Lane County 'Dads' Club Is Organized

Constitution, Heads
Deferred to Later
Meeting; Gleemen
Entertain

At the first dinner meeting of the newly-organized Lane county "Dads," held at the Osburn hotel last night, Bert Prescott and Personnel Dean Karl Onthank were named president and secretary pro tem, respectively.

Naming of permanent officers and adoption of a constitution were deferred, after the election of a nominating committee composed of Rev. N. K. Tully, Art Morris, Bert Prescott, Bert Stetson, Dr. A. E. Caswell, James Rodman, and Dr. C. E. Hunt.

More than 100 persons attended the meeting at which several speakers, including University President Donald Erb, Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter, Webfoot Coach Tex Oliver, and Dean Onthank featured.

Dads' Problems Named

The speakers pointed out to the Lane "Dads" many of the problems that they, as parents of University students, will have to face. One was the problem of finding work for students unable to find financial means to return to the University. Also heard was Dean Onthank's report on the work of the state "Dads" organization.

Also present was K. Howard Groves of the executive committee of the Portland "Dads," who pledged the support of that organization to the Lane body.

Musical entertainment during the evening was provided by the Eugene Gleemen.

Dr. Barker Donates Facsimile of Book

A photographed facsimile of the Domesday Book, manuscript of eleventh century England, was presented to the history department by Dr. Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, Dr. R. C. Clark, department head, said.

The Domesday Book is the record of the survey of England executed for William the Conqueror in 1086. The facsimile is part of the census of Herefordshire, it is the exact size of the original copy. The photo was secured, by Dr. Barker at the public record office in London and will be turned over to the library.

The original manuscript of the book consists of two volumes. The first and larger of the two records comprises the history of the rest of England except for the most northerly counties. The second is devoted to the three eastern counties. By the king's instructions it makes a national value list, estimating the value of the land in the counties. In each county the list opened with the holdings of the king, then those of the churchmen and so on in order of their standing in the community. The Domesday Book can be seen in the museum at the public record office in London. It received a modern binding in 1869.

Alabama Polytechnic institute sororities recently staged a Go-to Church contest.

Classes will be dismissed at 11 for the meeting at which Harry Weston, ASUO prexy, will preside. According to Roy Vernstrom, student assembly chairman, the program will include introduction of Oregon's football mentor, Tex Oliver, who will in turn present the members of his team to the student body. They will discuss prospects for Saturday's game with the University of Idaho.

Dr. Stanard to Speak

Dr. Del Stanard, Eugene physician, who is a member of Oregon's class of 1914, will speak on campus traditions, and a newly-organized junior class quartet, the "Four Forties," is scheduled to sing.

Scott Corbett, rally chairman, will present Paul Cushing, yell king, who will lead students in Oregon-minded cheers.

Classes dismissed today at 11 will be made up tomorrow at the same hour.

Coulter Wins Jewett Contest With 'Vote' Talk

Thomisen, Second
Choice, Supports
Hess for Governor

Raymond Coulter, junior in law, speaking on "Why Vote?," won the first Jewett contest last night. Joel Thomisen, supporting Hess for governor, came in second. Prizes are $15 and $10.

Coulter stated that it is the duty of each citizen to vote; and to vote "no" on the issues now before the public. First do not support the idea of paying legislators $8 instead of $3, he said. Then he added the physical and mental examinations before marriage, abolishing of slot-machines, Townsend old age pension, and the anti-picketing act.

He concluded his speech with the statement, "Vote to keep the state of Oregon safe by voting intelligently."

Thomisen Backs Hess

Thomisen, speaking for the Democratic candidate for governor, argued that Hess is representative of basic principles of government. He believes that Hess will fairly represent every portion of our state, that he is impartial. There was no third prize as one of the rules of the Jewett contest fund states that only two prizes may be given when there are less than eight contestants.

Judges were: Kenneth Shumaker, head of the English department; and John L. Casteel, and Mark Hanna of the speech department.

Walter Eschebeck, instructor in speech, was the chairman; and Mr. Casteel was the timekeeper.

Korean Painting Now In Museum Display

A Korean painting of Jizo is now on display in the Japanese section of the museum. It dates from the fourteenth century, during the Koryo period.

Jizo is attended by ten Emoron of Hell and six Kwan Yin. He is commonly known by the Japanese as he usually stands at the bank of the river Saino Kawa, which is on the way to hell, and helps children pile their stones for prayer.

