

DUCK TRACKS

By ELBERT HAWKINS

A prognostication percentage of between .600 and .700 on national football games isn't exactly disastrous, but it is far from being good enough to qualify you for syndicate features. However, since last Saturday, I picked up a little trick from another proggie, which should add at least 50 points to the old percentage.

Most of the boys now forget tie games, and don't count 'em unless their guess was also a deadlock. If you pick 20 winners out of 30 some Saturday, your average is .666, but if five of those are ties, the old percentage zooms up to .800. Savvy?

This week we'll pick games by sections, from the coast, East, Midwest, South, Rocky mountain, and the Southwest, which should give a fair sample. Forty-six games is the total.

Three big contests in the Coast conference are billed for today, all of them figuring in the championship. Number one in interest finds California's undefeated first-place Golden Bears locking with the University of California at Los Angeles. The Bears will remain unbeaten with a 20 to 6 victory over UCLA.

In a "natural," one that might go either way, Oregon State's dangerous Beavers face Stanford at Palo Alto. Lon Stiner's boys have been showing brilliant football, but Stanford is due for a rise. Stanford 13, Oregon State 6.

Southern California's first division Trojans hook up with a Washington State club which to date has failed to surprise experts. Southern California in a walk, 19 to 0. Too much Schindler.

Oregon and Washington are the only clubs not playing conference games, although the Huskies tangle with Idaho in a king's-x affair. Idaho's Vandals, who made fans take notice early this season by upsetting Oregon State, will put up a terrific scrap, finally losing, 13 to 7.

Willamette and Puget Sound play in a Northwest conference game, which Spec Keene's Beavers should win, 14 to 0. Albany college will fall before Pacific university (Anse Cornell's former proteges), 13 to 0. Linfield and Portland university should put on a brilliant show, the Pilots finally edging out, 7 to 6. San Francisco university 12, Loyola 0. St. Mary's 13, College of Pacific 6. That completes the western set-up.

East

One of this section's toughest to pick is the Temple-Holy Cross fracas. Pop Warner's Temple lads get the choice this time, 7 to 6. Another 7 to 6 prediction is Cornell's tight squeeze over Columbia.

Dartmouth 19, Yale 0. Pittsburgh 20, Carnegie Tech 7. Harvard 14, Princeton 0. Navy 25, Pennsylvania 0. Colgate 14, New York U. 6. Boston college 27, North Carolina 7.

Tulsa 19, George Washington U. 0. Rutgers 13, Lehigh 0. West Virginia 19, West Maryland 0.

Army 20, Virginia Military 0. Midwest
The fighting Irish of Notre Dame haven't fought so much this season, and will fall before a superior Minnesota machine, 26 to 6. To pick a winner of the Northwestern-Wisconsin game you'll

Mythical Northwest Title Captured at Portland by Final Quarter Point Spree

Monkus and Rudy Mucha, Running Mates From Chicago Pace Winners, Intercept Passes; Mabee and Stenstrom Star

A first quarter touchdown plus a wild scoring spree in the final period gave the Husky Babes of the University of Washington a 26-0 victory over Honest John Warren's Oregon frosh under the lights of Multnomah stadium in Portland last night.

The Washington freshmen struck a vital blow in the opening minutes of the first period when they marched to the frosh 6-yard line on a sustained power drive. Backed to their goal line, the Warren men tightened and held for downs, kicking out to the Washington 33-yard stripe immediately.

Husky Pups Return

Undaunted the Husky pup came snarling back, and on six plays planted the oval back of the Oregon goal line, Monkies Mucha, running mates from Chicago, took turns running the ball down the field, marching 63 yards to the Frosh two where McAdam dove to pay dirt, Vani again converting.

The count stood until early in the final session when the Babe ground offensive began clicking. Monkies and Rudy Mucha, running mates from Chicago, took turns running the ball down the field, marching 63 yards to the Frosh two where McAdam dove to pay dirt, Vani again converting.

Take to Air

Trailing 14-0, the frosh opened up with an overhead attack in an attempt to score, but the game effort of the Oregon yearlings backfired when pass interceptions in quick succession gave the Seattleites two more scores.

The final Babe tally was made by Harmon, sub fullback, who snagged a Duckling pass and ran 40 yards to score.

