The Passing Show

Sixth Cabinet Albanian Revolt Duke's Wedding New Deal Wins

By PAUL DEUTSCHMANN

New Popular Front

War-torn loyalist Spain formed its sixth government since the beginning of the conflict yesterday with socialist-physician Dr. Juan Negrin at the reins of a popular front cabinet, cut in size, and determined to unite all factions to "win the war."

Two communists, three socialists, two left republicans, a Basque nationalist, and a union republican make up the nine-man cabinet. War activity was centered on the Madrid and Bilbao fronts with rebels driving closer to the Basque capital and peeping away on the Madrid trenches.

King Zog's Army

King Zog's Albanian army successfully quelled the two-day rebellion in the southern part of the tiny kingdom, government reports said yesterday. Across the Adriatic in Italy, Mussolini poo-pooed ideas that the revolt was directed against Italians for their economic invasion of rich Albanian oil fields. Official sources claimed that the short-lived revolution was sponsored by communists. Statements from Rome upheld this contention.

Any Time Now

Date of the wedding that cost a crown will be announced today, Herman Rogers, contact man for the Duke of Windsor, announced yesterday. Place, guests, and honeymoon of the royal pair will also be revealed, it is expected.

No word has as yet been obtained in regard to the controversy between Edward and Baldwin over royal guests at the wedding. The Duke would have his younger brother as best man. The issue may be cleared today.

Court Upholds Again

Skipping the social security law for the present, the supreme court yesterday handed down two decisions favorable towards FDR's new deal government policies. A ruling on the AAA taxes collected before invalidation of the act indicated that the government would be able to keep almost the entire $963,000,000. Only those levies paid directly by the millers without being passed on to consumers may be refunded.

Louisiana's chain store tax, remnant of Huey Long's attempt to "Share the Wealth," was also supported by the court in a 4-3 decision. The law provides a graduated (Please turn to page two)

$25 a Smack For Kentucky Coeds Caught Kissing

By ALYCE ROGERS
The girls at Berea college in Kentucky are either without hands or they just don't hold hands or kiss in the dorm "parlor." They are allowed to entertain boy friends three evenings a week between the hours of 6 and 7. If caught hand-holding, they are fined $10, and if caught osculating, they are fined $25. What a price to pay for a little bit of love!

Nuts to Housework

That home economics coeds at South Dakota State college are out to capture husbands so they can darn socks and wash dishes in a scientific manner the rest of their lives has been refuted by Prof. W. F. Kumblein, head of the sociology department. Fifty-three per cent of the coeds answered a questionnaire made out by Professor Kumblein by asserting that they would prefer a profession or work outside of the home to housework.

A New Curriculum

The boner pulled by a University of Minnesota freshman who wanted to know "what building the campus is in" was bad, but the one made by an adult visitor to the University of Cincinnati was worse. A professor took the trouble to conduct the visitor and his party all over the campus and finally to the football stadium. "This," exclaimed the professor "is our stadium!" Impressed, the visitor studied the grounds for an instant and turned to the faculty member. "This is all very nice, but I hear you have a very fine curriculum here. Would you take us through that next?"

'High Class' Story Teller Is Richard Halliburton Travel for Fun, Money

Adventurer Is Third to Swim Famous Hellespont; Paddles at Panama at Regular Tonnage Rates

By HUBARD KUOKKA

A high class story teller this Richard Halliburton the romantic world travel author, lecturer, who makes his living by telling a helluva good time bumbling about here and there, and then telling us stay-at-homes all about it.

He was the third one in romantic history to swim the Hellespont. There had been the passionate Leander, whose fire for his girl friend on the other side was the only good reason for ever doing it. There was Byron, the poet, who did it for the fun of it, and then Halliburton, who did it because the others did. Halliburton does these unusual things to satisfy his craving for the "out of the ordinary," and writes books about it.

"My most difficult feat was swimming the Panama canal," he said. "It was 50 miles of swimming and I blocked traffic for eight days. All those big battleships, merchantment, and destroyers could do was sit around and knit while I made my way through."

Blocks Canal
His blocking traffic for this time as he swam the canal brought much protest from the canal officials and they were going to soak him a lot of money for all the water it took to move him through the locks but he is a plenty fast talker, this energetic, black-haired, dark-green eyed Halliburton, and he says that he told the canal keeper, "See here, I'm the S.S. Richard Halliburton, and I'll pay the regular tonnage rates you charge all traffic through this canal."

So Halliburton talked the man into letting him through on the basis of his weight which was 140 pounds. "I was a one thirteenth of a ton ship and on that basis it cost me 36 cents to get through. I have the record of being the (Please turn to page two)

The reality of the actual assassination of the Romanoff family was vividly portrayed by Mr. Halliburton. All of the royal family were killed in a basement cell by Prmakov and two assistants. This cleared up the question of whether there were any remaining Romanoffs.

He related of his taking a plane to Persia, and inducing a Persian princess to ride with him in his airplane, as did the Arabian prince with his magic carpet.

When asked what he planned to do next, Mr. Halliburton said he was going to travel the route of the China Clipper in a Chinese junk from China to San Francisco. He plans to do this in the summer of 1938, and broadcast from the junk to the San Francisco exposition.

