

Students Need Money Dean Earl Lends To Responsible Ones

To the offices of University personnel directors every day go dozens of students, knowing that there they may find ready help with financial problems from Oregon's $84,000 student loan fund, handled on the campus by Dean of Men Virgil D. Earl, who revealed yesterday that he had lent as much as $8000 in a single two-day period in small short time loans, in addition to lending larger amounts on a long-term basis.

UO Music Students To Play Over KOAC

University of Oregon radio programs by the school of music scheduled for this week over station KOAC feature Lorene Mitchell, violinist, and the string quartet, directed by Rex Underwood, professor of music.

At 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon Lorene Mitchell, accompanied by Dorothy Davis, will play "The Cossack" by William Kroll; "Air for G String," Bach; and "Romance" by Henri Wieniawski.

Thursday evening at 8 o'clock the string quartet, composed of Mary Ann Holt, Lorene Mitchell, Ruthalbert Wolfenden, and Madge Conway, will play "American Quartet" by Dvorak.

Brass Ensemble To Play for Class

A group of brass instrumentalists will play for Dean John J. Landsbury's appreciation of music class this morning at 9 in the music auditorium.

The players, all students of Band Director John Stehn, will illustrate ensemble playing for brass instruments. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Oregon Mothers—'Tops' in the State

Three University mothers who take an active part . . . Mrs. C. C. Wintermute at left, president of Portland mothers; Mrs. C. W. Weston, mother of ASUO Prexy Harry Weston, and state president; and Mrs. Walter L. Coleman, chairman for a chain of benefit parties which were recently given in various parts of the state.

Art Students Amused With Paper Cut Outs

Playing with paper cut-outs is still a fascinating pastime—if one can judge by the activity yesterday afternoon of a faculty member and students at the art school.

Grouped around a table in the library, heads together and consulting a piece of paper and each other, were several students and a faculty member. With satisfaction they exhibited a completed paper cutout home. On another table stood another completed model.

This reversion to childhood activities came as the result of the arrival of eight models of homes for incomes ranging from $2,000 to $10,000. Designed by various architects for Life magazine, the models came ready to put up—like the paper doll cutouts one finds in the dime stores.

Faculty Members Will Participate in WAS Convention

Five members of the University faculty will attend and participate in the annual convention of the Western Association of Speech at Seattle November 24, 25, and 26. John L. Casteel, president of the organization and head of the speech department, stated yesterday. The main theme is "Trends in Speech Education."

Mrs. Otilie Seybolt, director of drama, will lead a discussion on "The Status of Interpretation in Present Curriculum."
W. A. Dahlberg, speech professor, will give a paper on the rhetoric of Chauncey Depew.
F. G. Macomber, professor of education, will address the convention on "Education Principles and Their Implication for Curriculum."
D. E. Hargis, speech instructor, will participate in the roundtable on "Problems of Speech Correction."
Mr. Casteel will preside over the conference.

GORDON TO BE INTERVIEWED

Howard Hobson, University baseball and basketball coach, and Joe Gordon, star second baseman of the world's champion Yankees, will be guests of radio station KORE Tuesday evening, 7:15. This is the weekly Meet Your Neighbor program.

Hobson, who saw Gordon and the Yankees play this fall, will interview him on the subject of major league baseball.

New Browsing Rules Told to Students

Forces of the University library this week join in an effort to convince students that the browsing room rules should be obeyed and given the same consideration that would be given furnishings in their own homes.

The browsing room is being furnished at considerable expense by friends of students and the students should remain loyal to these benefactors, Ethel R. Sawyer, browsing room librarian points out. That the room may remain attractive, cooperation of patrons is requested in giving the room the same consideration that would be given by ladies and gentlemen to a beautifully furnished room in a private home, Miss Sawyer said.

