

Junior Weekend Event Committees Depicted in Familiar Scenes Being Transposed Into a Land of Fantasy

Harriet Sarazin and Junior Class President Zane Kemler. . . They discussed plans for the Sunlight Serenade.

Elisabeth Stetson and Hal Adams caught discussing plans for their respective weekend duties, the queen's regin and the water carnival.

Chairman Carolyn Dudley . . . She helpd make possible the libe terrace dance yesterday.

In a moment of rest from a busy weekend planning the campus luncheon, Marge Goldsmith, chairman, chats with junior class treasurer Brock Miller.

Burlesque of Canoe Fete Features Water Events; Numerous Prizes Given

The sun shone hot on the bleachers, crowded with mammas, and papas, and their University children, east of the Anchorage yesterday afternoon when the 1938 burlesque canoe fete displayed a discontinuous stream of horseplay, dunking, and contests.

The Alpha Tau Omega-Kappa Kappa Gamma float won the greatest amount of applause at the fete and was awarded a plaque.

Mary Thatcher was presented the prize for the float, which was a takeoff on a Venetian gondola, gaily bedecked with crepe paper. The prize-winning entry overturned just after it had passed the grandstand, and all its occupants were soaked including Miss Thatcher.

Winetrount Towed

Other floats entered in the hilarious competition included: A takeoff on the queen's float, sponsored by Kappa Sigma and Zeta Tau Alpha, had Queen Clarence Winetrount towed behind a canoe in a bathtub, smiling and waving pertly at bystanders and bailing water out with great gusto.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Pi Phi float consisted of a takeoff on famous men, with Mussolini and Hitler playing checkers in front; in back Arleigh Bentley played F. D. Roosevelt, yelling "My friends" in typical Rooseveltian manner. Sigma Phi Epsilon entered a simple canoe act, jiggling and acrobating and finally overturning their green dragon-like canoe.

A canoe race was held between three boats. The Sigma Alpha Epsilon canoe won first place by a nose, giving its occupants, Ralph Lafferty and Harry Low, a $1 merchandise prize order at DeNeffe's. The Phi Gamma Delta boat won second place and its occupants were given a carton of cigarettes to divide.

First event of the afternoon was a race between a canoe and a paddleboard. The paddleboard won, and Willie Harris, its pusher, was given a prize.

A diving exhibition was given by three Duck stars, Ralph Cathey, Bert Myers, and Johnny Stewart. Bert Myers was chosen as first prize winner and was given a Yardley shaving bowl and a $1 merchandise order at DeNeffe's.

Don Kennedy announced the fete, and awarded the prizes to the winners.

Zane Kemler, junior class prexy and George Jackson, campus day chairman, demonstrate the spirit of the water carnival. Hal Adams is the victim.
