

Miss McCornack Wills $500 Gift

Students Studying Music For Religious Purpose Will Get Benefit

A $500 bequest by Miss Mary Elizabeth McCornack for the benefit of students studying music for religious purposes has been announced by John J. Landsbury dean of the school of music, who has just heard of the gift.

Miss McCornack, who, at her death on November 15, was 75 years old, was a graduate of the University in 1882. At one time she was a music instructor here. Following her graduation from the University, she went to Boston where she graduated from the New England conservatory of music.

At the time of her death she was a resident of Eugene. She was an active alumnae and always took a prominent part in the musical affairs of Eugene.

School of Music Presents Recital

Organist William McKinney, pianist Lural Burgraf, and contralto Barbara Ward, combined their artistry last night in a recital presented by the school of music in the music auditorium.

The program was opened with an interpretation of Bach's characteristically pensive "Fugue in G-minor" by Mr. McKinney, student of John Stark Evans.

Lural Burgraf, special student of George Hopkins from Albany, played a group of piano solos, among which was the melancholy Chopin "Nocturne in E-major." Mr. Burgraf's outstanding number was the Schumann "Novelletto in E-major."

The contralto soloist, Barbara Ward, vocal student of Hal Young, opened her group with the popular Tschalkowsky number, "One Who Has Learned, Alone," followed by the Campbell-Tipton "The Crying of Water." Her group was concluded with Rachmaninoff's "In the Silence of Night," and as an encore, she sang Kathleen Lockhart Manning's famous "Luxemborg Gardens." She was accompanied by Edith Farr.

Vandals Take Lead

Idaho grabbed a 7-to-3 lead in the first 12 minutes of play. With big Conkling leading, the visitors passed the home team and went ahead, 9 to 7. Idaho tied that and pulled on in front by four points at the half.

Kolberg put the Beavers within two points, 14 to 12, with a field goal at the start of the second half, but Bill Kramer of the Vandals pushed home two quick field buckets, to rush Idaho into an 18-to-12 lead. At this point Oregon State took over the controls and boomed out in front. It was 28 to 18 at one time, and the Vandals failed to seriously threaten with a brief rally.

Political Nerves Worn to Frazzle; 'Let's Go Home,' Say Weary Legislators

By MARK SWING

SALEM, March 2.—(Salem Bureau of the Emerald)—Adjournment is in the air at the 39th legislative assembly. Legislators are tired and want to go home.

As the week roll on members begin to run more and more on the nerves and those thin strings are becoming ragged. Personalities are indulged in more frequently in debate and insults pop up now and then.

Representative Vernon D. Bull, Union, didn't like something Ralph Watson of the Portland Journal said about him the other day and jumped from his seat while the assembly was in session to take Watson to task.

The little argument occurred just to the left of the speaker's rostrum and Speaker Harry Boyvin moved his gavel over to the side, meanwhile conducting the business of the house. The climax of the argument found Bull throwing an Oregonian into Watson's face. Members in the legislature commented on "bad politics" and "the power of the press."

Representative Clarence F. Hyde was in Eugene Saturday night at a meeting of the University faculty club. Legislative moves and actions were discussed. Mr. Hyde and faculty members reported an interesting session was had.

It was Hyde who led the fight against possible delay on the higher education appropriation bill in the house and crushed it through to passage.

One of Representative J. T. Mahoney's remarks raised quite a bit of comment among legislators. He made a statement during one of the discussions on the higher education appropriation about the teaching of "singing in an agricultural school."

Several legislators expressed themselves as opposed to making what could be "one of the best technical schools in the nation into a semi-liberal arts college."

"Thus duplication of courses with University courses is expensive," said Representative Clarence Hyde, Lane.

"Why doesn't the college specialize in the technical subjects, the University in the liberal arts, and both of them build up a national reputation in their own field," said Hyde, adding, "the University hasn't tried to teach agriculture or engineering."

Hunter Indicates Board Plan to Be Used Despite Delayed Approval

Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter indicated last night that restoration of Oregon higher education salaries would follow the plan formulated by the board, despite delayed approval of an $873,000 appropriation, although he was unable to make a definite statement until checking over the final results.

"We can't tell definitely yet," Dr. Hunter said, "although the appropriation was enough to restore salaries to a full-time scale 16 to 18 months of the biennium, probably starting September 1."

It was believed that delayed approval of the proposals would not make any change in the plans of the state board of higher education because they would be unable to take action until July 1, almost a month after the bill becomes effective under the 90-day suspended approval.

The twin bill restored higher education to the 1930 millage levy to become effective in 1938 and made a direct appropriation of $400,000 continuing into both years of the biennium.

Warren D. Smith, geography department head.

Students who have had two terms of general geography or general geography or advanced students in foreign trade or history courses are eligible to enroll.

Professor Lomax will stress the economic side of the geography of Africa. Dr. Smith will handle the principals of physical geography of the continent.

The course will be held on Tuesday and Thursday at 9 o'clock, with a third hour lab period to be arranged.

Because they have what smokers like, Chesterfields are humming right along . . .
