First Forum Begins Today In Gerlinger

Allen, Stevie Smith, Moore, W. D. Smith, Lomax, Dahlberg Among Leaders

The first of a series of discussions on constructive methods of peace education among students and faculty of the University of Oregon will begin this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Gerlinger hall when groups of professors lead panel forums in the men's lounge, two of the AWS rooms, and alumni hall.

Dean Eric W. Allen of the school of journalism, and professor S. Stephenson Smith of the English department will lead the talk of peace and war propaganda in alumni hall.

Raw material and population pressure will be discussed in the men's lounge under Dr. E. H. Moore of the sociology department, Dr. W. D. Smith of the geology and geography departments, and Professor A. L. Lomax of the school of business administration.

International Policy

Students and faculty members who wish to talk over America's international policy will do so in one of the AWS rooms on the third floor of Gerlinger hall under Dr. James D. Barnett of the political science department and Professor Waldo Schumacher.

The armament budgets group will also meet in the AWS rooms. (Please turn to page three)

Chancellor Working on Budget to Put Before Board

Plans for the financial needs of the institutions of the state system of higher education for the next biennium are being formulated this week in the office of the chancellor, preparatory for submission June 14 at the meeting of the state board, according to information received yesterday from Charles D. Byrne, secretary to the board, and assistant to the chancellor.

The biennial budgets for higher education must be submitted to the governor by October 1 for compilation into the general budget for the legislature's meeting, which is early in January.

Preliminary figures were submitted by Chancellor Hunter to the legislature interim commission on state and local revenues some time ago. At that time, the chancellor indicated that supplementary funds, totaling $595,000 would be required to operate the state institutions with reasonable efficiency, Byrne said.

Chancellor Lists Three Special Uses

Three special uses for the funds were cited by the chancellor in submitting his request to the interim committee.

1. Appropriations for the present biennium provided funds to restore salaries for only 18 months of the current biennium, and, as a result, restoration for staff members of higher educational institutions was deferred to July 1, 1937, while salaries for other state divisions were restored on March 1, 1937. To provide restoration for the full 24 months of the next biennium will require an additional sum of $195,000.

2. For the replacement of obsolete instruction equipment and for repairs to buildings which have been deferred for a period of seven years, since 1930, a sum of $200,000 for the biennium is required.

3. To care for increased enrollment, which has mounted almost 60 per cent since the year 1933, a supplemental appropriation of $200,000 is necessary.

Greater Enrollment Is Problem

Enrollment in the state institutions is now higher than at any time in their history, according to the chancellor, with a ten per cent gain over the year 1929-30, which was the previous peak. State appropriations, however, have decreased 15 per cent since that time. The teaching force at the present time is about equal to the staff employed when there were 8,000 students on the several campuses, in contrast to the present approximation of 10,000.

The major proportion of the funds go into instructional costs (primarily salaries) with a maximum of direct benefits to the students. A distribution of expenditures for the University alone shows expenditures for instruction, including libraries, to be approximately 70 per cent of the total budget for the institution.

Unified Administration Economical

Comparisons with years prior to unified administration indicate that the administrative cost, including the expenses of the presidents' offices and the chancellor's and board's office and service divisions, have been reduced approximately $70,000 per year, or 25 per cent.

In meeting the financial situation for operating the institutions during the next biennium the chancellor has repeatedly indicated that it would be unwise to attempt to raise part of the needed funds by increasing student fees. Studies show that 70 per cent of the students in the state system are wholly or partially self-supporting, and about 15 per cent of the entire student body received loans from institutional loan funds.

Distribution of Funds Shown

Figures compiled by Budget Officer R. L. Collins show the following distribution of state funds by functions: instruction, including libraries, 58.9 per cent; service division, 4; administration, 2.7; physical plant, 13.2; dormitory bonds (University), .6; general research, 2; agricultural research, 8.6; federal cooperative extension, 6.6; and general extension, 3.4.
