

Southern Oregon Librarians Hold Conference Here

Panel Discussions Are Order of Morning; Luncheon Follows

Southern Oregon members of the Oregon State Librarians' association will meet today in the University of Oregon library for a discussion of library conditions in Oregon. Harriet C. Long, state librarian, will preside.

Feature of the morning session will be a panel discussion of "Oregon Libraries—Whither Bound?" by Morris Isseks, research assistant of the bureau of municipal research at the University; Miss Mildred Oleson, of the Salem public library; J. E. Turnbull, trustee of the Eugene public library; and Willis Warren, assistant librarian of the University of Oregon library.

Nash Will Speak

John Henry Nash, San Francisco printer, will be principal speaker at a luncheon at the Anchorage at 12:15, when he will tell the delegates of his collection of fine printing which is being displayed in the University library.

The remainder of the conference will be devoted to a "book lovers' afternoon" when Mrs. Marian Herr, head of the children's department of the Portland library association, will discuss "Books for Children." Miss Ethel Sawyer, University browsing room librarian, will review "Recent Books for Adults."

At 3:30 the group will begin an inspection of the Nash collection, the Burgess collection of rare books, and other interesting features of the new University library.

Likes Being Independent

People irritate Clare when they praise her for doing things "in spite of being an independent."

S.S. Smith Would Retain Present College System

By SADIE MITCHELL

Opposing a plan submitted by Harry Beal Torrey, a former Stanford instructor, to abolish the present college requirement system, and in its place to substitute a purely elective system, Professor S. Stephenson Smith, of the English department, said yesterday, "Under such a plan most students would be tempted to follow the line of least resistance, allowing only a little learning to seep in through the process of osmosis.

"Students have been conditioned by 12 years of doing what they are required to do, and if suddenly all compulsory education were removed, they would not acquire as much knowledge as they do under the present system," he explained. Professor Torrey says, "Let the freshmen loaf . . . then place before them thoroughly attractive courses, and the same appetite which brought them to college will not allow them to abstain from consuming as many ideas as they are capable of digesting."

Professor Smith, however, believes that such a system would spread the range of knowledge over too wide a field, and it would make for nothing common in education. "If the proposed system could get students to be independent and self-directing it would be of great value, but it would be hard to put into practice in a state university," he said.

Professor Smith, who was personally acquainted with Torrey when the latter was an instructor at Reed college, said that the plan would be more likely to work if all university instructors were as vigorous, able, and interesting as Torrey was. "He practiced what he preached," said Smith, "and he was a very successful, and inspiring teacher."

She has never considered being an independent an obstacle to any of her personal accomplishments. The only advantages one gets being affiliated with a sorority are social, she says, and they are overrated. Clare is an authority on where to go on picnics, being an enthusiastic picnicker herself and having lived all her life in Eugene. As busy as she is, she finds time for such pleasures and has some hobbies as well.

Likes to Play Piano

She plays the piano during a lot of spare moments. She has never had a lesson but, to quote Clare, she plays with both hands.

Clare claims she has no eccentric mannerisms that she knows of, but she hates for people to read newspapers while they eat. She loves to read a book while she eats but finds it very embarrassing for a person to bury himself behind a newspaper.

tators would see only the front, and not the gaunt frame-work that was the back.

And then "Joan of Arc" was announced, and the brothers shoved her into the race. There was a moment of confusion and then suddenly pandemonium broke forth.

"My god, what have we done!" the brothers gasped.

A moment later the curtains parted and Joan rode past the bleachers to the tune of hilarious laughter, for alas, her builders had forgotten that only one side could be seen, and they had constructed their masterpiece backwards.

Joan of Arc on her great bronze horse rode past the bleachers backwards!

Sunlight Serenade Slated for Saturday

The University of Oregon symphony orchestra under direction of Rex Underwood, and band, directed by John Stehn, will participate in the entertainment of the mothers this weekend with a Sunlight Serenade to be given in the garden back of the school of music Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The duo-concert will be opened by the symphony orchestra, playing a "Polka" by Smetana, and "Dance of the Comedians" by the same composer. Both selections are from "The Bartered Bride."

The orchestra will also play a selection from the Vieux Temps concerto "Adagio Religioso," in which Ruthalbert Wolfenden will be featured as violin soloist. Liszt's "Les Preludes" will also be given.

Following the group of numbers by the orchestra, the band will give selections, beginning with Howland's "Mood Mauve." This will be followed by Colby's energetic "Headlines." The concert will be concluded with Victor Herbert's well-known "Babes in Toyland."

Monday Match

In this match, scheduled for Monday, the four reserves on the Webfoot 10-man team may get a chance to play for Oregon, relieving the regulars.

Next Saturday, May 14, the Oregon State team comes to Eugene to take on the Webfoots, and a week from then, May 21, the Webfoots go to Corvallis for a return match to wind up the match play season.

The northwest conference championship on May 28 will find the Webfoots back in Moscow where they will attempt to defend their title against the field, which includes Idaho, Washington State, Washington, and Oregon State.

and Maynard and Simpson will finish, each running a mile.

Morey in Mile

The Medley relay will have Chuck Tripp running a 220, Bob LaBonti will run a 440, Ward Wilson an 880, with Galen Morey finishing with the mile.

Last season the Duckling team romped home with every first place ribbon in their pockets. The rooks took all but one event year before last.

After the meet this Friday the track squad is hoping to get a meet with the Washington freshman team to be held in Seattle.

Bill Hayward stated that if the frosh didn't come home with the bacon that all the freshmen that competed in the meet would be thrown in the mill race.

May 28, on Hayward field, the frosh will meet the rooks in their annual dual track and field meet.
