

Girl-Reverse Myra Hulser Tells of Thrills Dance Set For In Interviewing Celebrities November 21

Opportunity knocks but once, it is said, and the AWS Harvest dance on November 21 will give coeds that long sought for opportunity to ask the One Man for a date, and be in perfect form.

The dance, which will be held in McArthur court the day of the Oregon-Oregon State game, is a girl-date affair, and girls are urged to get their tickets early, so they may make plans to come back from the game in time. Gus Meyer's orchestra will furnish the music.

Harvest Theme

Carrying out the Harvest theme, decorations will consist of autumn leaves and horns of plenty. The committee has been selected from among members of Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's service honorarium, with Isabelle Miller as chairman.

Committees are as follows: finances, Kathleen Duffy; tickets, Genevieve McNiece and Martha Stewart; publicity, Clare Igoe and Gladys Battleson; decorations, Constance Kletzer and Lucia Davis; music, Elizabeth Turner and Molly White; patrons, Frances Schupp and Jane Bogue; programs, Hallie Dudley and Jean Ackerson.

Tickets will be on sale soon, and may be secured from girls in living organizations. They are priced at $1. Plans for taxi service in form of a hay ride from each house are being worked out.

Co-Ediquette

By BARRY BAKER

Is it ever permissible to put one's elbows on the table when dining?

The table is there for the purpose of supporting the dishes, not the people who are eating. Never lean on the table for support! It is perfectly correct for one to place his elbows gracefully on the table between courses or after the dinner has been cleared away. However, don't lie down!

When soup is served, what should one do with the soup spoon after one is through eating?

There is generally a plate under the bowl. If the bowl is small enough to allow some room on the plate, lay your spoon on the plate. However, if there isn't sufficient space, the spoon should be left in the bowl.

When and how should one know when to eat ice cream with a fork?

In a private home, if the hostess wishes to use her ice cream forks, she places them on the table. These forks cannot be mistaken as they are almost like spoons with short prongs at the very end. However, it is proper to use a spoon if no such fork is at your place.

Where should the knife and fork be placed when the meal is finished?

They should be placed together in the center of the dinner plate.

Q: Do you consider a sorority affiliation an asset or detriment?

Cathryn Collins — Kappa Alpha Theta

"It may be either an asset or a detriment, according to the individual. Many aspects of sorority life may be detrimental in regard to education because of the demands made on one's time. However, many social advantages of group living are derived from sorority life."

Betty Ann Miller—Women's Co-op

"I don't think that it is worth while to live in a sorority. I have definite aims and interests in college and sorority life is very likely to interfere with these interests. I do not want my college career dominated by the often times petty opinions and rules of a sorority. As far as the friendships are concerned I have not found it hard to make many friends without the benefit of a sorority."

Margaret Carlton—Gamma Phi Beta

"It is an asset socially but it acts as a detriment at times for

"Newspaper work and the writing game from any approach have proved fascinating to me," said Myra Hulser, University of Oregon freshman, who entered from Boise, Idaho, this year.

For the past year she has been employed as woman's page editor and feature writer on the Boise Capital News. Besides writing society news, a daily shopping column, and planning her page layout she also managed to interview most of the celebrities that came to Idaho's capital city. These intimate glimpses of famous personages proved very thrilling and was the work she most enjoyed doing.

Miss Hulser began interviewing celebrities while still in high school and says that in her case she certainly proved the old adage "the first few are the hardest." She had the good fortune to interview Lawrence Tibbett and Nelson Eddy at this time. Nelson Eddy was not as good-looking as he is now in his fame as an opera singer and motion picture actor, she says, but he was very charming.

The interviews she has had vary from noting menus from Charles Richards, a former dietitian for President Roosevelt, to having breakfast with Max Baer. "It is truly amazing how much Max can say between bites of a huge breakfast and yet finish by train time," she comments.

She had the opportunity to interview Schumann-Heink during a recent visit in Boise, and Miss Hulser says that she is a very lovable old lady and just as one would expect her to be from hearing her sing.

"I received some wonderful pointers on 'brone busting' from Rose Davis, world champion women's rider, which will come in handy if I ever decide to take it up as a profession. "But along the line of horsemanship, a really interesting person," continues Miss Hulser, "is Mrs. Harry Knight, formerly Ruth Mix, daughter of Tom, who is called the Serial Queen because of her many western pictures for Columbia picture company. She is an expert rider and seldom uses a double."

Another woman who has distinguished herself by living dangerously and making a profession of it is Mable Stark, the only woman in the world who trains tigers. Miss Hulser had lunch with her in a circus tent of the Al G. Barnes show. She was thankful to escape without having to exchange any words with Miss Stark's "cats."

