

Social Life Follows Game to Portland

Oregon's social life will move almost entirely to Portland this week-end with the USC-Oregon game, leaving stay-at-homes with nothing to do but study. Maybe it's a good idea though with mid-terms next week. Oh, well! let's be gay, and face Monday's problems on Tuesday, next week.

Friday night will find the Webfoot rooters marching through the Portland streets headed for the Uptown, which is to be the scene of a big rally dance. Little Wilbur discovered in an interview with members of the rally committee that a very peppy evening has been planned to start rooters cheering for the team Saturday, long before the game starts.

No matter the outcome of the game, loyal Oregon supporters will again assemble for an evening of gaiety at Jantzen Beach. Not only dancing but stunts, yells and other features have been planned for this frolic which will begin at 9 o'clock. The rally committee and members of Skull and Dagger are in charge of the arrangements.

Phi Chi Theta Entertains

Phi Chi Theta entertained women in the business administration school Wednesday afternoon with a tea in Gerlinger lounge from 4 until 5:30 p.m. Miss Ruth May Chilcote, alumni adviser for the chapter, poured during the afternoon. A short program consisting of vocal selections by Charlotte Hill and piano numbers by Elaine Gordon added to the entertainment.

Housemother Honored

Delta Delta Delta sorority held a tea Wednesday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock at the chapter house in honor of their housemother, Miss Pearl Bonisteel, former national president of the sorority, and Mrs. Robert Taylor of Virginia City, Va., visiting national collegiate adviser. Faculty wives, townspeople, housemothers and house presidents were invited. A fireside for alumni and active members was put on by the pledges Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Erb Feted

Plans for a tea honoring Mrs. Donald Erb on November 15 are being arranged by members of Phi Beta, national music honorary. Five hundred invitations are being sent out and an interesting program consisting of selections by a string trio, vocal solos and quartet, and piano and violin numbers are being prepared.

On Entertaining
Or "Things That Make Desserts a Success."

That fraternities entertain differently is a recognized fact, and is really a good thing. But that some houses entertain well and others do not isn't so good. The fundamentals of dessert entertaining apply to most informal entertaining.

Entertaining of any sort is purely a matter of manners—knowing what to do. The slightest bit of uncertainty makes for awkward moments. On other campuses the men's houses have hostesses to direct this side of fraternity life. Recently a few of the houses have been having sorority house mothers over for dinner and to give them a few hints.

Since keeping things moving at a dessert is the chief factor making for success, the following suggestions might be checked:

Forethought—or giving attention to the set-up should include seeing that the rooms are comfortable, as well as the dessert itself appropriate. (As traditional as ice cream is—a change on a cold day might be an idea.) Studied obvious preparation is not advised, but there should be enough forethought to do away with pauses.

Start Dancing—as soon as the girls start arriving, don't stand around and try to make small talk—save that for the table.

Going into dessert—is a procedure quite well known. That of taking the house mother in first. If the president isn't dating a girl in the house the courteous thing is for him to escort the chaperon. Informal singing—at the table or around the fire helps create an informal atmosphere. Some of the houses sing at the very beginning of the evening, helping set things off on the right note.

If the houses concerned are not well acquainted more attention should be given to keeping the conversation going on topics of universal campus interest. And then don't linger at the table, just time enough for dessert and perhaps a cigarette. But for that cigarette

UO Coeds Show Good Taste, Say Portland Buyers

By MARGE FINNEGAN
Oregon coeds show good taste in their selection of campus clothes, especially sweaters and skirts, commented Doris Willis, sportswear buyer for Charles F. Berg's in Portland, who was a visitor on the campus Tuesday.

The trend of style this fall has been for separate jackets and skirts to take the place of suits for general sportswear, she reported. Tweeds and imported woolen fabric jackets, cleverly tailored, worn with plain skirts have been most popular.

Another fashion to which girls have been very partial is the reversible coat, featuring a gabardine rain coat on one side and swaggar coat of shetland or camel's hair on the other. These come in either plain or plaid fabrics.

Favorite Outfits

"Sweaters and skirts, always the college girl's favorite outfit, are much more attractive and interesting this season," she said. Sweaters with skirts dyed to match exactly are new and are enjoying wide popularity. Teal, wine, boy blue, copper tones, and rose are the best shades, and navy, black, and brown are always good.

The old cry of "I can't wear a full pleated skirt because I have large hips" doesn't go over any longer. Miss Willis went on. Skirts with from 30 to 40 pleats all the way around can be worn by girls of all sizes. Having the pleats stitched below the hip gives a smoother line and makes them easy to wear.