The Washington Babes rolled up 16 first downs to the Frosh's 4. Fullback Stenstrom was the offensive star for the Ducklings while Halfback Mabee and Center Samuelson stood out on defense, have to flip a coin. Northwestern wins out by a 7 to 6 count. Missouri should edge out a 6 to 0 victory over Iowa State in another thriller.

Nebraska 13, Indiana 0. Oklahoma 6, Kansas State 0. Drake 33, Grinnell 0.

Iowa 14, Purdue 7. Illinois 19, Michigan 6. Detroit 14, Villanova 0. Ohio State 28, Chicago 0.

South
Fordham and North Carolina are about a toss-up. The Rams should blossom a little brighter than North Carolina, beating them, 14 to 12, in a scoring melee. Maryland and Florida are due for a donkeybrook, the former tripping, 7 to 6. Mississippi will sneak off with a 6 to 0 win over Tulane.

Vanderbilt 19, Georgia Tech 0. Centenary 12, Mississippi State 0.

Duke 26, Washington and Lee 0. Alabama 20, Kentucky 7. Rockies
There'll be a couple of routs in the mountain section. Colorado will humiliate Colorado Mines, 40 to 0, and Utah State will crawl all over Colorado State, 35 to 0.

Southwest
From the good old Southwest, where upsets are plentiful, another Saturday of close games is on tap. Another good old-fashioned toss-up brings together Texas and Southern Methodist. I'll stay with Southern Methodist this time, 7 to 6.

Baylor 14, Texas Christian 0. Arkansas 6, Texas A. & M. 0. Auburn 20, Rice 0. Texas Tech 13, Oklahoma A. & M. 0.

California Bears Face UCLA Bruin In Important Tilt

Oregon State Meets Indians; Trojans to Face Cougars

California's undefeated Golden Bears, and the twice beaten and once tied Bruins of UCLA, will tangle Saturday in the feature game of the Pacific coast conference schedule.

UCLA is given little chance to upset the hard-charging Bears, but sports fans still remember the difficult time California has had in subduing their "little brother," and the game is expected to attract one of the largest throngs of the season through the gates of the Los Angeles coliseum.

Staters Play Stanford
Oregon State's rejuvenated Beavers will travel to Palo Alto today to take on the Stanford Indians in an attempt to win their first games from the Beavers, in twelve starts. After a slow start the Orangemen are now showing the form which gave them the darkhorse rating in the pre-season prognostication.

Up at Pullman the always hard to beat Cougars of Washington State will take on an invading squad of Trojans who are expected to shoot the works as they rebound from their disastrous defeat at the hands of California. Cougar fans still remember the last Pullman invasion of the Trojan horde, when a fighting band of Cougars led by such stellar men as Mel Hein, Turk Edwards, and Elmer Swartz, upset a heavily favored USC team.

Washington's Huskies, smarting from their Stanford defeat, will attempt a comeback at the hands of Idaho, one of the conference's two king's-x members. The other king's-x member, the undefeated Grizzlies of Montana, will take on Montana State.

Matty Mathews Picks Waskowitz

PORTLAND, Oct. 29.—(Special)—The best passer on the coast?

