TURFING OF FIELD ASSURED

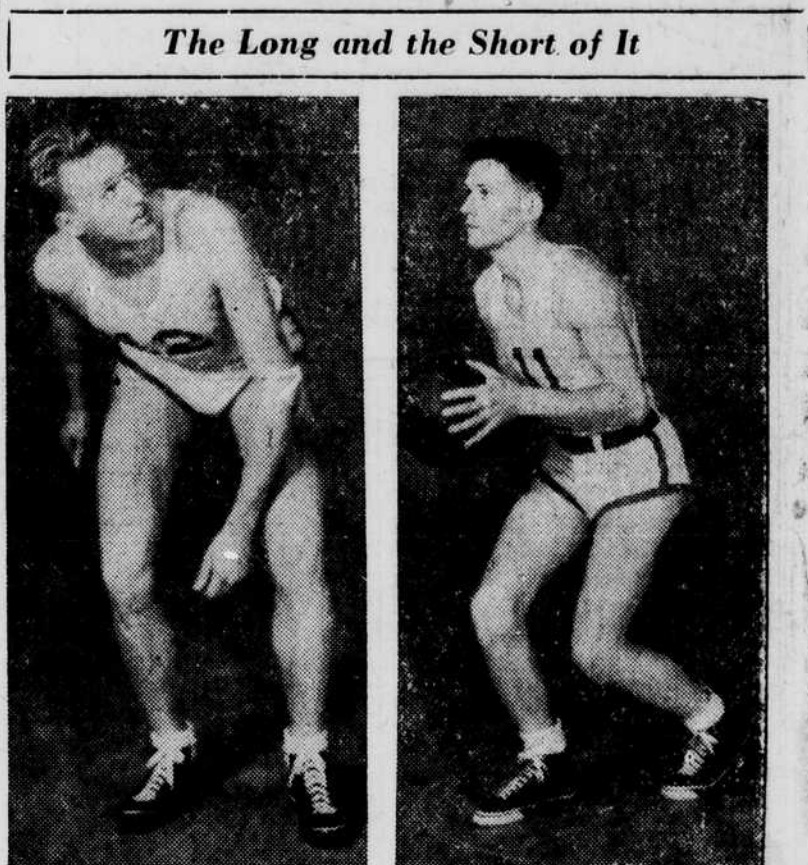

Oregon, UCLA to Demonstrate Fast Breaking Style in First Major Game at Igloo Saturday

Teams Are Interrogation Points in Respective Conference Sectors; Bruins Have Vets Will Be Interesting

Different Ruling Systems To Be Used by Teams; Card Holders Admitted

It will be northern division against southern division, tip-off against no tip-off, when basketball teams of Oregon and UCLA clash on McArthur court Saturday night. Starting time is 8 o'clock. Howard Hobson's Webfoots, approaching conference form after two practice tilts, are a question mark as far as capability in major play is concerned. The Bruins, coached by Caddy Works, are in the same category.

Both Use Fast Break
 Both teams are improved over a year ago, and both use a fast-breaking style of play, which assures a colorful, interesting exhibition. It will be the first inter-division game at the Igloo in years. The first half will be played under southern division rules, where the ball is put in play under the backboard by the team scored upon after each basket, instead of by the conventional center jump.

The Long and the Short of It
 Ray Jewell (left) center on Oregon's varsity basketball team, stretches six feet, six inches. Bill Courtney, his team mate at guard, stands five feet, ten inches. Both are important cogs in the Webfoot machine which meets UCLA at McArthur court Saturday night.

Probable Lineups
 Oregon: Silver, Lewis, Wintermute, Purdy, Courtney
 UCLA: Appleby, Bell, Ball, Rietz, Selter
 Officials: Halp Coleman and Frank Heniges.

The last period will be played under northern division rules, which require a center jump after each field goal. The contrast of the two rule systems should provide meat for the numerous arguments raging over the advantages and disadvantages offered by elimination of the tip-off.

Ball UCLA Leader
 John Ball, rangy veteran, leads the UCLA outfit. Ball was chosen as center on the second all-coast team last season. Other veterans are Orville Appleby and Marty Bell, forwards, and Bill Rietz, guard. Jack Seiter, reserve guard from last year, completes the starting lineup.

The Westwood quintet trounced Los Angeles and Compton junior colleges in opening starts. The Ducks will be handicapped for the game by absence from the lineup of two tentative regulars. Bill Courtney, "quarterback" of the team, has a foot injury and is in the infirmary. He may be in shape for limited action Saturday night. Laddie Gale, elongated center and forward, will not be eligible until the end of the term.

