

Thanks

Between Thanksgiving feasts and festivities let's pause a moment today for the real purpose of the occasion—thanks for all we have.

Entertainment

Thanksgiving weekend entertainment includes the Skull and Dagger dance Saturday and the Junior Symphony concert Sunday.

STAGE of the WORLD

By Tex Thomason

In Washington the representatives of the press are having a tough time eking out newsworthy items. When Congress goes home it's like a circus going into winter quarters. The "biggest show on earth" closes shop, and hard times befall the capital newsmongers.

Terrible The international situation has offered them some solace, but with the war temporarily in a static state, British elections over, tariffs signed, and the dictators in the world just coasting along, their task of coaxing any sensation hungry appetite is no easy one.

As a result most of the correspondents are choosing to bang the harp of recovery tallyho. Why they should do this is a mystery comparable to that of the missing link, perpetual motion, the fourth dimension, and the forgotten man. There is no need to ring a gong already rung, and oh how many times have the flunkies of Old and New Deals whipped the ozone into a gale, pealing out their carol of recovery. So all that is really necessary is to re-print the press bulletins so promiscuously handed out by these Administration spokesmen. The newsmen's rhab is superfluous, but editors don't give jobs to those who can only run bulletins.

Behind It Chairman Landis of the Securities Exchange Commission has said there was nothing he could do about stock prices falling. Gov. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board promised the headline "Eccles Holds Hands Off in Stock Boom." Is it so easy to forget that prominent analysts have declared one of the principal reasons for our suffering to be the failure of Pres. Calvin Coolidge and his FRB Chairman Eugene Meyer to use the curbs at their command? It seems to be quite easy. Once again the public is deluged with floods from government publicity bureaus, many a wave of which carries on its crest predictions that all is again well in the land of the free and the home of the brave. Are speculators and foreign investors to be allowed to create a false prosperity? Instead of headlines proclaiming "Hands Off" there should be some screaming "Washington Moves to Stop Stock Skyrocket." Subheaded by "Boom Not Warranted by Production Figures," says Eccles.

Tick, Tock Back to the pendulum has swung back from too much optimism, to too much pessimism, but a lot more proof of recovery should be apparent before we again don the rose-colored glasses. At any rate there will soon be new news, and recovery will repeat his retreat around the corner. Incidentally, a real scoop would be one telling of the invention of a "cornerscope," making possible the view of an object around a corner. That's where recovery has been for several years. We'd all like to know just how far it is to the turn.

E.L. Bohlman, '26, Exhibits Art Work

U. of O. Graduate Is Successful Painter

Edgar L. Bohlman, '26 graduate of the University of Oregon art school, has had one of the really great success of the season, according to a letter received by Mrs. J. F. Bovard from Mrs. Nancy Wilson Ross of New York, prominent University graduate who is becoming well known as an author in the East.

Bohlman had a show of paintings at the Marie Sterner gallery, 19 of which were sold collectors, some as famous as Helena Rubinstein. He was shortly afterward given a place in a theatre exhibition along with Robert Edmond Jones and other prominent painters. Both of his creations in this exhibition were sold immediately upon the opening of the gallery.

Bohlman recently returned from the remote part of Morocco, where he went by special permission of the French government for the purpose of making notations for the library of one of the Brenntano's. The stories he tells of his adventures there, according to Mrs. Ross, are "strange and fantastical."

Nurse Callahan Promises Treat At Dinner Today

What the well-dressed turkey will wear for the 1935 season will be demonstrated at a style show at the University infirmary today.

Miss Margaret Callahan, head nurse, will act as master of ceremonies.

Rich brown, green, and deep red are the shades most favored and according to present plans accessories of fruit salad, olives, celery, mashed potatoes, gravy, rolls, spinach, and coffee will be in order. Mince pie and carrot pudding will be available for those not minding avoidroids.

During the course of the show Miss Callahan will keep things in rhythm by playing on her guitar. At latest check seven patients will be inside the walls for the show.

Honorary Seeks Oregon Chapter

Alpha Phi Delta, national German honor society, has asked that a chapter be formed here at Oregon, according to word received by Mrs. A. M. Williams, assistant professor of German.

The society has 32 chapters and is considered a strong national. Mrs. Williams has written back for more information. Members of the first year German class seemed in favor of the idea.

Foreign Students Meet on Dec. 6

All foreign students at the University of Oregon will be guests at the International banquet of the Wesley club, it was announced last night by Brittain Ash, chairman of the general committee for the banquet.

Plans for the banquet, which is to be held Friday, December 6 in the clubrooms in the basement of the First Methodist church, are rapidly being completed, said Ash. He urged that all foreign students watch the Emerald for further announcements.

Miss Rau at Enterprise

Maxine Rau is teaching at Enterprise again this year and has classes in English and foreign languages.

