Rissman's Basket In Last 15 Seconds Decides Civil War Tilt at Corvallis

Oregon State's baby Beavers handed the Oregon frosh quintet its first defeat of the current season at Corvallis last night by staging a driving, slashing rally in an overtime period which netted the Orange 7 points. Final score was 37-35.

Ironically enough it was one of the former Astoria high stars of John Warren, Duckling mentor, who gave the Rooks their win.

Big Bob Rissman, who starred for Warren's Fighting Fishermen for several years, was the man who pushed in the winning tallies in the last 15 second of play. He also led all scorers with 17 counters.

The slightly favored frosh held a narrow 17-16 edge at half time. Score at the end of the regular playing time was knotted at 30-30. Showing a surprising reversal of form since little Albany high school trounced them 16-12 last Wednesday, the Beaverlings kept up the fast pace set by the frosh and finally came out on top.

Laddie Gale, star frosh forward, who played guard last night, was second high scorer and led the Ducklings with 13 points.

The two teams clash again tonight at McArthur court in the second of the annual four game series.

Swimmers Will Hold Meet Today

Inter-squad Action Is Set for Gerlinger at 3

Satisfied with the results of last Saturday's meet, in which two coast records unofficially went by the boards, Coach Mike Hoyman will send his varsity swimmers into action again this afternoon at Gerlinger hall pool in another inter-squad meet. The starting time is set for 3:00 p. m.

Outstanding performances were turned in last Saturday by Chuck Reed, who won the 100 yard breast stroke in 1 minute, 9 seconds; and Jim Hurd, winner of the 100 yard free style. Hurd's time was 55.2 seconds. Both of these marks are well under the present coast records in these events.

Contestants Listed
Following is the list of the events and contestants for today's meet:

1. 100 yard back stroke—Reed, Troland, Scroggins.
2. 100 yard free style—Hurd, Morgan, Hoffman.
3. 200 yard breast stroke—Reed, Kerby, Dean.
4. 440 yard free style—Levy, Wiper, Sexton, Gilbert.
5. 50 yard free style—Hoffman, Morgan, Smith.
6. Diving—Chilton, Thomsen, Myers.
7. 100 yard breast stroke—Shuey, Kerby.
8. 100 yard back stroke—Hoffman, Robertson.
9. 220 yard free style—Hurd, Reed.

The average human thigh bone can support a weight of 1 1/2 tons without breaking.

STANFORD'S MISTAKE

SPORTSMANSHIP AGAIN;

Quacks

Gentlemen, the class session today will deal with a bit of everything.
Slip Madigan, Gael mentor, dropped in on Prink Callison in the latter's office yesterday afternoon. Just what the two gentlemen discussed is a matter of conjecture. Madigan is heading north for a short rest period.

The basketball followers at Seattle and Corvallis have decidedly opposite opinions on the equilibrium of Oregon's Sammy Liebowitz. In the Husky lair he is credited as being a cool-headed wizard of a passer and sharpshooter, whereas the consensus of those "who know," over State way, is that he is not a man that can be depended on because of an operatic temperament. (He can play on my all-star team any time he is so inclined.)

Recently the Stanford swimming squad was credited with unofficially smashing the coast 400 yard relay record when Captain Jack Kuhn, Henry Goodman, Jack Vibert, Alec McKenzie, and Martin Scatena negotiated the distance in three minutes, forty-three and a half seconds. Although that time is very fast, it comes a long from breaking the coast's official time of 3:38.1 that is recorded in the National Collegiate swimming guide. The Stanford paper should have its wrist slapped for making such an error (that is if a newspaper has a wrist) because it was the Cardinal team that hung up the real record, way back in 1932.

The booing of the Washington fans last night prompted me to print the following short editorial which appeared in a midwest paper:
"In a recent radio interview the coach of the University of Illinois basketball team was asked by the announcer, 'In your opinion what is the greatest need of the basketball game today?' His answer was, 'The development of a far better spirit of sportsmanship on the part of crowds at games.' In explanation of his statement, the coach indicated that over a period of years there has been an attempt at his university to inculcate the ideals of the Illinois Code of Sportsmanship in both the members of the student body and the general public. So successful have been their efforts that during the past eighty years only two occasions came to mind on which there were lapses involving discourteous treatment of officials by the Illinois crowd."

The Oregon crowd could stand a bit of study from a similar volume.
Gentlemen, the rest of the period we will devote to history.

Jesse James' brother Frank used the turf racket to keep a jump ahead of the gendarmes when they were on the family's trail. One year when the national posse was hot on his scent Frank controlled a string of bangtails on the Tennessee tracks. He even rode several winners in races that were open to gentlemen riders only. Later he became a big betting commissioner and an eminent citizen of Missouri.

Despite the fact that Babe Ruth is athletically left handed, he still uses the right flipper to make his signature.
In 1925 Oregon and Oregon State tied for the top of the Northwest division, which necessitated a three game play-off to decide which team should meet California for the championship of the coast. In the first game the Aggies held their neighbors to four field goals and eked out a 15 to 12 victory. The second contest was won by Oregon when Hobson dropped a field bucket to break a 21 to 21 tie in the last few seconds of play. It was finally decided that the third game should be played at the small Willamette university court in Salem. We'll let Hal Higgs of the Barometer tell you of what happened in that fan packed arena which was rocked to its foundations by the thunder of the situation.

