

Three Formal Occasions on Senior Slate

Lunch, Baccalaureate Commencement Is Set For May 29, 30, 31; Tickets to be Sold

Three formal occasions are scheduled at which the class of 1937 will form a procession and march in a body, according to the printed instructions released yesterday for graduating seniors. Clad in cap and gown, seniors will observe these events during commencement weekend, May 29, 30, 31.

These will be the University luncheon at John Straub Memorial building Saturday noon, the baccalaureate service at McArthur court Sunday night, and the commencement exercises at McArthur Monday morning.

Free Luncheon

Plans have been completed for the luncheon procession, at which all graduates in academic costume are admitted free of charge, to form promptly at 11:55 a. m. on the north side of Fifteenth street across from the ROTC barracks.

The baccalaureate service is scheduled at 8 p. m., but the class must be on hand at 7:40 to give time for forming the procession with class officers at the head. In case of bad weather the class will assemble in the corridor on the south and west sides of the court.

Grads Leave First

At the end of the service the graduates will march out in the same order before the audience leaves the building. The class will pass out the east aisle, and at the rear of the court turn to the west and go out the same door they entered, moving down University street to allow the rear of the line to pass from the building.

The commencement exercises on Monday are scheduled for 8 o'clock, but every graduate should be on hand at 7:30. As the class is large, it must be arranged in several groups according to the degree to be received. Some of these groups to be announced later will be arranged in alphabetical order, according to the senior instruction sheet released by the alumni office.

Large Group Expected

Large attendance is expected at the class reunions, according to reports received by Elmer Fansett, alumni secretary. Reunions of the classes of 1887, 1897, 1907, 1912, and 1927, will be held during the weekend and at the luncheon. Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter will speak at the luncheon.

The alumni office in Friendly hall will be selling tickets for families and visitors who wish to attend the luncheon, between May 26 and 29, according to Fansett. Attendance is free for the baccalaureate and commencement services, with free reserved tickets for guests of seniors and special visitors.

Insignia Arrives for Coronation

Colorful and impressive were all the ceremonies in Westminster Abbey during the coronation of King George VI. This radiophoto from London shows the royal regalia was brought from the altar for the final services. Bishops are shown bearing the royal orb, the imperial scepter, the ampulla, and St. Edward's crown.

Playgoers Want 'Ah! Wilderness'

Theatregoers today demand variety on their season's bill of fare, as evidenced by results of the balloting Friday and Saturday nights of "Pygmalion" audiences at the University theatre. The management, in an attempt to find out what the playgoers themselves liked, asked members of the audience to list their preferences for the '37-'38 season on the campus.

"Ah! Wilderness" was tops with a considerable lead, "High Tor" and "Sturday's Children" were closely contested for second and third place, and Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" was fourth.

Of the thirty plays suggested, quite a number have not as yet been released for production, the original owners still holding exclusive rights, according to Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt, drama director. Some other plays, although released, are still under too high a royalty to come within the University theatre's budget.

In considering the play schedule for next season, whether or not next year's group of actors will cast suitably in certain parts, is also to be considered, Mrs. Seybolt says. She assures playgoers, however, that every effort will be made to include on the coming season's program two or more of the top plays, and if possible, two of those suggested by the "Pygmalion" audiences.

Strange Diggers Clam Hunting On UO Campus

Those who walked past the old libe yesterday, perhaps noticed a group of students rummaging in the upturned dirt and making insane little cracks about clams. They probably wondered what the clams were doing up here, and whether the students ever did find enough for a good square meal.

Had they stopped to inquire what the funny stuff was, they would have discovered that these clams were not particularly good to eat, having been dead for some few hundred thousand years. The clams happen to be fossils left here when this part of the country was under an epicontinental sea and due to sedimentation and later great pressure, the little clams are fairly well preserved.

Dr. Warren D. Smith of the geology department didn't seem very much surprised when shown a few of the specimens. "You can find them all over the campus," he said, "if you dig deep enough."

Hustling Ducks

(Continued from page one) when Gordon hit a home run ball which would have cleared the left-field bank on Howe field by several feet. He scored again in the eighth to knot the count when he singled and Hurney was safe on Carlson's bobble of a drag hit, Smith bunted and was safe as Gordon crossed the plate. Hurney put Oregon ahead a moment later on a passed ball by Eastman but Smith was out trying to score from second on the play.

High School Girls Gather For Meeting

Prep Coeds Entertained Here Saturday; Visit New U. O. Buildings; AWS Guests at Tea

Two hundred fifty of Northwest Oregon's leading high school girls and their deans attended the annual one-day meeting of the Northwest Oregon Girls and Deans held Saturday on the University campus, announced Miss Virginia Hartje last night. Miss Hartje, dean of girls of the Woodrow Wilson junior high school of this city, was co-chairman of the affair.

Mrs. Clifford Constance, dean of girls at the Eugene high school, was the other chairman. Mrs. Constance, who has been past president of the organization for the past year, was chosen president for the coming term.

Discussion Held

During the morning, following registration, the girls attended discussion meetings, led by the different schools. John Casteel, head of the speech division of the University, spoke to the girls on "Beauty." In the afternoon Mrs. Eric W. Allen lectured on the same subject.

The physical education department of the University turned over its equipment to the girls for their use during the noon hour. Nearly all sought the swimming pool, leaving the ping pong tables and tennis courts deserted.

Luncheon Served

Luncheon was served in alternate shifts in the men's dorm, Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed in charge. The afternoon closed with a tour of the campus, girls seeing the new University buildings.

AWS was hostess at a tea in Gerlinger from 4 until 5 o'clock. Phi Theta Upsilon with Harriet Sarazin in charge, serving.

Famous Oratorio To Be Sung May 21

Haydn's 'The Creation' To Be Given by Polyphonic Choir; Petri Director

"The Creation," famous oratorio composed by Joseph Haydn in 1798, which will be sung by the University Polyphonic choir at 8 o'clock May 21 in the music auditorium, is still a favorite with audiences in spite of the passage of 139 years.

This oratorio was composed at a time when Haydn had found fame and recognition in other types of music. His friends had urged him to try his hand once more at the oratorio. This he did, taking the words from Genesis of the Bible, and from Lidel's imitation of "Paradise Lost."

At the time he was composing the oratorio, Haydn stated that he never felt more pious in his life. The completed masterpiece, first played at the Schwartzberg palace in Vienna. The oratorio was then produced in London, Lisbon, St. Petersburg, and Paris. Everywhere it was produced it made a profound and lasting impression.

Paul Petri, professor of music, will direct the choir in singing "The Creation," which depicts the creation of the world from chaos to complete development with man as ruler.
