Junior Festivities Open With Crowning Of Queen Virginia I

Inaugurated by the crowning of Queen Virginia Regan and the installation of newly-elected ASUO officers, the 1938 edition of Junior weekend got under way yesterday noon as a capacity crowd broke all records for campus luncheon attendance.

Queen Virginia was crowned at 12:47 by Junior Class President Zane Kemler, and the new ASUO officers were administered the oath of office by Dr. Donald M. Erb, president of the University.

Black-robed Friars and Mortar Board members recruited their annual crop of pledges, wending their way through the crowd to pick the outstanding junior women and men. Another procession, the Asklepiad pledges, also wound in and out among the crowd as the white-smocked, masked figures carried a draped skeleton on a stretcher.

Friars Pledge Seven

Friars pledged were President Donald M. Erb, honorary member, and Zane Kemler, Harry Weston, Bill Cummings, Lloyd Tupling, Paul Deutschmann, and Henry Nilssen.

Mortar Board tapped Betty Riesch, Ruth Tawney, Marionbeth Wolfenden, Catherine Philp, Elisabeth Stetson, Mary Elizabeth Norvell, Ruth Ketchum, and Honorary Member Mrs. John Stark Evans.

The list of Asklepiad pledges includes Herbert Iwata, Orval Anderson, James Moe, Clarence Peterson, Howard Jones, Joe Amato, Theodore Smith, Owen Miller, Don McDonald, Powell Loggan, Scott McKeown, and Donovan O. Cooke.

Sigma Delta Chi pledges stole a march on the coronation as they crowned their own "queen" on the royal platform.

Violators Dunked

Intermingled with these other activities Order of the "O" men had their day as they dunked various indiscreet males who violated campus luncheon traditions. The "O" men patrolled the green in squads, pouncing on males talking to girls, or wearing neckties or white shoes. Even women were dipped in the sunken fountain beside the new law school building as they defied the anti-talking tradition.

President Donald M. Erb bowed to luncheon tradition with all other males, appearing without his necktie to keep his head dry.

Perfect weather enhanced the spectacle as the cloudless sky showed in direct contrast to last year's windblown affair.

A check for $1000, to provide for a sinking loan fund from which students may borrow, will be presented to University President Donald M. Erb by the Oregon Mothers at the group's annual mass meeting in the music auditorium at 10 o'clock.

Although $1000 is now in the organization's account, additional funds may be received from city chapters to be included in the amount, Mrs. A. C. Greenwood, president, announced yesterday.

Mrs. C. H. Weston, past president of the Portland unit of the organization, will make the presentation of the loan fund check to Dr. Erb, who will greet the mothers.

I'M SORRY, But I'm Popular

I'm sorry about yesterday. I was so 'darn' popular that I ran out in two hours. What can you expect of the best Oregon ever?

All during the campus luncheon I nearly turned pink from blushing; but who wouldn't upon hearing the praises about my color pages, streamlined photography, and washable cover.

I'll be in strong evidence tomorrow. Pick me up at the Educational Activities Bldg.
