DOPE BUCKET RECEIVES GNASHES IN NUMEROUS WAYS THROUGH DUCK WIN

Quacks

Editor

By TOM McCALL

When the last growl of the big cannons had died away, and the smoke and mist had lifted from the battlefield of the Husky, two figures bearing a stretcher made their way out of the stadium through the gathering dusk.

A curious passerby who saw the shrouded, inert figure between the straining earriers, would have wondered. Perhaps, if his curiousity were overwhelming, he would inquire as to the identity of the outstretched "thing." Luck holding good, he would be allowed to lift the sheet and peer under. Suddenly dilated eyes would have seen the gently moaning, tortuously twisted body. A wierd, wounded this. A severely injured DOPE BUCKET.

Yes, mates, we might even say a fatally injured dope bucket, what with the slack wallets of those numerous Washington supporters, who would bet any sum on Washington and give as high as 13 points to the Oregon taker. The conservative Wall street brokerage house of Ryan & Co. offered odds of 2-1 against the Webfoots.

Another thing, beside mazuma, that was brought back across the Columbia by the invaders was the football championship of the Northwest. The Ducks are undisputed champions of the whole area by virtue of their inspired play.

Washington State	. 3	1	0
Oregon State	. 1	2	1

Punting supremacy of the West was at stake when Stan Riordan went up against Washington's left footed Elmer Logg. Neither player had been outkicked during the Logg booted nine that averaged 38.8 apeice to shade Oregon's three kickers, who averaged 36.5 on eleven tries. Of these eleven kicks, one was a poorly struck ball which traveled but eight yards off Dale Laselle's foot. Jerry Donnell whipped out three that sailed between 33 and 35 yards, Riordan put his hoof behind seven 39 yarders, which performance established him as Grand Exalted Puntertate of the West, by the margin of a mere handsbreadth.

Tall talk of the Oregon "jinx" was renewed as the Webfoots continued to storm the Husky citadel in the same way that they have been doing since their last defeat there in 1927.

Three times Elmer Logg had a chance to tie or win the ball with comparatively simple kicks. Five out of six of his previous boots from placement had been successful. Now, as you know, his average has dropped to five out of nine. Holding the ball for Logg, in his other tries of the year, was Jimmy Cain. Last Saturday, Waskowitz did the holding on all three. A little thing like that might account for Logg's sudden wild streak.

In looking up a little comment on the game, by Washington sport writers, we find the following, written by Royal Brougham of the Seattle PI, the Northwest's best keeper of the atheltic archives: "Outside of those breaks (meaning the failure to convert or kick one of the field goals, and the offside penalty which cost Washington a touchdown), Oregon was the better football team-better defensively, more alert, and stronger in the quarter-backing department.'

Both Oregon and Washington lost a valuable man in last Saturday's tilt. Washington's regular tackle, Jack McKenzie, and Frank Michek, Oregon's line ripping fullback, were put on the shelf for the rest of the season. Michek's chances for a place on the East-West team were just about nullified when he went out of the game in the first quarter with the lateral ligaments of his left knee

Without his injury, the possibilities of Michek's getting an invitation to play in the New Year's classic were great, as he would be the only graduating fullback in the conference, if the Cardinals and their own Bobby Grayson receive the Rose Bowl bid. Tough luck for a crashing defensive and offensive threat who would have given Californians an eye full of the art of shredding the forward

If that which the players, sports writers, fans, and radio announcers say is any criterion of what it take to be an all-American, Ross Carter is one this very minute. "The best man on the field by far," is the consensus. That's all that need be said in view of the bang up ball game played by By Haines and Ed Nowogroski, who alone made 100 yards of the Husky's scrimmage gains.

The rest of the "grandest left side on the coast," meaning Del Bjork and Stan Riordan, was a driving iron wall of relentless fury. Judges of ability must not overlook one of these conference players in picking the all-coasts and the all-Americans.

Joy Over Washington Triumph Dimmed by Injury to Fullback Star; St. Mary's Next

Rejoicing over Oregon's inspired 7-to-6 triumph at the expense of Washington Saturday was forced to share the spotlight with the somber shadow of Old Man Injury in the Webfoot gridiron camp last

A wonderful victory was won on the turf of the University of Washington stadium, but a wonderful fullback was lost. Frank Michek, mighty "Scappoose unlimited" of Oregon football, has played his last game under Web-

Early in the first quarter, in the midst of Oregon's triumphant touchdown drive, Michek was injured. The plunging spearhead of Prink Callison's "cruncher" play, was carried from the field in agony and a later diagnosis revealed a torn lateral ligament in his left leg.

Out of East-West Game

Michek is definitely out of the St. Mary's game, which was to have closed his collegiate career. More tragic, however, is the fact that the thundering symbol of Ha backfield power will probably lose W a chance to play in the East-West all-star contest in Rezar stadium, San Francisco, on New Year's day.

Michek has been a standout in almost every Oregon grid game over a three-year period, and it Do more than likely that he would Go have received an invitation to the annual classic between East and

With exception of Michek, Oregon's doughty warriors returned from the north in almost perfect condition. Bud Goodin suffered a Madigan a week from Saturday.

Replacement for Michek Needed What worries Callison most as practice for the St. Mary's struggle begins is finding a capable replacement for Michek. Jerry Donnell performed in fine fashion after relieving the "cruncher" fullback in the Husky game and is