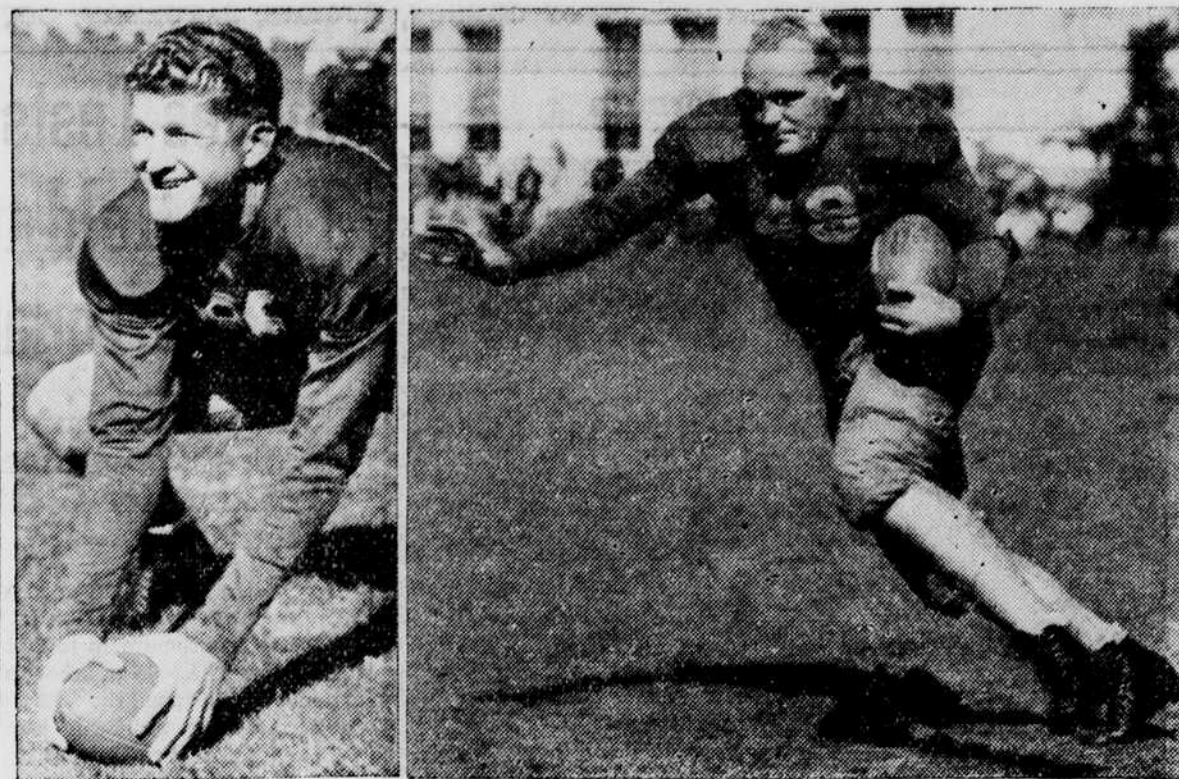

If you ask Matty Mathews, veteran University of Portland mentor, it's Captain Fritz Waskowitz of Washington by quite a margin. Mathews, incidentally, ought to know. He has specialized in aerial offensives for years and developed the great Skippy Stivers, who led Idaho to its spectacular victories of the 1920's.

Center, Quarterback Among the Unbeaten

These boys back up the line today for California's undefeated Golden Bears in their clash against the Celans. Bob Herwig, left, is rated one of the conference's top pivots, while John Meek plays quarterback and calls signals. Two weeks from today you'll see these boys in action against Oregon in Portland.

Slugger Joe Gordon Reaches Pinnacle of Yankee Farm Chain

Former Webfoot Second Baseman Is Ready To Step Into Shoes of Tony Lazzeri; With Present World Champs

By GEORGE PASERO

When the murderous New York Yankees trot out on the diamond in St. Petersburg, Florida, next spring to loosen up muscles cramped by a winter of idleness, a new figure, unfamiliar to big league fans, will step up to the platter and whale away for the fences.

He will be Joe Gordon, the University of Oregon's contribution to big league baseball, and he will make the jump to the midst of the Yankee Murderer's Row hailed by every baseball scout from here to the Three-Eye league and every sports scribe from Portland to Newark as the next Joe McCarthy rookie sensation.

Yankee Scouts Nab Him

Gordon has been tabbed as Yank material ever since he cavorted on the Duck campus, the Yankee scouts keeping close track of his exploits in college, and then grabbing him off in 1935 and sending him to Oakland for seasoning.

But the story of Joe Gordon's rise to baseball prominence dates back farther than that. About six years ago he was a promising kid on the Jefferson high nine of Portland.

At the same time on another Portland high school club (Franklin by name) a big kid that handled himself like a coming ball player was carving a name for himself in Portland interscholastic baseball.

He was Ray Koch, and for the next three years his name was destined to be linked with that of Gordon's.

Came to Oregon

Both of these kids came to the University of Oregon campus scoring offers to turn pro, and after a year on the frosh diamond aggregation, they formed the spearhead of an Oregon drive that brought the Webfoots champion.