Soph Revote Is Called Off

Dispute Collapses When Burdick Withdraws; Kemler Heads Class

Coming as a surprising climax to the two-week dispute of the results of the regular sophomore election, May 6, announcement was made last night that the revote election scheduled for today has been called off due to the withdrawal of Denton Burdick from the race for junior class presidency. The settlement was made over the weekend, according to Harry Weston, soph president.

The revote was ordered scheduled for today by the ASUO judiciary committee, following a hearing on the Burdick party protest last week over the use of proxy votes. The committee handed down its decision Thursday regarding the illegality of the proxy votes used in the election.

Doubt was expressed by Burdick following the order for the revote that he would contest the election of his rival. No plans would be made by his ticket to line up the support of the houses which backed him before, he commented, adding that he was "sick of the whole rotten mess and all the trouble it had caused."

The judiciary committee, meeting again yesterday, decided that (Please turn to page two)

Books Concentrated, Easy To Locate in New Libe; Reporter Describes Set-Up

(Editor's note: This is the second of a series of articles concerning Oregon new library building. Today's article tells about the location of books in the new building.)

By LEW EVANS

Books, once spread from stem to stern over Oregon's old libe, are now concentrated and adequately housed in the new structure. Easy to reach are the book in the new library, a survey showed yesterday.

Circulation department now holds the central part of the main floor. Students entering walk directly across the hall into the room containing the desk, an information desk, and, on the end, the card files.

Behind the desk the lift operates constantly, while requests for books are sent to the different floors by a pneumatic tube.

In the east wing is the reserve room. At present only English reserve is kept there, but both Condon and B.A. will be moved into the same room at the end of the term.

There is but one desk, with the stacks behind them. The reserve stacks are above, reached by a ladder.

Room 30, now known as the open shelf reserve, is on the second floor. In the front of the building is the reading room, and directly across the hall is the desk and stacks. On each side of the desk is a gate where students may enter and look over the shelves of books and make their choice.

The books are on shelves under the professors' names. On the east side is the rare book collection, containing valuable collections printed in the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries.

On the west side is the Oregon collection, containing old Oregon novels, histories, biographies, and a mass of information on state landmarks, history and industries. School catalogs are now kept in (Please turn to page two)

Brilliant Pitching, Slugging Puts U. O. In First Place; Marshall Takes Mound; Pennant in Balance Today

PULLMAN—Special—May 17—Seven and two-thirds innings of brilliant relief hurling by Bill Marshall and a slugging Oregon finish topped Washington State from the conference lead here today and left the hustling Ducks in top spot by a fraction of a game. Oregon won, 8 to 6 in the tenth inning, after WSC had gained a five-run lead in the first three cantos and had come from behind to knot the count at 6 all in the ninth.

Marshall, who pitched only one inning of conference ball last year, stepped to the mound in his first conference appearance of the season and set the rampaging Cougars back with two runs and three hits. Bill Sayles hurled the last inning for Oregon, fanning the last three men in the WSC batting order to hold a two-run lead amidst by the Webroots in the first half of the inning.

Bishop, WSC lead-off man, homered off Bob Hardy who opened on the mound for Oregon. Two walks, two hits, an error and two stolen bases gave Washington State two more runs before the side was retired in the first.

Marshall Enters Game
Marshall relieved Hardy in the second after two men had hit, one was out, and a pair of passes had forced in WSC's fourth run. He retired the side without further scoring and gave one run in the third on a hit, a fielder's choice, and an error. From the third until the ninth Marshall gave only two hits and was never in trouble.

WSC's final run, which tied the score in the ninth, came on a hit and an error on a close play at first base when Shortstop, Gordon's throw was high. Although two men died on base in the first, Oregon's first scoring came in the fourth when the Ducks pushed across three runs. McLean singled but was forced at second.

As Gordon was safe on a fielder's choice, Sienko, WSC hurler, walked Hurney. Smith was out to Bishop on second base. Sayles, hitting for Amato, drew a base on balls and Thomas, slugging Oregon catcher, tripled to score all three men. Thomas died on third as Marshall grounded to Sienko, ending the inning. Oregon scored again in the sixth (Please turn to page two)

Bees and Beavers Hold Respect of Physiologist

By MORITZ THOMSEN

Dr. A. R. Moore, professor of general physiology, has no end of respect for bees and ants.

"They're great practical psychologists," he says. According to Dr. Moore any animals who live together in great numbers develop great powers of cooperation. The bee for instance will find a supply of honey, and returning to the hive will not only tell his buddies the exact place where the honey can be found, but he also in some way indicates the number of bees that should be sent out to get it.

Beavers who also live in villages and who build houses within the village have developed to, he says. Dr. Moore himself has observed beavers who after building their houses found that the stream in which they had built them was not large enough to cover the roofs. They were not at all dismayed and after looking over the situation they dug a channel to a nearby stream so that more water would flow their way. When this was still not enough, they swam upstream and worked on the stream, straightening and deepening the channel.

Just as a bee can tell when a person is afraid, by the nervous movements that a person may make, so the dog who is perhaps one of the greatest practical psychologists of all can sit in his corner and analyze character, thinks Dr. Moore.

"A dog doesn't worry and try to figure things out," says Dr. Moore. "He just sits there and observes." To him every movement of a hand means something, and the tone of a voice or an unconscious mannerism can mean more for a dog than many humans can see.