The double exhibition room on the mezzanine of the museum is being prepared for Homecoming with monks-cloth refinishing and by the addition of benches.

Robinson Tells Class Women Walk Like Ducks

"The term 'webfoots' might have been applied to Oregon from observing the sloppy waddle of the women's walk," said Horace W. Robinson, drama instructor in the University. This remark was made to the class of technique of acting in the midst of a "work-out" attempting to correct posture difficulties and add a smooth finish to the students' walk.

"Never in all the places I have been I have seen so many women with so much waddle in their walk," Mr. Robinson declared. "It's all in the art of wearing low-heeled shoes. Some can and some can't, but they all do."

Mr. Robinson, who is well-known on the campus for his dramatic productions, orders all women in his casts to wear high heels to rehearsals as an aid to good posture. He pointed out that with high heels the weight is centered lower back or else the women will fall on their faces.

U O Backers Labeled for Homecoming

There will be no mistaking Oregon backers at the homecoming game on Saturday, for each will be labeled plainly with a small felt banner with "Oregon" in yellow lettering, according to Bernadine Bowman, who is head of the banner sale which will start on the campus on Friday, sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary.

An effort will be made to make the patriotic little banners available in living organizations as well as at special booths on the campus all day Friday and Saturday morning.

The pennants will be used on coat lapels, and attached to "mums." They may be had at ten cents apiece or three for 25 cents.

Badges Lead Way For Homecoming

Campus publicity for Homecoming will start today with distribution of 3000 Homecoming programs and several thousand student badges under the direction of Miss Dorothy Magnuson, assistant general chairman. The programs will be distributed at noon today to every living organization on the campus. Additional copies will be kept to supply visiting alumni and ex-students.

The identification badges, which will bear the student's name and class, are supposed to be worn throughout Friday and Saturday, members of the committee said.

Drawing Classes to Use Condon Museum

The Condon museum of natural history will be given over to the lower division drawing classes on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons for the next few weeks.

The museum specimens, according to A. M. Vincent, professor of drawing and painting, will help the students develop appreciation of the thought and skill behind the designed forms.

Bonfire Work Lags; Frosh Full of Woe

Men Scarce, Waits
Prexy; Lettermen,
House Heads Act

In spite of having the largest enrollment of any first-year class in University history, the frosh are having their troubles in bonfire building for Homecoming, according to reports last night from the scene of construction.

With only two days remaining before the pile-to-be burns on noise parade night, about all the frosh have to show for their efforts is a framework of poles.

Materials and men are the main sources of concern, according to Frosh Prexy Jack Daniels, who sent out the materials committee last night and contacted house presidents in an effort to recruit men.

As a last report, Daniels said he might use last year's frosh tactics of taking a press gang to collect men to build the pyre. Crews will work all day today and tomorrow. Cooperation of the Order of the "O" was being lined up, the lettermen combining with house presidents to see that the manpower in freshmen would be on hand. Paddies were being brought out in anticipation of persuasive measures.

Vigilantes went to work last night, guarding the campus.

Outstanding radio artists and technicians are on the faculty of the New York university summer Radio Workshop faculty.

Tropic Fish Acquired By Zoology School

They call them angel fish, but they're no angels. These queerly shaped black and white striped tropical fish which have recently been added to the aquarium in Deady by Professor J. E. Herberston of the zoology department, have already devoured a dozen or more of the tiny guppies which are in the same tank.

Interesting is the way angel fish go about building their nests. The male fish comes to the surface for air. Then he sinks to the bottom, coats the oxygen with saliva, and spits bubbles, which rise and gather on the surface, and are used by the female for nesting purposes.

While the female hatches her eggs, the male angel fish stands guard close by. Professor Herberston feeds these fish prepared fish food, but he plans to include living organisms in their diet, which not only causes rapid growth, but also brightens the colors of the fish.

Picture Service to Send Rapid 'Shots'

Wirephoto, speedy wire news picture service, will cover the Oregon-Idaho game here Saturday, it was learned yesterday through the University news bureau.

Action pictures of the game will be sent out while the game is still in progress by means of a transmitting machine set up in the news bureau for the contest.

The Oregonian, northwest sending station for Wirephoto, will have a pair of photographers here taking pictures of the game. The shots will be developed and sent out over the wire while the cleats are still tearing up Hayward field turf.

