

Extension Offers College Education to All People

Proving the lure of education to people in all walks of life, Dan E. Clark, assistant director of extension, cited the case of the sheepherder who took extension work, and became so interested that he enrolled in the University later and graduated.

Extension courses are held in many Oregon cities, such as Albany, La Grande, Salem, Corvallis, Hood River, The Dalles, Astoria, and Klamath Falls. Such subjects as art, education, sociology, and history are taught for $5 a 2-hour course. University credit is given, and regular faculty members teach. There is an extension center in Portland, where over 100 classes are taught.

Another division of the extension department is the correspondence section, which has been in operation for nearly 30 years. Students take advantage of this service during the summer. Assignments are sent to them, along with a list of required books. Work is sent back to be graded, and the final examinations are taken under the supervision of the high school superintendent or principal. Most courses are three credit hours and cost $7.

Frosh Glee Features Triangular Stage Set

Elaborate plans for decorating the Igloo for the Frosh Glee were announced by Stan Staiger, co-chairman for the dance. The featured attraction is scheduled as a triangular stage set in the middle of the floor.

This dance is the first one of the year to have the band in the middle. Facing west, the stage will be graduated wider and higher as it goes back. Coming from the back of the stage at a 45 degree angle will be a wind tunnel blowing streamers above the floor.

A picture eight feet high of "Dopey," of Snow White fame, will also occupy a prominent position on the stage. Unusual lighting effects will also be used, Staiger claimed.

The four corners of the Igloo will display other characters from "Snow White" with lights used to reveal imitation trees.

Practice Ball Game Set For BA Majors

Harry Hodes, chairman of the committee to organize the student body of the business administration school for the BA-Lawyers softball game April 30, announced today that a practice game will be held by members of the BA school next Saturday on the field back of the ROTC building. All BA majors interested are invited to come to the practice.

The boys from "across the way" were asked to send "Queeny" Joe Devers out to chase balls in the outfield in the annual contest.

All BA majors are asked to read the constitution of the BA school on the bulletin board in the Commerce building, and sign it if they approve. As soon as 200 BA majors have signed the constitution, it goes into effect, and a meeting will be called to elect officers and to outline a plan of action.

SECOND TRIAL TONIGHT

The second case in the law school's series of moot court trials will begin tonight at 7:30 in the circuit court room of the Lane county courthouse. Suit has been brought against Sid Milligan by John Thomas for $600 damages.

The plaintiff is represented by the firm of McCully and Greenough, while attorneys for Milligan are Mulvey and Winston.

Unique Piano Music Index Compiled by Libe Workers

Unique in libraries of the United States is an index in the University of Oregon library of piano music compiled by John March, senior reference assistant of the library.

M. H. Douglass, librarian, brought the index to the attention of the "Wilson Bulletin," published by the Wilson company publishers of guides of every type when they announced that they were looking for such an index.

The work is an index to all music in collections that can be played "passing" sign until you have a lit-on the piano. Selections of one type of piece, such as complete collection to Chopin's Etudes were not included.

Cards for dance forms, duets, and two-piece piano music have been kept separately.

There are 75 titles, including 121 volumes, which have been indexed.

Many students, according to Miss Bernice Rise, circulation librarian, make use of the collection of music in the library, although there are undoubtedly many who do not make the best possible use of this opportunity. The music may be checked out for 30 days, with two possible renewals.

Some junior man in the business administration school will be chosen to work for a national company in life insurance work in Eugene this summer and next year.