Suede sleeveless jerkins in slip-on or button-down-the-front styles in any of the new high shades, over soft silk shirts and with plaid skirts, make grand sports outfits too.

Proper Skirt Length

When questioned as to the proper length for skirts this year, Miss Willis replied that 15 to 17 inches from the floor was correct. This gives a leeway of two inches for differences in height or legs.

"Ski clothes are to be different and exciting this winter," she said. "Girls on other campuses are already buying parkas, as a part of their outfits. Yes, parkas will be worn, and in contrasting colors with the new 'down-hill pants.' Ski trousers will be fitted below the knee, with sox worn underneath, to keep the snow out."

Gray will be the favorite color, with navy running a close second. Contrasting, a gold parka will be correct with gray pants, and red with navy, she concluded.

Let The Emerald keep you posted on all campus affairs for only $3.00 a year.

Cutting in—is not only done but should be encouraged. It is one of the sure ways of letting the girls know that they are being enjoyed. Everyone likes to exchange every few minutes and not be with the same man all evening. In other words the fellows should be cordial to everyone.

A touch of boisterousness—is O. K., but it can be carried too far. Refusing a dessert invitation—for any reason but a full calendar is uncultured snobbishness. After all we are democratic, and that should make for friendliness and equality.

As a last gesture saying good-night to the housemother adds tone and pleases both the housemother and the girls.

Before writing this article, not trusting personal opinion too much, a few housemothers were consulted for ideas. They agreed that the fraternities would do well to review such details which might have been forgotten, as most sororities do each time before entertaining.

Classic Topcoat

The classic wool topcoat this season is often in three-quarter length. This version is smartly styled on straight lines in rose and green tweed. The skirt over which it is worn is of rose-colored wool in shetland weave, with navy wool fishnet scarf.

Suede Smart for Sport Wear; Gay Formals Favored

By KAY WALLENTINE
Your date book is filled... your program heavy... fall and winter are gay with parties. And here we are with some outfits and accessories you'll need from the football stadium to the big hotels.

Autumn has suddenly brought us the football season with its games here and there. On a quick trek to San Francisco for one of the big games we saw many of the smartest costumes of the season.

Suede has invaded fashion with great excitement. We saw more than one rugged suit revealing a new nerve and originality. A whole coat was made of suede in a dark burgundy shade which complemented a softly colored blue suede suit. These were well-cut like the best of tweeds—moulded waistlines even—little pockets—yokes, and all the finest details. And with a wool suit we saw many of the shorter suedes. They were combined modestly with tweed skirts and sweaters. But, if you cannot afford to add a whole jacket or costume of suede to your wardrobe, by all means consider an accessory or two. Possibly it will be a hat and a bag, a vestee, or even a scarf and gloves.

Individuality Stressed

The individuality of our mongrel race was stressed in the breath-takingly daring designs and the coquettish, frivolous models found lurking in the glamour and glitter spots. The indispensable black formal gown with jacket was noticed as a sleek silhouette against the skyline in the Sky Room of the Empire. The boredom of the black was broken with dramatic gold brocade on the luxurious jacket lapels. Complimented beautifully by the shaded lights in the Rose Room of the Palace, the era of 1860 was created by a young siren in a fluttering, taffeta gown, frill-waisted and petticoated, with the age-old appeal of swooning femininity.

Other Oregon graduates married last week were Beatrice Locke and Cicero Francis Hogan of Portland. The marriage took place on Wednesday, October 19.

Virginia Lillian Cobb, ex-'41, and Donald Vance Metzger, Oregon State graduate, were married on October 15. They will live in Roseburg.

A son was born October 20 to Dr. and Mrs. Claude E. Robinson, Oregon graduates now living in New York City. Mrs. Robinson was Elizabeth Manning.

Portland Mothers To Have Tea Friday

Mothers of all Portland freshmen at the University of Oregon will be guests at tea on Friday, October 28, in Portland.

Mrs. Hazel P. Schwering, dean of women, and Mrs. Alice B. Macduff, assistant dean of women, will be in the receiving line at the function.

Mrs. C. C. Wintermute is president of the organization.

Some forgetful person left his opinions of blind dating in a library book. His anonymous views seem to fit into the picture. It is titled:

THIS THING CALLED LOVE

Love You Funny Thing

It wasn't my fault. I wouldn't have taken the date, but Tommy's girl liked her and wanted to see her get around. I didn't have any excuse and they bought my ticket to the Little Theatre.

(When she came down the stairs, I grabbed Tommy. She was dressed in raspberry or something which hung on her like portieres. She had a mole somewhere on her nose, which is being a little indefinite. She had horn-rimmed glasses over eyes that totally ignored each other. Her hair was dishwater blond. She like me, of course, and told me so all the way down. When we danced I couldn't prevent her knees from knocking mine although I held her away as much as possible.