The local coverage will be under the direction of Malcolm Bauer, picture editor of the Oregonian, a University graduate.

New Grade System Approved by Faculty; Amendments Added

Action Possibility To Put Courses on New Plan; Chance Of Congestion

Action towards putting courses on the new "pass-and-flunk" grading system, effective winter term, may be taken by the faculties of the various schools, reports last night indicated.

No definite plan has been adopted. The proposal passed last night by the general faculty in their meeting in Friendly hall did not state when the new grading system was to go into effect. This leaves the time up to the faculty members.

Indications from those faculty members supporting the measure indicate that definite steps will be taken towards recommending that courses in their schools be put on the new system immediately.

Among the advocates of the proposal, planning immediate action, is the art school. Steps to place courses in this school on the "no-grade" system will be taken as soon as possible, Eyer Brown, associate professor, indicated.

The plan, however, requires a recommendation to be made by the faculty and accepted through the regular machinery for changes in the status of courses. If this causes too much congestion the plan may be deferred until next year, official sources hinted.

Morris Will Attend Meeting in Portland

Dean Will Take in American Foreign Policy Discussion

Victor P. Morris, dean of the business administration school will be in Portland this week to attend a dinner meeting of a discussion group of the American Foreign Policy. The group consists of leaders of thought in Portland and is associated with similar groups in eight other leading cities of the United States.

International problems facing the American people will form the theme of the discussions, the first one being "The Impact of Other Forms of Government Upon Democratic Institutions."

Tuesday Dr. Morris spoke to the Portland branch of the League of Women Voters on "The Fundamental Nature of Democratic Government."

Each year this organization sponsors a series of lectures dealing with important political and economic problems. This year the series had in mind especially the fact that 1938 is an election year, and Dr. Morris in his closing lecture discussed particularly the threats to democratic institutions and the elements of strength in the democratic idea.

Dr. Morris' classes this week are being held by his assistants. The class in conservation of national resources will not meet today, although the class will be held for the regular assignment.

Dr. Morris left for Portland early Tuesday morning and will not return until Saturday. He will teach his regular classes in the Portland extension center on Friday and Saturday.

New Uniforms Here For Junior Officers

New ROTC uniforms for junior officers have arrived and will be distributed today, Col. Robert M. Lyon, military head, stated.

The uniforms, for those students in the first year advanced military course, consist of a light pair of pants, dark coat with hat to match, Sam Browne belt, and other official equipment completing the outfit. When these officers are commissioned as reserve officers in two years, the uniforms will belong to them.

An elastic, long-wearing material was used for both coat and pants. Each year competitive firms bid for the uniform order; a Portland company received the order for the 44 uniforms this year.

ROTC companies are perfecting drill maneuvers for the Armistice day parade. A memorial program, to be held at McArthur court, has been planned, said Colonel Lyon.

Changes Provided For 'No-Grade' and Flunk Pass Basis; Law School Exempt

Passed after two amendments had been added the long-discussed grading plan, which will place grades for some courses on a different basis than the present grade point system, will go into effect before the start of fall term next year, the general faculty decided in a meeting in Friendly hall yesterday.

One amendment provides for the placing of some courses on the "no-grade" or flunk-and-pass basis, by a proposal of any member of the faculty group and the approval of the regular machinery for changes in the status of courses. The plan formerly stated that the proposal must come upon recommendation of the minor school in which the course is listed.

Lawyers Exempt

The only other amendment was to exempt the law school from the plan since they already have a different set-up.

Recommendation was submitted by the senate committee and passed by the faculty senate in an earlier meeting. It will not do away with the fundamentals of the present GPA system, but will make it possible for some courses regarded by students as "pipes," to be placed on the "no-grade" basis. The recommendation must come from the faculty and be approved by the regular machinery for changes in courses, E. H. Moore, professor of sociology and chairman of the senate committee investigating the proposal, said.

Move Is Unopposed

The motion was carried without opposition after the amendments had been added. Professor Moore, speaking for the proposal, pointed out that the new system will measurably relieve the present congestion in "pipe" courses, caused by students trying to bolster their GPAs.

The new setup will not change the 2.00 point GPA requirement for graduation. It will merely substitute a required total of 150 hours of graded courses as compared with 186 now listed. This would give students leeway to take 36 hours of "no-grade" courses.
