Service Plans Rural Programs

Dr. P. A. Parsons, head of the sociology department, announces that calls have begun to be received by the sociology department and the extension division of the social service department for entertainments and programs for the rural districts.

As yet no special arrangements have been made but plans, as carried out in former years by the community survey department, are being contemplated. These programs will be given with the aid of a works progress administration grant in cooperation with the county planning board.

This work is part of the plan which the University has been contemplating for a number of years in an attempt to enrich the social and cultural life of the rural communities.

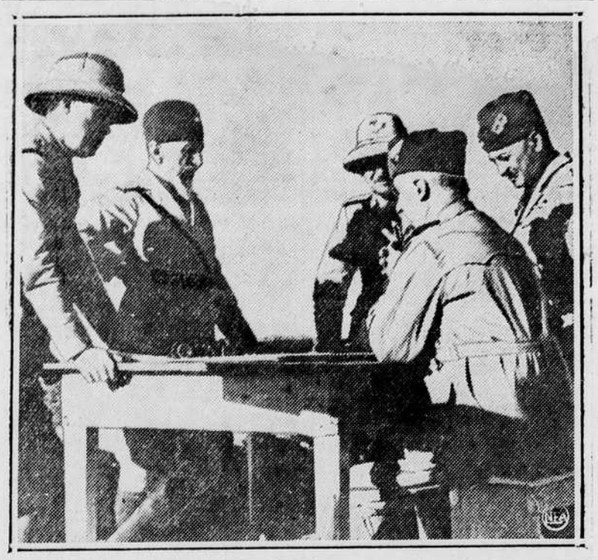
Council of War



Gathered around a plain deal table set out under the blazing African sun, the staff officers of the Italian armies in northern Ethiopia are pictured holding a council of war shortly after the capture of Aduwa. General Emilio de Bono (second from left) presides over the discussion in his role as army commander.

Many Best Sellers Listed Among New Rental Books

Among the new rental books in the library are: "White Ladies," by Francis Brett Young, a novel of a family; "Seeds of Tomorrow" by Mikhail Sholokhov, of the Cossacks of the Don; "The Seven Arms," an exciting novel of a wild, sentimental, Scottish lass, and written by L. A. G. Strong; "Bright Ambush," Pulitzer prize book of poems by Audrey Wurdemann; "The Stars Look Down," by A. J. Cronin, containing a warmth of humanity; the last book of the famous John Galsworthy, "Forsytes Pendyces" and others; "A Fool of Faith," about a wandering-preacher, translated from Jarl Hemmer's Swedish book; and "Green Hills of Africa," by Ernest Hemingway.

"Fatherland," by Karl Billinger, was smuggled chapter by chapter out of Europe, and is having its original publication in America. "Salamina" is Rockwell Kent's Greenland book, long awaited. Other important 7-day books are "Old Jules," by Mari Sandoz, the $5,000 Atlantic prize book for 1935; "Time Past," memoirs and portraits of French celebrities, by Marie Scheikevitch; "Burners of Men," extraordinary adventures in Ethiopia, awarded the Gringoire prize in 1935, is by Marcel Griaule. "The Jewish Caravan," great great stories of 25 centuries, is edited by Leo W. Schwarz.

"The Romance of Mountaineering" by R. L. G. Irving has 41 photographs in collotype. "This Business of Exploring," by Roy Chapman Andrews is his personal advice and information.

"War—No Profit—No Glory—No Need," by Norman Thomas, noted socialist leader and visitor of this campus last year. "What Does American Mean?" by Alexander Meiklejohn, is a frank discussion of condition in the United States. "King Lehr and the Gilded Age," by Elizabeth Drexel Lehr is typical of American society in the glamorous days of the gay nineties.

Thrilling Sea Saga Comes To McDonald Saturday

The most thrilling adventure of the eighteenth century now becomes the greatest adventure of the twentieth century, according to recent movie reviews.

If the motion picture camera had been in practical use 150 years ago, it is likely that no more authentic nor thrilling record of the amazing exploits of H. M. S. Bounty and the historical mutiny would have been recorded than will be seen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's saga of the seas, "Mutiny on the Bounty," which opens at the McDonald theatre Saturday.

Perils and Hardships

Adventure loving men again lived the perils of angry seas . . . the silent suffering of tyranny . . . the heartbreak of loneliness to recreate this immortal struggle of a handful of mutineers.

Pacific coast shipbuilders, using the original plans of the Bounty, constructed an absolute replica of the picturesque mutiny ship used in the picture.

Charles Laughton surpasses all his other masterful performances as the tyrannical disciplinarian, the cruel but dauntless Captain Bligh. Clark Gable portrays Fletcher Christian, the young officer who leads the mutiny. Franchot Tone enacts the part of Midshipman Byam who supports Gable's insurrection.

In addition to the native girls, Maria and Mamo, featured roles in "Mutiny on the Bounty" are played by Herbert Mundin, Eddie Quillan, Dudley Digges, Donald Crisp, Henry Stephenson, Francis Lister and Spring Byington, with hundreds of supporting players appearing in the production's many spectacular sequences.

Old Time 'Hoe-Downs' Set For Gerlinger Tonight

Genuine barn dances, rye waltzes and all, will be the order of the night at a shindig which will be held in Gerlinger hall, from 7:30 to 9:00 this evening.

Students, faculty, and townspeople who are wearied of formal affairs may find relief in the no-date, no-charge, no-stiff-collar dance where an old time orchestra of seven pieces will guarantee to round the corners off square dances and shake the grain out of rye waltzes.

