

DUCK TRACKS

By ELBERT HAWKINS

Coaches Jack Friel and Slats Gill of Washington State college and Oregon State, respectively, are probably happy over results of the recent confab of coaches in Chicago.

Two brakes were applied to the racehorse style of play by the National Association of Basketball Coaches in their session which Coach Howard Hobson attended as the northern division's sole representative.

The number of time-out periods was increased from four to five, and the rule makers provided for optional use of four ten-minute quarters in place of the usual 20-minute halves.

It's plainly evident that racehorse basketball doesn't fit into Gill's percentage system, and any legislation which puts a crimp in the boom-boom methods coincides with Slats' type of ball.

Washington State's Coach Friel plainly expressed his viewpoint last fall that the hoop game was getting too fast a la no tip-off, and deliberately slowed down the Cougar offense "so it wouldn't kill the lads off."

Hobby Hobson and Washington's exponent of galloping offense, Hec Edmundson, both shush-shushed the idea of their lads ever dropping dead of heart trouble, and had them drive without pity.

Coach Hobson didn't fight the idea of having five time-outs per game, either. To the contrary. He wouldn't have cared if they had decided on six. It just means that the boys can have a few more chances to catch their breath, and then horse-race just a little faster.

Forrest "Toobad" Twogood, who lifted Idaho so rapidly in the basketball world, seems to be rather on the fence about fast and slow basketball, and rule changes which effect it. His Vandals used both systems effectively last winter.

The rule group also approved the use of a four-foot out-of-bounds margin behind the backboards instead of two. A move which Hobby very definitely supported.

Oregon's northern division champion Ducks ran into just such a shortened distance against Stanford in the Coast play-off, if my memory is correct.

Brain-trusters of the basketball world also decided to bar the making of substitutions immediately after a goal has been made. This was to prevent excessive stalling.

From the camp of the school athletic manager's baseball team comes word that Saturday's game against Honest John Warren and his freshmen on the Warren mudflats will last only one-half an inning! Only condition is that the managers bat first.

Of course the coaches can go ahead and substitute at the first opportunity after the ball is in play.

"Zipper Warren will never get us out," they claim.

There will come a day . . . if baseball scorers ever had a nightmare, yesterday's Oregon Normal game was it . . . when two coaches ran in a dozen substitutes in two innings, and you have to keep their fielding and batting records straight, it's enough to make any-

Duck Nine Tips Oregon Normal, 16-8

Hobson's Team Runs Amuck in Seventh to Erase Early Deficit

It was a perfect baseball day at Howe field yesterday, but Hobby Hobson's Ducks and the Oregon Normal-ites failed to show their appreciation and piled up nothing but hits, runs, and errors.

When the smoke cleared after nine innings of very ragged baseball, Oregon was triumphant, 16 to 8, and just 31 athletes had contributed to the fireworks.

Paul Thunemann, sophomore portsider, went the route for Oregon behind rather shaky support, allowing eight singles. He struck out only one and walked but three.

Close at Start

For four innings it was quite a contest, 3 to 3, but Al Cox's Wolves started a general uprising in the fifth, batting around for five tallies.

But Hobby's sluggers did them one better in a big seventh inning spree—12 batting against two Monmouth pitchers. Starting Hurler Jake Miller was beaten off the hill with two out after eight runs had crossed the plate.

After the Wolves had shelled Thunemann for five hits in the first of the fifth Oregon trailed, 8 to 3, but Wrecker Wimpy Quinn strode to the plate in the last half and put the Webfoots right back into circulation.

Another Home Run

Third Sacker Wimp slashed a line home run which rolled against the centerfield fence for the longest hit of the season, to drive in Pitcher Thunemann and Jack Gordon. Quinn had to slide at home to make it.

The Webfoots scored their eight runs in the seventh on only three hits. Shortstop Parks for the Wolves contributed mainly to the visitors' downfall by collecting four errors. He had five for the game.

Parks wasn't alone in the booting though, for Oregon Normal's big fifth inning rally of five runs was aided by a collapse of Oregon's "million-dollar infield."

Four Singles

After four consecutive Wolves had singled, Al Cody got life on a fielders' choice, but Gale Smith threw one by Quinn at third for a gift of one run, and Quinn then tossed the ball to second where Jack Coleman got another miscue.

Oregon settled down to steady ball after the fifth and only 12 batters faced Thunemann in the last four innings.

Pitchers Miller and Mohler allowed Oregon 11 hits in eight innings, only two going for extra bases. Quinn got his aforementioned homer in the fifth, and John Yerby, rightfielder, lashed out a double in the first.

Yerby's two-ply hit drove in Oregon's first two runs. Ford Mullen, hitting for Jack Coleman in the seventh, came up with a timely single past second base to drive in two more runs, and cap the big Oregon inning.

For the Ducks Jack Coleman led in hitting with two for three. Quinn got two blows in four trips up, scoring four runs. Ellingsworth, Granden, and Szedlock paced Oregon Normal's hitting attack with two each.

one sweat . . . maybe someday the scribes can coach a baseball team—the coaches score for them . . . and the scribes can run in a few subs and reverse the nightmare . . . two gridders, Ron Husk and Paul Rowe, both out of spring practice with leg injuries, are expected to be ready for action again in a week or two.

Send the Emerald to the folks. They want the campus news.

Sigma Kappa Tossers Win Over Thetas

Tri-Delts, Co-op, and Orides Also Collect Softball Victories

By EVA ERLANDSON

Sigma Kappa defeated Kappa Alpha Theta, 21 to 9, in coed softball Wednesday afternoon. The playing was very inexperienced and ragged by both teams, and many errors were made. The Thetas gained a little in the last inning, however, and managed to hold Sigma Kappa.

Lopsided Victories

The Women's Co-op scored an easy victory over Alpha Phi Tuesday afternoon, 16-2, in their first speed and control of the co-op pitcher, Margaret Macdonald, was a little more than Alpha Phi could cope with.

The more experienced Orides team walked over Kappa Alpha Theta 17-4 Tuesday afternoon. The Orides had a much better team with superior pitching and fielding. The Thetas tried hard, but couldn't make their fielding click.

Delta Delta Delta defeated Susan Campbell, 17-10, Tuesday afternoon. Susan Campbell was handicapped with a lack of two players, and the game was quite slow.

This afternoon Alpha Phi will play Alpha Chi Omega, Chi Omega will play Women's Co-op, and Pi Beta Phi will play Susan Campbell.

6-Man Oregon Squad Faces CPS Friday, Huskies Saturday

Coach-captain Walt Cline leads his string of defending champion golfers into Washington today where they will play College of Puget Sound and University of Washington this weekend in their first away-from-home matches of the 1938 season.

Leaving Eugene at 7 o'clock this morning, the six-man team expects to reach Tacoma about 3 p.m.

Saturday morning the Webfoots tangle in a return match with the Huskies on the nine-hole University golf club in Seattle. The Oregon men will be shooting for their second win of the season over the Huskies, having swamped them, 19-8, two weeks ago in the opener in Eugene.

Although the Loggers may not be so hard to beat, the Huskies are always tough at home. Last year Oregon's championship squad barely squeezed through with a 14-13 win on the Seattle course.

Traveling for Oregon are Doc Neer, o. 1; Walt Cline, No. 2; Bill Watson, No. 3; Shelby Golden, No. 4; Ben Hughes, No. 5; and Kirk Eldridge, No. 6.
