

College Swing Night To Feature O'Brien

Tonight is College Swing night at the Heilig theater, where the nationally famous Johnny O'Brien and his Harmonica Hi-Hats are appearing on the stage today and Saturday. As a special program for the University students, the band leader has consented to set aside the regular routine, and let the boys in the band play nothing but the newest and hottest swing.

O'Brien's band, with Lora Lee as vocalist, is considered as one of the top harmonica bands in America today. In the past eight months the Hi-Hats have been heard weekly on two transcontinental broadcasts, as well as appearing with almost every major orchestra in the country.

Approached on the telephone before coming to Eugene, the young harmonica artist said, "Okay, we'll just toss the regular act out of the window and let the boys go into a jam session. We will play as long and as hot as the crowd can stand it, or until the boys drop in their tracks. The gang would enjoy it anyway, so I'll just turn them loose."

Alpha Delta Sigma Elects Officers to Serve Next Year

Replacing Zollie Volchock, retiring president who will go out of office at the end of the term, Dale Mallicoat, junior in advertising, was elected president of Alpha Delta Sigma, men's national advertising fraternity, at a luncheon meeting Wednesday. The election was unanimous, Mallicoat having been the lone nominee for the position.

Other officers elected were Keith Osbourne, vice-president; Chuck Skinner, recording secretary; Willie Frager, treasurer, and Glen Pownder, corresponding secretary.

For the 1200 students not going to the Frosh Glee tonight (700 couples estimated to attend Jurgen's track meet) the Heilig is putting on a college jam session featuring Johnny O'Brien and his harmonica Hi-Hats. These touring harmonica players will ignore their usual act for once and give the audience a mixture of the latest tunes in swing style. They will also be here on Saturday.

"Of Human Hearts" with Walter Huston, Beulah Bondi, and James Stewart is the main feature on at the Mac Friday and Saturday. Frank McHugh and Jane Wyman are in the second billing, "He Couldn't Say No."

Stewart, son of a country preacher, rises to fame as a surgeon during the Civil War, but only at the sacrifices of his mother. Success goes to his head and he is forgetful of his mother when in steps none other than Mr. President and sends Stewart home repentant.

Snapshots: Robert McWade, the grouchy little general, did his last character part when he finished this film. You may remember him as Cappy Ricks in the sea stories built around that fictitious person. Anyway, after he had done his last scene in the picture, McWade wearily sat down—then slumped over, dead.

To film this cinematic drama, a colony of players and workmen were sent to Lake Arrowhead where a village, a river steamer, and a dock were constructed.

Toss of Dollar Decides Head Of Frat Council

The decision between Ron Husk and Bill Cummings for the position of interfraternity council president was decided by the flip of a silver dollar in the air by Dean Earl last night when the council vote was tied eight to eight.

Following two tie votes as called by Don Johnson, outgoing president, the two candidates accepted the 50-50 chance. Cummings called "heads," Dean Earl tossed up the coin, and it rolled at the feet of Husk settling "tails up."

Other candidates nominated were Keith Osbourne and Hank Nilsen for the offices of treasurer and vice-president respectively. Both received a unanimous ballot for their positions.

The new officers take office immediately, Johnson said last night.

German Policy Is Same As US in 1900--Asendorf

By ROD ORANGE

America's imperialism wasn't robbery but just the honest opinion of a nation of people who thought it was all right to steal, Werner Asendorf, German exchange student, said Wednesday night at a meeting of the International Relations club in the YWCA shack.

"Bluntly and without a propagandist's view," the blond German said, "I want to give the German point of view. Germany is now in the same position as the United States was at the end of the last century. Germany never became a united nation until 1900; she didn't have a chance to invade until the other imperialistic nations had done all the invading to be done.

"In Czechoslovakia," Asendorf said, "there are three and a half million Germans who want and will get their autonomy. It is not certain when Hitler will move; I am not certain whether it will come next week or in the next month. Hitler will spring a surprise; and surprised you will be — and me too," he said with a grin.

"The time is going to come when Germany will unite all of Europe under German doctrines," he said. He said that countries made up of many nationalities, like Czechoslovakia and Austria, because of their lack of unity will break down.

Hitler urged Mussolini on to Absynnia so that Austria would be free from Italian interference, Asendorf pointed out. Germany has no longer to be afraid of Italy because of Hitler's strategy and France is no longer a menace because she is losing power, he said.
