

THE Firing Line

By PAT FRIZZELL

No, mates, Oregon won't play an early-season intersectional game with some big shot eastern school in Portland next fall. Anse Cornell, who knows, assured that yesterday.

The reason is extremely simple. The Webfoots have a game scheduled with UCLA in Los Angeles on September 25, the first date on which the conference allows its members to play. And from there on, the early slate is crowded.

UCLA play on the same corresponding Saturday (it's a day earlier next season) that the Webfoots trounced Portland university and Oregon State stumbled before the Trojans this year. That's as soon as you can play in this conference.

Possibility of an intersectional contest later in the season isn't nearly so remote. In fact, it's pretty likely. The dope is that Oregon is likely certain of having a home-and-home series with some eastern outfit either next year and in 1938 or in '38 and '39.

It probably won't be long, if present indications aren't a bunch of hooy, until Oregon football will at last be out of the limbo. There hasn't been much of the goosy stuff this fall, but usually there's plenty of it.

Turf on Hayward field next fall depends upon the athletic budget, says Mr. Cornell, and it's not at all unlikely that the Webfoots will gallivant before the home folks on silky green footing in 1937.

The Oregon State Barometer is blowing its horn for turf on Bell field, and even Multnomah stadium may come in for a grassy coating. The powers that be around the Portland house of gridiron thrills are awaiting the outcome of the new Pacific coast conference round robin schedule before making the momentous leap. It shouldn't be momentous, with all the little colleges and some of the high schools already boasting turf fields, but after all these years of waiting and hoping, it most certainly is.

One of the most helpful things Oregon students who want a turf field can do is to hop a train or paddle their own lizes to Saturday's game with UCLA.

When a football team makes the wonderful showing Oregon made against Washington, that team needs the wholehearted support of its student body. If the students let the Webfoots down now, after flocking in unison to see them in their big splurge with the Huskies, it'll be a rather cheap mess of potatoes.

Anybody who wants to see a real football game would do well to be on hand when the band (swing or no swing) swings into "The Star Spangled Banner" as Old Glory climbs the pole in Portland Saturday. The Webfoots are primed to avenge that unpleasant 33-to-6 dose they took from the Bruins a year ago, and the Bruins are vowing to ease the sting of the Stanford defeat with Duck meat. All indications point to a ding-dong exhibition.

The campus was practically deserted last weekend. I'm not trying to ire the professors, but another exodus to the metropolis wouldn't be a bad idea.

Has anyone seen more football upsets in one day than took place last Saturday? Maybe so, but it's been years. Just count 'em.

Right off the handle, there's the biggest surprise of all, Northwest's win over Minnesota. Then, in rapid-fire order, we have Notre Dame over Ohio State; Bucknell over Villanova; Temple over Holy Cross; Dartmouth over Yale; Colgate over Army; Stanford over UCLA; Florida over Maryland; Chicago over Wisconsin; Denver's tie with Utah State, and Boston College's tie with Michigan State. Oh, sure, that list probably

Duck Football Squad Practices On Passing For UCLA Grid Fray

Backfield Alternates in Firing Passes; Nilsen, Yerby Probable Ends On Starting Team

Passes will clog the atmosphere of Multnomah stadium Saturday, if the number of aerial plays being put on by Prink Callison's Oregon Webfoots in practice this week are any criterion.

The Webfoots, who tangle with the Bruins of UCLA this weekend, look like a Southern Methodist outfit. There was no scrimmage last night and there has been little of it all week. Dummy scrimmage, signal drills, and passes are the menu.

Several Heavers

Dave Gammon, sensation of the Washington game, is only one of Coach Callison's pass-firing crew. Others heaving the leather yesterday were Dale Lasselle, Bob Brad-dock, and Jim Nicholson. All may get a chance to cut loose Saturday.

John Yerby and Hank Nilsen will probably start at ends for Oregon and it will be up to them to snare the passes. Yerby was aces at pulling in the flings in the Washington fuss and is rated the best receiver on the squad.