To Have Paul Jones

Jim Lawton, square dance caller over KORE, will be present to do the honors on Paul Joneses, so come prepared to "swing your partner," "cast off six," "bow to the lady on your left," and other truly Western customs.

Even the football players were heel-toeing or toe-heeling rye waltzes two weeks ago Friday, and they lived to beat Oregon State. Only a fiddle and a piano inspired them but tonight seven pieces will be in the orchestra.

The first college cheer is credited to Princeton students, who got the idea from an unknown private of the Seventh Regiment of New York, as the outfit mobilized for war in April, 1860.

Band to Have Active Week

Will Play at Game, 'Challenge Day' Gather

The University of Oregon band is scheduled for one of the most active weeks of the year, beginning Saturday morning at 7:30.

It was originally planned for the band to leave Eugene on the noon train for Portland in order that they might go through their usual pre-game ballyhoo, but the plans have been changed.

The organization will leave at 7:30 and arrive in Portland around 11 a. m. They will serenade downtown Portland until lunch time and immediately following, will march to the stadium to play for the game with Portland university.

Then, rather than returning to Eugene either Saturday night or Sunday, as is usual, the band will be held over in Portland until Monday night. The annual "Challenge Day" ceremonies will be held in Portland Monday as a prelude to the University of Washington classic to be played in Seattle the week-end following.

While in Portland, the band will be housed in the Imperial hotel. It is expected that the organization will appear at many civic service club meetings during the week-end, will broadcast over the major radio stations and will appear at several of the major theaters.

KOPP LEAVES PORTLAND

Jacob Kopp, ex-'38 Swiss student on the campus last year, left Portland in July for his home in Switzerland upon receipt of orders to report for military duty August 19, 1935. Mr. Kopp,s two-year permit to remain in the United States would have expired in October but he had planned to get an extension.

Sogo Matsumoto Exhibits Rare Wood-Block Prints

Mr. Sogo Matsumoto, a Japanese lecturer and distributor of old Chinese wood-block prints was a recent visitor on the campus. He exhibited the prints to art students in the art school library, and also sold some of the art pieces he displays.

Mr. Matsumoto introduced Japanese prints to Americans by bringing the original shipments of wood-block prints to the United States in 1901.

These prints came from the original masters of wood-block printing and cutting in Japan, and included such artists as Hiroshiga, Hokusai, and Haranabu. These artists have since become well known in America.

The Chinese wood-block prints which Mr. Matsumoto now introduces were the forerunners of Japanese prints and were widely copied by Japanese artists.

These Chinese prints are about 200 years old, and are very rare. The designs in these prints were the sources for much Chippendale design and also French-Chinese design.

Some of the prints are done in black and white only, and others are done in colors. These prints are regarded as masterpieces of design and craftsmanship.

Faculty Studies Will Be Feature Of New Library

Provision for escape from worldly beings and annoying interruptions has been made in the new library for these faculty members writing books and magazine articles and who desire solitude. The 16 individual studies on the third floor of the library will be available to these literary aspirants. They are not for conference, but will be issued to each faculty member who will have his own key. The studies will be especially useful to those writing books and articles requiring research investigations.

Provisions have also been made for graduate students working on their theses. There will be 90 desks, each by a window, on every "stack" level, and the desks are to be individually assigned to the graduate students.

MARGARET HILL TEACHING

Football's longest run from scrimmage was made by Wyllys Terry of Yale, against Wesleyan, November 4, 1884. Terry ran 115 yards for a touchdown, starting from five yards behind his own goal line. The feat could not be duplicated today. It has been impossible since 1912, when the old 100-yard field was shortened to the present 100-yard length.

Local Typsetter Recalls Boyhood Of Sinclair Lewis

"Who wrote 'Main Street,' Frank?" That was the chance question shouted through the throbbing roar of the press room one proof reading night, that discovered Frank Evans, campus linotype operator and father of twin Oregon co-ods, was a schoolmate of Sinclair Lewis.

"Sure, we went to school together," he said, getting up from the clicking type keys to smoke an in-between-cigarette while he chatted of boyhood memories.

Sinclair Lewis' real name, according to Frank, was Harry Lewis, so as "Harry" he called him during the conversation.

It was at Sauk Centre, Minnesota that Frank and Harry started school, but it was not until the fourth grade that Frank's memory served him by remembering vividly the red-headed, slim youth, Harry Lewis. His father was a doctor so the Lewises lived in a comfortable house in a quarter block of ground.

When Harry was only six or seven, Frank remembered his ability to fight off the older boys who would pick on him, and when he was in the eighth grade, a little incident which happened one day in the schoolroom.

"Some ink had been spilled on the floor, and the teacher accused Harry," said Frank. "Now Harry was a normal student, quiet, but stubborn, and when he believed himself right, nothing on earth could change his mind. He was independent, too, but his temper only came out when it was pushed, in spite of his red hair. He wouldn't admit spilling the ink, so the teacher beat the tar out of him with her ruler. Harry swore, but took it until half an hour later, when the teacher, worn out with her efforts, but still unable to move Harry, sent him home, unconquered.

That stubborness stuck with him, because later he refused the $5000 Pulitzer prize because he felt there was some unfairness in the judging.

According to Mr. Evans, Sinclair Lewis had one brother, Claude, who attended Ann Arber and Rush Medical school in Chicago. He is now a practicing doctor. Before Sinclair Lewis became a novelist he reported all over the United States, and was a reader for Munsey publications. He met his future wife in Italy and after a whirlwind courtship married her in England a short time later. They now reside in Vermont and have one son.

Mr. Evans has been on the campus for six years, and in the type setting business since leaving high school. He is the father of the clever musical twins, Josephine and Beatrice Evans, sophomores on the campus.