As a part of her regular duties Miss Hulser interviewed Mrs. William E. Borah twice weekly. She is enthusiastic in her praise of the wife of Idaho's famous senator.

Miss Hulser owes much of her interest in journalism to Dwight Mitchell, her adviser in high school. He is a graduate of the journalism school here, and it was at his recommendation that she came to the University of Oregon. She is affiliated with Alpha Chi Omega on the campus.

Co-eds Asked To Theta Sig Open Meeting

All Oregon women interested or majoring in journalism, are invited to attend the open meeting of Theta Sigma Phi, journalism honorary, which will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Gerlinger alumni hall, Virginia Endicott, president of the organization, explained today.

The main event of the meeting will be Mrs. Eric W. Allen's talk on her European travels this summer. Dean and Mrs. Allen returned only shortly before the opening of the University from a six months' tour of Germany, France, Switzerland, Sweden, and Italy.

The program will be held following a 5 o'clock banquet and initiation ceremonies for the eight girls pledged to Theta Sigma Phi at the Matrix Table banquet last spring. The girls to be initiated are: Gladys Battleson, Jean Gulovson, Clare Igoe, Margaret Ray, Irma Jean Randolph, Ruth Weber, Judith Wodeage, and Ellamae Woodworth. The banquet will be held at the Anchorage, followed by the ceremonies in the AWS rooms at Gerlinger.

Following Mrs. Allen's talk, Virginia Endicott will explain the meaning of Theta Sigma Phi, after which refreshments will be served. A ten-cent charge is being made for the affair. Dorothy Dill is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Corinne LaBarre and Ellamae Woodworth.

From all reports everybody had an "A number one time" over the weekend in Portland. Some of us are planning to stay in Eugene to catch up on our work and to get ready for Dads' day. We all must look our best. Also, it might be a good idea to get some good mid-term grades to show them so that they might increase our allowance.

Talking about Dads' day, we found some nifty little numbers down town that would help us to have a grand time about then.

At R. C. HADLEY'S we saw a green silver lamee afternoon dress. It had huge Leg-O-Mutton sleeves, gathered, a silver belt, and a neat little bunch of flowers at the neckline. Swing into the tune of the dance with a flair skirt.

A clever little dress that we found at BEARD'S was a bright blue afternoon dress that was trimmed with the tuxedo back, tails and all. What could be nicer.

The taffeta dresses are still the vogue on the campus, and elsewhere. At McMORRAN'S they showed us a black taffeta that was embroidered with large green circles. The dress had a full skirt and full sleeves. In some of these dresses, hearts were used instead of circles. Very clever indeed.

For great relaxation, or for studying, we suggest that you go in and see the two-toned silk crepe lounging pajamas that GORDON AND CO. are showing now. They are double breasted, have huge buttons, and are tied with a contrasting sash.

Under the line of beauty, be sure and keep your hands looking their best. KRAMER BEAUTY SALON can give you one of the nicest manicures that can be had, and what's more they are just off the campus. Very convenient.

Haven't collected so very much gossip this week because everything that we heard, happened downtown in Portland. Probably a big percentage of it is old news to you by now, but maybe later on we will drop a hint about some of it.

Pin Pluckers and Pin Planters

Romances have come to the top this last week or so. Pins have been flying around the country like a Kansas cyclone had hit them. The men on the campus are getting a wee bit liberal. Only have time to tell you a few of them.

GAMMA PHI BETA:
Janette Charman received a pin from Allen Smith, Sigma Nu.

Mariam Fouch received one from Thurston Skei, Phi Kappa Psi.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA:

Betty Crawford received one from Harry Weston, Alpha Tau Omega.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA:
Mary Janet Higgins not only got a pin from George Humphrey, but she also got a package last Thursday night.

Along with the pin notice, it has come to our special attention that John Yerby has done the most unusual, or maybe it is becoming a usual thing by now, but anyhow, to get back to the story, he has planted his pledge pin on Marcia Steinhauser, Kappa Kappa Gamma. We have a feeling that something is liable to happen after a few certain people read this.

And a few more questions for your intellectual minds, a grade of "A" is worth 50%:

What lonesome Oregon man sat on top of the goalpost when the Washington Huskies tore it down?

What looks more touching than Jack Lewis and Bob Biddle sleeping on the train, with Jack all cuddled up next to Bob trying to keep warm or something?

What Phi Psi's went to the wrong dance Saturday night? They went to the Chi Psi dance and then proceeded to wait for their brothers to show up.