Robertson Improves

Lenard (Bud) Robertson, another sophomore wingman, may see service in Saturday's fray. Robertson, a former Albany high player, has been coming fast in practice recently. John Engstrom and Lief Jacobsen, lettermen, are also likely to see terminal action against the Bruins.

Indications are that Joe Huston, out since the Southern California game with a knee injury, will play Saturday. A knee has been working out with the team for over a week and apparently is completely recovered.

Huston will have a hard time crowding Nello Giovannini out of his left guard spot and is still likely to start. It is still an uncertainty whether or not Tom Blackman, Oregon's other cripple, can play.

Webfoots Vengeful

The Webfoots are anxious to avenge the 33-to-6 defeat heaped upon them by UCLA last year. The Bruins are expected to be extremely tough, despite their upset loss to Stanford. In eight previous meetings with Bill Spalding's team, the Ducks have six victories. Past scores follow:

- 1923—Oregon 26, UCLA 6.
- 1929—Oregon 27, UCLA 0.
- 1930—Oregon 7, UCLA 0.
- 1931—Oregon 13, UCLA 0.
- 1932—Oregon 7, UCLA 12.
- 1933—Oregon 7, UCLA 0.
- 1934—Oregon 26, UCLA 3.
- 1935—Oregon 6, UCLA 33.

leaves out a few. Isn't it enough? The prognosticators, including this one, aren't reporting their averages.

Yep, 'twas a large afternoon for Old Man Upset. It goes to show how nearly on a par are the teams all over the county.

Short Shorts . . . Slip Madigan wants folks to make his Gaels underdogs in their game with Santa Clara. . . The two big independents play a week from Sunday, and on the basis of comparative scores Santa Clara ought to have a fine chance. . . The St. Mary's players returned from their eastern study tour yesterday. . . Incidentally, they dropped a couple of ball games while away. . . George Cornell, star California left half-back, reinjured an old knee ailment in the Washington State game, and will be on the bench when the Bears tackle Southern Cal Saturday. . . Better a swing band than none at all, like we had last week. . . For Saturday, along with a win for Oregon, we're picking the Webfoot band to step out and vindicate itself. . . A band can help going. . . You fans who aren't going this weekend, why not wire the team? . . . You'd be surprised to know how much a note of encouragement from the home folks helps a bunch of gridsters ready for battle. . . Yep, Dave Gammon surprised the Huskies completely. . . Heck, they'd never heard of him, and nary a word of his shift to left half reached print before the game.

Frosh Gridders Drive Through Last Scrimmage

Injured Players Return To Bolster Strength; Babes in Good Shape For Their Last Tilt

Final polishing of the Oregon Ducklings' team offense and defense for Saturday's big game against the Washington Babes, was concluded last night when Coach Warren's men went through another session with the varsity reserves on Hayward field.

Warren drove his squad through blocking practice yesterday at the opening of practice, and later in the session ran the frosh gridmen through some work on the tackling dummy. The team has been doing dual work this week, running the UCLA attack against Callison's Webfoots, besides preparing for Saturday's tilt in Seattle.

Not Full Strength

Prospects are dim for the Oregon yearling team to go into the Babe game at full strength, but at least half the present list of cripples should see action. Jay Gray-beal, midget left half, and Frank Emmons, fullback, who have been on the shelf with sprained ankles, are expected to be ready by game time Saturday afternoon.

Russ Inskeep, tackle, and Lloyd Beggs, guard, two of this week's casualties are both back in suits again and will undoubtedly get into the game. Paul Rowe, the team's hard hitting fullback, has not been in togs this week, and his possibilities of playing are still a question mark.

Jesse Returns

George Jesse, backfield flash, is with the squad again, and he, along with Bob Smith, ailing right half, should get into the Babe fray. Outside of these few uncertainties, the frosh team is in the best of shape and should give a Washington freshman a whale of a battle.