"Well, with five seconds left to go in the ball game and Oregon Aggies leading 27 to 26, Laurie Baker, Aggie guard, fouled Westergren of Oregon. Before the echoes had quieted from the referee's whistle the gun had sounded for the end of the game.

"Westergren didn't know whether to choke, whistle, sneeze or go blind. He was in a spot. Upon his eye and arm rested the championship of the Northwest. He was so nervous the captain of his team called time out so he could quiet down. After an almost endless period he stepped up to the gift line and fired away at the hoop.

"They still talk about that shot, the old timers here at school. It hit the backboard, bounced out to the left of the basket and glanced off the inside rim to the other side of the hoop where it balanced for an eon of time and then finally dropped to the floor.

"Westergren fainted. The suspense was so great that three members of the audience passed out too."

ATO Defeats Kappa Sigs Easily, 21-13

SAE's Down Phi Sigs; Wintermute Leads Phi Delt in 27-6 Scalping of Sigma Chi

Alpha Tau Omega smeared the Kappa Sigs yesterday afternoon, 21-13, to maintain a spotless record in donut basketball. Andy Hurney, Kappa Sigma forward, banged at the hoop with consistency but was unable to match the efforts of the ATO artists.

Callahan led the ATO scorers with nine points, and was backed up by Stroble, center, with six counters. The hill team held a comfortable lead throughout the contest.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon turned on lots of heat in the final canto to down the Phi Sigs, in a sparkling exhibition of defense, 8-6. It was one-all at the end of the first quarter. The SAE quintet built up a 4-1 lead as the first half ended, but was hard-pressed to stay on the long end.

Lieuallan and King garnered three apiece for the winners. Jones, Phi Sig substitute, heaved in four for the losers. Kennedy and Young showed particularly good ball-hawking for the Phi Sig team, but lacked the scoring punch.

Phi Delta Theta upped and massacred Sigma Chi, 27-6. Winter-

Radio Station KORE To Broadcast Game Direct From Seattle

The second of the Oregon-Washington series tonight will be broadcast play-by-play direct from the Seattle pavilion over station KORE, Eugene. The game begins at 8 p. m., and the broadcast will start about 7:45. Other stations in the Associated Oil hookup who will broadcast the same game are KXJ in Portland, KSLM in Salem, and KIRO in Seattle, where the sportscast begins.

to the slaughter with six more.

Beers, Sigma Chi guard, was the mite, phenomenal Phi Delt center, who ran wild last week, again bombarded the hoop for a total of 14 points. Crosbie contributed only loser who could hit the basket more than once.

McDONALD

McDonald — "Captain Blood," with Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland, Lionel Atwill and Basil Rathbone, plus "Bad Boy," with Jimmy Dunn, Dorothy Wilson. Saturday through Wednesday.

"Captain Blood," which opens Saturday at the McDonald theater, and which is co-featured with "Bad Boy," is a picturization of Rafael Sabatini's stirring novel of the same name. It stars Errol Flynn, internationally known adventurer and soldier of fortune, who has been hailed as the year's most important screen "find." "Bad Boy" features James Dunn and Dorothy Wilson, in Vina Delmar's successor to "Bad Girl." The story is one of young love in modern times, compelling and at times touching, but rising to a brilliant and satisfying finale.

REX

Rex—"First a Girl," Sunday's headliner at the Rex theatre, is the latest starring opus of Jessie Matthews, the dancing darling of London and toast of two continents. The film combines comedy and Miss Matthews' singing and dancing, in a delightful story of double impersonation. "Four Hours to Kill" is the tense drama of a murderer's last moments, before execution.

Oregon State Wins Second of Three One-Point-Margin Tilts; Palmberg Hot

The hard-battling Oregon State northern division champion basketball squad eked out a narrow 22-21 victory over the lowly Idaho quintet last night at Moscow. It was the third successive one point margin contest in which the Beavers have participated, having won two of the three.

Bulletin!

Stanford upset USC last night, 32-25, after a slow start which found them trailing 15-11 at half-time.
California pulled a starting upset by defeating UCLA, 35-33. Cal led 16-13 at half-time. It was a close, rough contest all the way.

Little Wally Palmberg again staged a duel with Idaho's Wally Geraghty, with the former apparently coming out the winner. Palmberg sank a free toss in the last few minutes of play to give the Oregon State five a substantial three point lead, only to see the count tied again at 21-21, as Norm Iverson, football luminary, staged a one-man rally with a pinch howitzer and gift toss.

Palmer Scores Again
The stage was then set for Palmberg's last effort, which was another free throw, providing the winning point.
So close was the contest throughout that Idaho rallied to take the lead five times during the evening, being ahead 12-11 at the half. At no time during the tilt was either team in the lead by more than four points.