Oregon Lineup Listed
 Probable starting five for Oregon will be Johnny Lewis and Dave Silver, forwards; Ray Jewell or Urgel Wintermute, center, and Ken Purdy and either Courtney or Bob Anet, guards. Wally Johansen is certain to see action at forward. ASUO books will admit students to the game.

Marry and Raise GPA's Says TCLACA Society

Marry and improve your grades! Better still, marry another student and be practically certain of a B average. Significant figures from the registrar's office show the grade point averages of married students last year, where both were attending the University, attain the high point of 3.05, or better than a B average for the 12 student couples. This was .18 of a point above the average of those married students who had only one of their twosomes in school, and .60 over the all-University average of 2.45. Psychology deciles were also placed under the microscope by Assistant Registrar Clifford Constance, with results that bore out the GPA variance. It was found that student couples had a rating in the psychological examination of 7.79, whereas the couples with only one member a student had but a 5.85 average. The all-university psych average was 6.21. In calculating the percentage of married students who exceeded the University averages both in GPAs and psychology quizzes, further discoveries were made. Seventy-seven per cent of the married couples bettered the University grade point average and 79 per cent improved on the psych rating, while 75 per cent of the student-outside combination exceeded the all-school scholarship figures and only 48 per cent of

Santa Claus Visits, Dancing, Vaudeville Will Add Gaiety At Xmas Revels Saturday

Glenn Griffith's Carolers, Tri Delt Trio, Hal Young, Faculty Dance Chorus, Magician Hopkins Entertain

Vaudeville, surprises, and Santa Claus will provide merriment and entertainment for spectators and dancers. Campus clothes will be worn at this all-campus dance. The Revels, now an annual event on the campus, was introduced in 1931 as an informal get-together in which students and faculty members cooperated. Originated by Karl W. Onthank, dean of personal administration, the dance featured a group of carolers directed by S. Stephenson Smith and a Christmas trees on the women's athletic field, south of Gerlinger hall.

This year the Christmas party will feature Glenn Griffith's carolers, Hal Young, Tri Delt trio, faculty dance chorus, George Hopkins appearing as a magician and a novelty number. Paul Kiepe of the speech division will be master of ceremonies and according to Harry Hodes, Christmas Revels co-chairman, will present "novelty radio ideas with their latest tear-jerkers and laugh-pullers." Under the management of Clarence Elle and Eva Klink, decoration chairmen, Gerlinger hall will take on a true holiday spirit. The decoration chairmen are being assisted by Leonard Hufford, greenery; Janet Johnston, dance room; Robert Winestone and Donald Hunter, lighting; Sybil Scroggie, main room; Mary Seely, ceiling; and their committees.

Hayward Gridiron Will Be in Grass For Stanford Game

Callison's Contract Is Recommended For Renewal by Athletic Board in Meeting Late Last Night
 Oregon will have a turf field by next fall and Prince (Prink) Callison will again head the Webfoot football forces. These were the chief items announced late last night at the conclusion of a long meeting of the Oregon athletic board. The board announced that plans were being put in motion for the turfing of historic Hayward field and that a gala dedication of the grassed gridiron was to be held on October 2, when Oregon meets Stanford here. Recommendation to the state board of higher education that Callison's contract be renewed for another season also was voted by the board members, who expressed confidence in the Webfoot mentor's coaching ability. A sub-committee of six members, headed by Athletic Manager Anson Cornell, was named by the board to study details of financing and turfing Hayward field. This group plans to complete its studies as soon as possible in order that actual work may be begun immediately. Committee Named Members of the turf committee (Please turn to page two)

Burglar Visits Alpha Psi and Leaves Shoes
 "Man on second"—that general alarm sounded in sorority houses when males intrude into the upper floor "sanctum sanctorum"—did not echo through the halls of the Alpha Phi house during the dinner hour Tuesday night and as a result bathrobed Rita Wright stymied the efforts of a shoeless, white-stockinged burglar. Miss Wright startled the "second story man" in the corridor. She was surprised by his appearance in the forbidden territory and quaried him concerning his motives. The potential burglar said he was looking for a girl and explained "his feet were wet so he left his shoes downstairs." "You can't stay up here," Miss Wright exclaimed, "Dean Schwering would have a fit if she knew you were here." At these words the man chuckled and ran into the nearby bathroom. Fearing to follow him, Miss Wright ran to the kitchen for aid from houseboy Harlan Duncan. The pair returned to the second floor in search of the culprit. He had left via the fire escape taking $1.50 with him. He left his shoes behind.