The Babes are reported to be in wonderful condition this week, and are planning on emulating the victory of their big brothers, the Huskies, scored over a fighting Webfoot team in Portland last Saturday.

Babes' Third Game

They will be playing their third and final game of the season this weekend in Seattle. The Husky Babes lost their opener by a 6 to 0 score to Bellingham normal, but came back last week to drive over a 13 to 6 victory over the Washington State Cougar Kittens.

Saturday's contest will be the season's fourth for Oregon's brilliant frosh eleven. Warren's gang showed some sensational ball earlier this season in spilling the Oregon State rooks and Southern Oregon normal, and are gunning to upset Coach Tubby Graves' highly rated outfit.

A signal drill today will wind up the week's work for Skipper Warren's outfit, and they are scheduled to leave for Seattle at noon Friday.

Local Wood Carver to Make Panels for Libe

Three large wooden panels, carved by Arthur Clough, local wood-carver, and his associates, have just been installed in the upper division reading room of the new library. Three more will be finished as soon as they are finished.

The carving follows the grain of the wood on the panels, which tell the story of six Oregon mountains, and the activities which took place on them.

Class Dismissal Asked By Advisory Committee

Professors have been asked by the student advisory committee to exercise discretion in the direction of leniency for those students who wish to be excused from Saturday classes to attend the UCLA game in Portland.

The committee also directed that classes on Saturday, November 21, be held until 10:50, and that 11 o'clock classes be dismissed in order that students may take the special train for the game with Oregon State college in Corvallis.

Judith Mitchell, ex-'37, and Thurman Ray Muir were married in Portland on October 10. Mr. Muir is an alumnus of Creighton university, Omaha, Nebraska.

Oregon Faces This

Undefeated To Clash In Final Touch Contest

Yeomen Spill ATOs 6-0; To Reach Title Fray; Two Ball Teams Rated Even for Game

The Betas meet the Yeomen tonight at 4 o'clock with the winner taking the championship of the donut league. The Yeomen beat the ATOs last night 6 to 0 in a league playoff game. Previously, both teams were tied for first place with four games won and none lost.

The teams showed little offensive in the first half, with neither going more than 20 yards into the other's territory. The Yeomen had a slight edge in this period because of their superiority in running plays.

The ATOs completed numerous short passes over the center of their line, but were unable to make any substantial gains or enough first downs to even threaten to score.

Yeomen Launch Drive

The second half began in a lack-luster manner but this was soon dispelled by a determined Yeoman drive. They took the ball down the field for 40 yards on a series of short passes and end runs. A five-yard penalty against the ATOs helped them considerably. A pass from Fisher to Pickens, good for eight yards culminated the drive with a Yeoman touchdown. Platt failed to convert.

The ATOs made a determined effort to score just before the game ended, but their passes were knocked down by an alert Yeoman team.

Finals Tomorrow

This game was the last of the semi-finals and tomorrow night the final game will be played with the Yeoman meeting the Betas for the championship. Both teams have strong passing and running attacks. The Yeoman line is considered to be the stronger of the two, but the independents will have to cope with Matt Pavulanas, the Betas' ace spot passer.

Frosh Gridmen

RON HUSK

Ron Husk, of Portland, is the leading candidate for quarterback position on the frosh team. Ronnie played guard at Franklin high school in Portland and won the Zell trophy his last year at the Quaker school. Because of his blocking ability, Coach Warren shifted Ron to quarterback at the start of the season. Due to shortage of guards this year, Husk is often shifted into the line in games and is very effective at either position.

Ron is 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighs 185 pounds.

PAUL ROWE

Paul Rowe is one of the outstanding men on the Yearling team this fall. Weighing 200 pounds, Rowe plays fullback and backs up the line on defense. Paul is very fast and hits the line like a battering ram.

This is Paul's first year at American football as they play rugby in Victoria, B. C., which is Paul's home town.
