Oregana Owners Requested to Call at ASUO Office Soon

A number of Oreganas have not yet been called for by their owners, according to Ralph Schomp, assistant graduate manager. Everyone is requested to get his Oregana as soon as possible.

A waiting list is being compiled in case there should be any extra Oreganas for sale. If anyone desires a yearbook who did not purchase one, he may call the ASUO office. If there are any extra copies they will be available Friday.

University Afloat Will Be Shown Twice This Week

Two weeks ago come Wednesday, Oregon students expected to hold classes on barges, so wet was the campus; but ole Jupe failed them at the crucial moment. The cloud burst stopped. Now, word has been received that a "Floating University" that actually floats will be shown Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock and Thursday at 8:30 in Gerlinger pool.

Members of both the Amphibians, women's swimming honorary, and the men's varsity swimming team will make up the student body. The faculty is being kept a deep dark secret.

Jean Stevenson, Amphibian president, hinted that the classrooms, curriculum, and examinations of this university are novelties that will put the present arrangement of campus existence to shame.

A ball will be a feature of the carnival. Admission is 25 cents. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the Amphibians or varsity swimming team.

Members of Phi Beta Kappa Meet at Anchorage

Student, faculty, and alumni members of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic society, at a dinner given at the Anchorage Monday night, heard Dr. William A. Shimer, of New York, secretary of the united chapters of the organization, make a plea for the widening of intellectual boundaries and interests.

Intellectual provincialism, the speaker declared, had succeeded geographical provincialism; and the learned society of which he is the active executive is sternly set against this development.

Overindulgence by some college professors in the medieval lecture system, developed "when books were scarce and talk was cheap," was deplored by the speaker, himself a former faculty man in eastern institutions. For the better type of student he favored more freedom and individual work and a more liberal use of the library.

Dr. Shimer informed his hearers he could see something of a return among practical men to a realization of the value of basic culture even to men who are going into business or industry; promotion of this trend he regarded as a function of Phi Beta Kappa. He hoped for the formation of more alumni chapters.

Comprehensive examinations rather than frequent short tests of the student's recollection of a small section of a particular subject were advocated by the speaker, and he deplored, without seeing any easy remedy, the overemphasis on grades as a measure of a student's capacity and progress.

Dr. Shimer is making a tour of the eighty chapters of Phi Beta Kappa in the United States.

J. Herbert Geoghegan, McNeil Island Leader, Will Also Lead Forum At 7:30 in Gerlinger

Vital problems of welfare of modern day prisoners will be discussed at an assembly of students and faculty today at 10 o'clock, when Dr. J. Herbert Geoghegan, educational supervisor at the federal penitentiary at McNeil Island, will talk on "A New Deal for the Prisoner."

All 10 o'clock classes will be dismissed for the assembly to be held in Gerlinger hall. A special open forum will be held tonight at 7:30 in Gerlinger hall, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Delta, sociology honorary.

Work Significant

Work now being done by Dr. Geoghegan at McNeil Island is regarded by educators and prison authorities as of utmost significance. His projects have won the highest praise from Sanford Bates, head of federal prisons.

Dr. Geoghegan was chosen to take charge of the school for inmates at McNeil Island in 1932. He went there from the teaching staff in sociology at the University of Washington, from which he was graduated in 1922. He received his master of arts degree in 1923. While an undergraduate he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic society.

Enrollment Increased

The success of the work Dr. Geoghegan is doing at the prison is shown by the fact that during the first year he was there enrollment in classes increased from 360 to 653, while lesson reports completed and turned in increased from 1,839 to 6,727.

Before teaching at Washington university, Dr. Geoghegan's career took him into such fields of social activity as minister, organization of study classes in railroad construction camps, logging camps, and mill towns, and educational work in army camps during the World War. He was elected to the state legislature of Washington in 1927, where he served on various committees dealing with educational and social problems of the state. Mr. Geoghegan also introduced and was active in the promotion of the old age pension bill which is now a law in Washington.

Handling, Typography of 1936 Annual Has Campus Okay

A skeptical Oregon campus received its 1936 Oregana—the work of capable Editor George Root and an ambitious, hard-driving staff—received it with such genuine appreciation and enthusiasm that the release of the book became an outstanding event of Junior Weekend.

From cover to cover, the book attained a tone of enticing informality, avoiding the stiffness so often found in annuals. In its foreword was the explanation that Root and the staff felt that every possible theme had been used and re-used until they verged upon triteness. They pursued this belief throughout the book, linking subject matter cleverly and naturally with the broad motif of campus life.

Typographically, the lithographic or offset printing of the first section with its possibilities for life-giving shadowing and blending attracted much attention. The press work on the other sections was also of exceptional quality.

Shown in the adjoining columns is the washable cover of the book. In the lower right hand corner is Editor George Root, and on his left are pictured students stacking copies of the Oregana.

More pictures and art work are scattered throughout the book in proportion to reading matter than in many year books. In these pictures, an attempt to avoid the formal posed photographs for the more natural and interesting "shot" was made and has been well received by the book's purchasers. Title lines and descriptive matter for the pictures were humorous and informal, as was the reading matter throughout the book.
