson threw another long pass for the winning touchdown. The final score was 19 to 18 for McMinnville.

The above incident does not stand alone in Romey's football memories, however. Another inci-