J.E. Turnbull Talks on Limited Edition Books

J. E. Turnbull of Shelton, Turnbull and Fuller Printing company, spoke to the backgrounds of publishing class Wednesday, November 27, on rare and limited edition books. As a member of the Limited Editions club of New York City, Mr. Turnbull was able to show the class many unusual books.

Included in his collection are several books of particular note. Homer's "Iliad," a hand-set volume from Holland, is printed in an unusual type owned exclusively by the publishers. The paper is water marked with the name of the publishers throughout. Goethe's "Faust" is another volume, rare in that the illustrations are done in a modern method similar to display advertising illustrating.

The same principal holds true for "Thar She Blows," illustrated by Paul Johnson and "Travels of Baron Munchausen," illustrated by John Held Jr., cartoonist for many of the current magazines.

Several northwest printers' works were exhibited. The presses represented were the Metropolitan Press of Portland, Oregon; Caxton Press of Caldwell, Idaho, whose book, "Indian Wars of Idaho" is used in the schools there as a textbook; Statesman Press of Salem, Oregon; and the University Press of Eugene, Oregon. At the University Press each year the

Weekly Paper Contest Planned

Trophies to Be Donated By Sigma Delta Chi

A committee of Sigma Delta Chi, men's journalism honorary, this week are busily preparing to send out the rules of contest to all weekly and semi-weekly newspapers in the state of Oregon in preparation for the best weekly newspaper contest which will terminate with the meeting of the Oregon Press conference to be held here late in January. Awards will be made at that time.

Two trophies will be awarded this year: The Sigma Delta Chi loving cup, for the best weekly newspaper; and the Hal E. Hoss cup for the best weekly paper in towns under 1000 population. The Hoss cup contest was started last year.

Five Points Considered The papers will be judged on news and contents, the editorial page, front page, mechanical excellence, and advertising.

Arne Rae, journalism professor, and field secretary for the Oregon State Editorial association, is acting in cooperation with Sigma Delta Chi in supporting the contest.

Thanksgiving Turkey Lures Students Home

The call of the gobbler attracted several hundred students from the campus for Thanksgiving day, forecasting low attendance at classes tomorrow and Saturday. Today is the only official holiday but few students are expected to return from their homes for classes the remainder of the week.

Cars began streaming from the campus yesterday, filled with grown-up boys and girls who are once again anxious to taste mother's cooking.

For those who live farther away, trains and busses served as means of transportation to the home door step and the mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, turkey, fruit salad, pumpkin pie, and other holiday foods.

Students remaining on the campus are to be feasted in living organizations.

Ontank to Conclude Discussions Sunday

Dean Karl Ontank will conclude his series of discussions at Westminister house Sunday morning at 9:45. Beverley Caverhill and Frank Evensen will lead a panel discussion at 6:30 on "Religion—Social or Personal." A tea at 6 will precede the forum.

UO Educators On Program Of Oregon Teachers

State Meeting of Oregon Teachers Slated for Portland On December 26-28

An especially strong group of educators has been secured for the annual convention of the Oregon State Teachers' association by Supt. H. W. Adams of Corvallis, president of the association, and his departmental chairmen. The state convention will meet in Portland, December 26, 27, and 28.

Lecturers for the general assembly are: Dr. Fred J. Kelly, specialist in higher education, United States office of Education, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Frederick M. Hunter, chancellor, Oregon State System of Higher Education; Dr. Grayson N. Kefauver, dean of the school of education of Stanford University; and Dr. Edwin A. Lee, superintendent of schools of San Francisco.

Convention Theme Named The general theme for the convention is guidance in our schools. The departmental officers have planned their programs in conformity with the general theme.

Optical Illusions Crosland's Topic

Lions Club Hears, Sees Sight Lecture

Many people believe that they are seeing things which do not actually occur or exist because they interpret what they see in terms of emotions or prejudices, past experiences or in terms of anticipated experiences, Harold R. Crosland, associate professor of psychology told a luncheon meeting of the Lions club in the Osburn hotel yesterday.

Human eyesight and unreliability of the human eye was the subject of Crosland's talk. Illustrating his points with lines, pictures, colors, and other demonstrations, the psychology authority drove home to his audience his point that the optic sense is easily deceived.

Past experience, prejudices, conjecture as to the form of forthcoming events all enter into the picture which the screen of the eye transmits to the human brain, Crosland told the Lions.

Those who came in yesterday, and therefore could be accused of this trickery, were Esther Roberts, Jane Myers, Robert Parks and Alys Phillips.

Harvey Thompson and Harry Shliefer have been awaiting this day all week as there is very little hope that they will be released in time to enjoy it elsewhere.

Ed Farrar, Dorothy Everett and Stan Riordan, were given permission to leave so that they might enjoy the day's repasts at their homes or in their living organizations, as the case may be.

Cloran's Condition Remains Unchanged

Reports from the Pacific hospital state that Dr. Timothy Cloran, language professor, rested easily yesterday but that his condition remained unchanged. His classes in Portuguese, old French readings, and Italian are being taken over by members of the language department during his absence the remainder of fall term.