Specific requests, beginning this week, are as follows:

1. No ink should be used.
2. Wraps and umbrellas should be left in the checking room, room 15, and not put on chairs, window ledges and other places where they will give the room an unrefined and disordered appearance.
3. Furniture should not be soiled or stained by dirty shoes.
4. The room should be kept for its original purpose—recreational or supplementary reading and not for study. The tables are primarily for holding books and magazines and for greater convenience in casual note taking—not for writing up classroom notes.
5. Patrons are asked to cooperate in making the room pleasant for all by refraining from social visiting and respecting each other's desires for quiet.

Improvements on Grandstand Starts

Work will begin Wednesday on the west end of the Hayward field grandstand as a PWA project. Snook Brothers of Eugene were awarded the building contract at a construction price of $27,229.30.

A new roof will be put over the west end which will make available 1300 additional seats. Approximately 20 men will be employed.

ings. We want to approach people and leave them with the best possible impression that we can create. A person who does not apple-polish crawls back into his shell like an ingrown hair."
Professor Dahlberg pointed out that President Wilson attempted to apple-polish when he went to Europe for diplomatic reasons. "The English are also a very diplomatic folk," he said, "and today at every turn newspapers are being apple-polished."
Obvious apple-polishing is rather disgusting to instructors, Professor Dahlberg observed, "but it is because of it that a course in diplomacy would be beneficial."

Y Groups Discuss Aims at Cedarwood More Conferences Between Students, Faculty Wanted

Faculty-student conferences and student aims were discussed by the YWCA and YMCA group which convened Thursday afternoon at Cedarwood tavern near McKenzie Bridge.

Personal understanding between teacher and student was severely questioned by the group. Many students felt the need for more conferences in which the instructors would not feel obliged to discuss only the narrow field represented in their particular class.

In the discussion group, led by John L. Casteel, head of the speech department, each student presented his goal and the value he hoped to receive from a university education. Only a minority had a definite vocation as their objective.

Group Returns Friday
The group returned late yesterday afternoon. Several carloads of students journeyed to the McKenzie pass to ski before returning.

Francis Beck, YM secretary, Mrs. Beck, and Mrs. John Stark Evans, YW secretary, accompanied the group. Faculty members were John L. Casteel, W. A. Dahlberg, and M. A. Hargis of the speech department.

Palmbeck Added To Cornell Staff

Hans Palmbeck, who received his master's degree last year, now has an assistantship in the department of rural social organization at Cornell university, where he will work this year and next for his doctor's degree. The position was received during the summer, Dr. E. H. Moore, professor of social science, announced yesterday.

The appointment provides a salary of $600 for the nine months, includes free tuition, and full time research employment during the summer.

First U. S. college course in quality statistics has been instituted by Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It will give special attention to quality control of industrial products.
Michigan was the first state university to recognize the need of a museum building to centralize the research and educational functions of organized scientific collections.

Child Mental Health Analyzed in Clinic

By DORIS LINDGREN
The child guidance clinic, conducted on the campus yesterday by the psychology department cooperating with the medical school, conferred with about twenty children and their parents in an attempt to improve the children's mental health. These children are normal mentally but have nervous troubles or are delinquent or fearful, and are on the "verge of becoming withdrawn personalities," Allan East, medical school psychiatric social worker, reported as a result of his findings.

The children, referred through the public school system of Eugene, were examined by psychiatrists from the medical school including Dr. Gearhart Haugen, Dr. J. W. Evans, and Dr. Wendell Hutchens.

Preparations Intricate
Preparation for the clinic, made by Mr. East, included a psychological and physical study by the family physician, and an environmental and personal history study of each child. Following the clinic, changes are made in the child's regime in both the home and school and any other necessary changes to improve the child's mental health. Children and parents are seen only as long as the psychiatrist, the parents, and the school and health authorities deem necessary, Mr. East said.

Beck Headed Committee
Dr. L. F. Beck of the psychology department was the chairman of the advisory committee of the medical school, consisting of laymen and experts, which coordinated the child guidance work for Eugene and surrounding areas.

This clinic is a traveling group which services 12 other cities of the state. Three such clinics are held each school year.