Going home she said she liked my car better than hers. I asked what kind of car she had and she said it was a Packard. I wondered what business her father was in and she said he was president of a bank. In June we were married. (Note: If the writer of this so-called masterpiece will submit his name, he will be given all due credit in the next edition.)

Dear Burkerickson:

Yesterday I saw a girl, not just a girl, but the girl. One of my fraternity brothers has promised to arrange a date for me with her.

Since this is my first year at Oregon, I'd like to know the proper blind date procedure to make a good impression on the girl.

Can you give me a few suggestions?

Sincerely,
HERE.

Dear Herb:

Your letter gives us an opportunity to make suggestions that a number of people have been asking about in regard to blind dating. In the first place, quite the nicest thing you can do, after the date has been arranged, is to phone the girl and talk to her yourself.

After the first shock of receiving such an unexpected courtesy, she will probably ask you to call. That way you can get acquainted, perhaps find a few common interests, and do much to relieve the

AWS Council Will Have Meeting Today

Advisability of bringing foreign films to University audiences will be discussed at an AWS council meeting this afternoon at 4:45 in the AWS room of Gerlinger.

AWS is considering renting a local theater occasionally to show outstanding moving pictures produced abroad. If this is done, it will probably be in conjunction with American Association of University Women. Since raising money would be the primary objective of the activity, the financial aspects will be discussed at the council meeting tomorrow.

A new treasurer will be selected by the council to replace Jean Bonness, elected last spring, who did not return to school.

tension of an ordinary blind date.

If, however, she doesn't ask you to call, your telephone conversation should at least give you some clue to each other's interests.

But do remember that one blind date doesn't give you the right to monopolize all the rest of the girl's time. If you would like to see her again, tell her so, then make your next date a little later by telephone.

Dear Burkerickson:

Blind dating for freshmen seems to be the accepted practice, but what are the rules of etiquette about it for upper classmen?

I am a junior, and as I do not go "steady," there are times when blind dates are offered me. Should I accept them?

FRANCES.

Dear Frances:

One or two blind dates a year generally cure an upperclassman, but we wouldn't advise you to refuse them altogether. There are exceptions to every rule.

The most important Don't is not to accept blind dates to formal dances, or important house dances unless they have been especially arranged by a good friend, or if it's to be a double date.

Rally dances and theater dates are the best blind bets, and will largely have to be left up to your individual discrimination.

WHEN YOU MAKE up your mind to purchase that one all-important and purpose formal, shop at Kaufman Bros. Sophisticated formalists with their swift, swirl skirts standing out stiffly with the aid of hoops; the graceful Grecian lines portrayed in white crepes and trimmed in sequins; and the picturesque strapless evening gowns with the scooped waists. They are around $19.75.

UMBRELLAS TO THE right, umbrellas to the left—practically "The Charge of the Umbrella Brigade" (with apologies to Tennyson)—but with winter coming on and the Oregon mist (no apologies) you'd better step into the Broadway and purchase an umbrella. They have a color and a pattern for any stormy day and priced from $1.95 to $3.95.

ARE YOU A kleptomaniac, do you have superstitions—it doesn't matter but go look at the new charm bracelets that Washburne's have just received. They are made out of hand carved leather and wood and show a series of different brands of cigarettes sticking out; the monotony of the schoolroom from arithmetic on down; a complete set of football equipment—all for a dollar.

WITH THE ADVENT of the campus controversy as to whether the men or the coeds are the sloppiest in their every day appearance, Burchs offer a practical solution to the coed's shoe cosmetic problem. Suede buffers like the white buff bags can be purchased here in regulation colors for cleaning either suede or fabric shoes and a miracle can be accomplished with soiled or shiny spots.

A SMART CHANGE of face at frequent intervals is just what every coed needs for her wardrobe. Hadley's selection of skirts is so vast and economical that you can have not one but several and rejuvenate your wardrobe from day to day. They are priced from $2.95 to $5.95.

STROLL DOWN TO Scobert's and look at the window display in the new hats that have just come in. Everything from pill boxes and back again. They have a wide selection of the little Russian pill boxes that Schiaparelli has recently given such a wide fanfare to.

ACCESSORIES MAKE THE costume and the Oriental Art Shop offers a special buy in printed handkerchiefs to go with every outfit. They are only 15c each.

WHEN YOU NEED a scarf to tie over your head, to put on with your skirt and sweater, or to accent your ensemble, shop at Williams' Inc. They have plaid woolen scarfs in all combinations at 49c and 59c.