Today's Emerald Is Last This Week; Five More Appear

Today's Emerald is the last one this week, but five more issues will be published next week to bring the paper's publication this term to a close, it was announced yesterday by Emerald business office.

Publication is again resumed the first week after school starts in January.

Leads Concert

Rex Underwood, professor of violin at the University, leads the Junior Symphony concert this Sunday in the music auditorium.

Symphonists Here Sunday

Young Artist, Musician on Slate

With Rex Underwood wielding the baton, the Eugene Junior Symphony orchestra will present the musical highlight of the Thanksgiving weekend at 3 o'clock Sunday in the music auditorium. This is the third concert of the group since its organization just a year ago.

Names of 20 members of the University symphony orchestra who will assist yesterday by Professor Underwood, who conducts both orchestras.

These musicians are Robert Keefe, George Varoff, Corinne Combs, Leonard Gross, Wendell Giffey, John Gresham, William Curry, John Miller, James Perkins, Vinton Snyder, Ben Forbes, J. Waifender, Audrey Aasen, Ruth Breitmayer, Rachel Koken, Molly Bob Small, Dorothy Louise Johnson, Ellen Dixon, Ruthalbert Wolfenden, Martha Hennigan, Wayne Giffrey, Eloise Klink, James Webster, Mary Louise Busche, Margaret Kerr and Bob Garretson.

Of the 85 players who will appear, 65 are of grade and high school age and 30 are under 12 years old. Phyllis Falkoff, 13-year old Corvallis violinist, will be guest soloist.

Seven Students Infirmity-Bound

The day before Thanksgiving and seven Oregon students languished in the infirmity beds, hoping against hope that they would be able to get out—or do they? Perhaps the rumors of the infirmity food tempted a few souls to a day of rest and eating of the turkey and fixin's that they hope to get.

Those who came in yesterday, and therefore could be accused of this trickery, were Esther Roberts, Jane Myers, Robert Parks and Alys Phillips.

Harvey Thompson and Harry Shliefer have been awaiting this day all week as there is very little hope that they will be released in time to enjoy it elsewhere.

Ed Farrar, Dorothy Everett and Stan Riordan, were given permission to leave so that they might enjoy the day's repasts at their homes or in their living organizations, as the case may be.

'Thanks a Million' Continues Today

The picture "Thanks a Million" starring Dick Powell and Ann Dvorak will continue its run at the McDonald theater today after opening at a special preview showing last night at a midnight show.

The picture, a riotous musical comedy, has been hailed by critics in larger cities as one of the best pictures of its type of this season. Tickets for the show go on sale at 12:45, according to James O'Connell, manager.

Negotiations For Concerts Forge Ahead

Portland Symphony, Ted Shawn Group Signed to Appear In Winter Term

Negotiations with three more entertainment groups were finished this week and one more will be signed next week to complete the list of nine features scheduled for winter term concerts in McArthur court, announcement was made yesterday by Ralph Schomp, assistant graduate manager.

The University concert band symphony orchestra, and the Gleemen of Eugene were signed this week to play and sing during the month of February.

The Ted Shawn ensemble, widely acclaimed by dance critics for their grace and spirit, will open the series on the night of January 8 with a group of interpretive dances. All members of the troupes are men. They will be accompanied by Jess Meeker, pianist-composer.

Famous Chorus Slated The Batvian-Russian chorus, on tour for the first time in the United States, is staged throughout Europe as the outstanding organization of its kind and is made up of more than 20 singers trained by a thousand years of tradition in the expression of folk and ecclesiastical songs. They are similar to the Don Cossack chorus, which packed McArthur court last year.

The Gleemen, Eugene song group, is the third in the series and is scheduled to sing February 1. Last year this group entertained before a record crowd of 7,000 University students and townspeople.

Symphony Date Not Definite A tentative date, February 23, has been set for the appearance of William van Hoogstraten, a charter member of Phi Sigma Kappa on the Oregon campus, and the Portland Symphony orchestra, but definite confirmation has not been made. This will be one of the few out-of-town concerts given by the Portland group which has not played here since 1932.

The University band and the symphony orchestra will each play twice during the season, but no dates have been announced. Led by Rex Underwood, under the direction of John Stehn, these two groups have in the past created much enthusiasm on the campus.

Dispensary Is Closed All Day

So that the staff may enjoy their Thanksgiving dinner and prepare for the probable influx of indiscriminate eaters Friday, the dispensary will be closed all day today. However, it will be ready for casualties Friday morning at 8 and in-the-meantime the infirmity will be open for those needing medical attention.

De Villiers Speaks To Dr. Moore's Class

The afternoon background of social science classes of Dr. R. Moore and Mrs. M. H. Williams, met with Dr. Cornelius de Villiers, visiting professor from the University of Stellenbosch in South Africa, yesterday at Villard hall. Dr. de Villiers talked informally on topics brought up by the students.
