By Marge Petsch

By MARGE PETSCH
Capering womanhood on the Oregon campus will have its fling next Wednesday night, we read by the papers. We trust that the senior cops, who will attempt to ward off male invasion, escape without black eyes and what not.

Last year the women had a high old time, until they suddenly realized that everyone had forgotten the skylights in Gerlinger hall. Practically half the males on the campus had accommodations on the roof, and it was strange how the gal's actions changed when they discovered they had an audience.

Eleanor Roosevelt is taking quite a beating about her column which is running in newspapers throughout the country. TIME thinks she is doing a rather good piece of work, considering the fact that she was asked to tell the little intimate tid-bits of White House existence. Naturally under those conditions she couldn't very well go philosophical or introspective; she could, of course, but it wouldn't be very safe for her to expose the terrific table manners of Senator Whozit or Ambassador Nonothing's bad taste in ties.

Two young Japanese girls have returned to their country after six months spent in Denmark learning Danish gymnastics. They have displayed their mastery of the gymnastics with such success in Japan that many schools of that country are planning to inculcate like requirements in their course of study soon. It certainly seems a whole lot more beneficial than spending twenty minutes three times a week in batting balls around aimlessly and with practically no enthusiasm.

Our vote for the Female Hall of Fame this week goes to Mrs. Ineko Kubokawa, Japan's foremost writer on slum life. At nine years of age Mrs. Kubokawa was making match boxes for her helpless father, and in her early teens found work as a night waitress in an itinerant cafeteria. Among diners at the cafeteria there happened to be some of the Japanese highlights in the field of letters.

These celebrities recognized Mrs. Kubokawa's abilities, recommended her name to publishers. Her first book was "A Bag of Cakes." A handsome woman, she spends part of her time in jail for "dangerous thinking," wins the hearts of her jailers. She has an invalid husband, has produced numerous manuscripts, and two children.

State Tennis Champ Calls Game 'Racket' In Amateur Circles

Muriel Nicholas, Oregon Junior, Tells Story of Tennis Life

By LILLIAN WARN

When she stepped on Loretta Young's toe, Muriel Nicholas, third year student on the Oregon campus, was a junior in Grant high school, and had just finished playing Helen Wills Moody in a tennis match on Berkeley, California, courts before half the film colony and other notables.

Something of a Bobby Jones' shadow has patterned Muriel's life. She was an only child and from birth was brought up under a physician's care because of exceptionally poor health. Her slight figure is still not that of a tennis champion, although she holds the Oregon state title.

In her last year at Llewellyn grade school in Portland, Muriel was introduced to King tennis. She took to the game immediately. Delighted, her father brought home books, bought her a racket and balls and Muriel proceeded to clean up Portland tennis tournaments like a kitten laps up milk. She taught herself the game except for two lessons from Howard Kinsey, one-time doubles champion of the United States.

"I played my first match in a dub park tournament and won it," says Muriel. "My first tournament, the Portland junior girls' center tournament played at Irvington tennis club, I lost."

Champion Muriel went to California and competed in junior and women's tournaments when she was 15. She also played in Tacoma and Seattle. At Tacoma she was runner-up in the Pacific Northwest Junior championship. She held the girls' championship at Grant high school for three years, the girls' city championship for five years, and the women's city championship three years.

"Although she was half an hour late, the greatest event of my life was playing Helen Wills," Muriel smiled. "I drew her name for my first match in the Berkeley tournament."

Jones' Song To Be Played By Scott Held

"I Worship, Adore You, My Dear," catchy dance tune which has caught the fancy of many people who have heard it, will be featured when Scott Held's orchestra performs at Willamette park tomorrow evening. The song was written by versatile Helen Jones, Tri Delt of this campus.

Scott Held's band is well known to many students here from its appearances at Jantzen beach in Portland last summer. The aggregation of youthful melody-makers started their career in Santa Cruz, California, several years ago, where they played at the Casa del Rey, large beach hotel.

Since that time they have had numerous successful engagements, and have appeared most frequently in college towns. For the past few months the band has been playing to large crowds at the Trianon in Seattle. Following their one-night engagement in Eugene, they will begin a new contract in southern California.

New Ideas To Be Used At 'Capers'

Women Start On New Room From 'Scratch'

With only a picture donated to them from the main lounge of Gerlinger, to start them off, the AWS is sponsoring the furnishing of a room for Oregon women on the third floor of Gerlinger. The room will be done in tones of brown and gold to conform to a color scheme already suggested by the picture hanging over the fireplace.

Mildred Blackburne, head of the room committee, has enlisted the help of Mr. Montjoy of Applegate furniture company and expects to start work as soon as possible. The latter will depend on the cooperation given the AWS by the various women's organizations represented on the AWS executive council. The other members of the room committee are Helen Nickachou, Phi Theta; Betty Reese, Thespian; Doris Mabie, Kwama; and Ebba Wicks, Mortar Board.

The new room, which will offer Oregon women a meeting place, they have needed for many years, will be open all day, and may be used for studying, reading, or as a general rendezvous.

Phi Beta to Give Evening Program for Honorary And Associate Members

To prove that Phi Beta is more than a discussion group honorary, members of the organization are planning an elaborate but informal program of dancing, music and drama which they will present next Tuesday evening in Gerlinger hall.

Teresa Kelly is general chairman of the event, and Helen Jones will head the committee in charge of the program. Associate members and patrons of Phi Beta will be honored guests at the affair, which is slated for 8 o'clock. While this recital is limited to members of the organization, an open recital is to be given soon.

The three arts, (music, art, and drama), will constitute the theme of the program, and several numbers have been arranged for each of the three. Vocal solos will be offered by Roberta Humphreys and Betty Grogan; Madelina Guistina, well known campus violinist, and Dorothy Louise Johnson will be heard on the violin; piano solos will be given by Helene Robinson and Norma Lyons.

Several selections will be offered by the Phi Beta trio, members of which are Madelina Guistina, violin; Roberta Moffitt, cello; and Teresa Kelly, piano. A double quartet of voices, which has been led by Helen Jones, will be heard in the musical part of the program also. Members of the group will be Roberta Humphreys, Carol McFall, Edith Farr, Juanita Mills, Audrey Aason, Helen Eckman, Mildred Hubbert, Helen Jones, and Joella Mayer, pianist.

A string quartet, composed of Miss Guistina, W. L. John, Edith Farr, and Bernice Lewis concludes the music group. All musical arrangements have been made by the Phi Beta members themselves. Three classic interpretive dances are expected to please the guests, as well as a short comedy entitled "The Prisoners." Miss Vivian Emery has directed the dramatic presentation.

Other members of the committee in charge are invitations, Ann Barton and Esther Clausen; serving, Helen Davis, Gertrude Watson, and Audrey Aason; decorations, Jean Beard and Florence Wimber; music, Helen Jones; dancing, Maxine Goetsch; and drama, Vivian Emery.