Harriers Will Have Chance at Awards

With minor letters definitely assured Oregon runners finishing in the first half of the field at the annual Hill Military Thanksgiving cross-country run, Bill Hayward's harriers, coached by Sam McGaughey, settled down this week to strenuous training.

Hayward's announcement of the award of letters has injected new life and spirit into McGaughey's contingent of varsity prospects which number around the thirty mark.

This is the first time that the minor "O" has been given for cross-country work.

Crawford Lyle, Oregon's fastest pacer last year, will form the nucleus of this year's squad which will invade the Rose City the latter part of this month.

The surprising mid-season form of Kermin Stori, former Benson star of Portland, has bolstered hopes for an Oregon victory.

Other hill and dalers who have begun to reach top conditions are Bob Neese, long-winded two-miler, Wayne Mackin, Bob Mitchell and Jim Schriver.

Ducks Travel To Rose City For Next Tilt

Babe Hollingbery's Cougars to Furnish Oregon's Webfoots With Opposition

Oregon's recently grounded Ducks travel to Portland to do battle with Babe Hollingbery's WSC Cougar's next Saturday for their first Rose City appearance since they held the Washington Rose Bowl team to a one touch-down victory last November.

Since last November, Prink Callison has acquired two sophomore transfers, Ted Gebhardt, halfback, and Rod Speetzen, end, in addition to a multitude of pass-crazy sophomores.

Colorful Ducks Now

It is these sophomores, led by Bob Smith, Jay Graybeal, Paul Rowe, and Steve Anderson, who have made Oregon's coast conference representative one of the most colorful in the business.

The Smith to Graybeal combination is expected to be Oregon's most potent weapon when the time comes for the Ducks' attempts to score on the tough defensive line that Buck Bailey has turned out.

Except for a game with California's most recent edition of their wonder teams, the Cougar line has been crossed only once all season. That was by the malemites from Seattle in their game at Pullman which ended up in a 7 to 7 tie.

Washington Leads Bruins
UCLA with the brilliant Kenny Washington showing the way scored 26 points on the Ducks' mediocre defense, but Washington's flashy runs and accurate passes were more than nullified by the accurate toe of Joe Sienko, star right-hander on the Cougar baseball

Sunday's Skirmish To Be Bloody Battle

Participants Put Out Usual Long-Winded Statements

Woe be unto anyone who crosses the dividing line between the training and equipment rooms of the Igloo without first making known his identity and mission.

Years ago a couple of guys named Mason and Dixon ran a line across the United States to separate two dissenting sections, and now a couple of guys named Bob Officer and Leo Marantes have called that strip in the center of the athletic department in the basement of the Igloo the "forbidden land."

And all of this is because Bill Hayward's Trainers and Prink Callison's Managers have severed diplomatic relations and are now in the throes of a "bloody" civil war.

The warring factions will have it out Sunday morning when they clash in a touch football game at 10:15 on the practice field back of the Igloo, and until that time all strangers wishing to remain in exuberant health keep away from the Igloo.

A pre-game statement from Leo Marantes, cocky captain quarterback of the Mauling Managers seems to indicate that the score will be about 100-0 for Prink's proteges.

Plenty Touchy
"Our plays are so tricky they even fool us. We've only got five, but every time we pull one it's good for a touch-down. Why, I don't think we'll even try for the extra point."

Bob Officer, leader of the "Rubergorkies," remains silent about his team's prospects. "I ain't sayin'," says he.

Lineups from the front: Miserable managers: Jim "Slasher" Davey, half; R. L. Stephenson, poet and end; Larry "How" Straight, end; Al "Slicker" Simpson, full; Bob "Rattler" Snoke, guard; Eggbert "Dutch" Rohwer, center; Bob "Zeigenfuss" Engleke, tackle; Ed "Tomboy" Thomas, half; Leo the Lamb, Marantes, quarter.

Terrible Trainers: Elmer Koskelo, the flying Finn, plays both tackles; Kat Cadanessa, both center and guard, and maybe tackle; Hubcap Hubbard Kuokka, guard and blocking back; Jim (Bring 'em back alive) Buck; Kermit the Hermit Stori, half; Squeak "The Mouse" Lloyd, full; Bob "Flatfoot" Officer, quarter.

Referees—Dennis O'Brien, Jack-rabbit Graybeal and all of the rest.
