Another free duck dinner on the ASUO was earned in yesterday's

NYA Jobs Reach Total UO Allotment

Every cent of the $3,475 allowed per month to provide campus jobs for undergraduate students requiring aid during winter term has been allotted to student employees, personnel officials announced. Graduate students who have an NYA fund of $200 per month will receive appointments this week.

The positions are given to University men and women whose character, grades, and need are sufficient to persuade the local committee, headed by Dean of Personnel Karl W. Onthank, to provide work with the limited funds.

Many changes have been made in the roll of workers for this term, it was revealed. Reasons include lack of need and lowering of grade point averages below the requirement of 2.75.

Today's Emerald contains special sports coverage, and box-score blanks for tonight's opening hoop game.

Wednesday Is Deadline for Oregana Pictures

Work on Yearbook Progressing Well Says Editor Root

Another milestone on the road to completion of the 1939 Oregana will be passed Wednesday, the deadline for individual pictures announced yesterday by Oregana Editor Don Root.

All individual pictures must be taken and proofs submitted by Wednesday, Root said yesterday.

The yearbook is well along in its schedule, according to the report of Editor Root. Second color work for fraternity and sorority sections is now on the presses at Shelton-Turnbull-Fuller, while the natural color cover and the other color pictures are now going through separation processes at Bushong and Company.

Proofs on copy have been undergoing correction all week at the Oregana office and are now finished and ready to be sent back today, Root said.

Registration Still Booming; Figure May Surpass Last Winter's 2995 Students

By PAUL DEUTSCHMANN

Total winter term registration at Oregon reached 2867 yesterday, surpassing the total on a comparative date last year by five per cent, figures released last night by Clifford Constance, assistant registrar, indicated.

With two days remaining for registration of graduate students, and a considerable number of late enrollees expected, the final totals will probably maintain this percentage of increase over last year's record of 2995, University officials believe. The latter figure passed the all-time record of 2951 set in 1931.

300 More, Maybe

Constance estimated that between 250 and 300 more students would enter the University before the deadline for registration January 14.

All enrollees entering at this time will be required to pay the regular fee for late registration. Graduate students have until Saturday to enter.

FOURTEEN IN INFIRMARY

Fourteen students were listed Thursday as patients at the infirmary. Most of the patients were suffering from colds. Students included: Frances Tomlinson, Patricia Lyon, Ellenore Kent, Harriett Douglas, Peggy Seabrook, Maxine Sevits, Vesta Lowman, Jean Farnens, Freed Bales, Arthur Erfeldt, Dwain Anderson, Bob Black, John Beaver, and Charles MacLean.

New P. E. Courses Meet With Approval

That the new courses which have been added to the curricula of the school of physical education are destined for success was proved yesterday when the registration figures were released by Dean Leighton's office. Bowling and social dancing classes, added this year, were filled to capacity, it was announced.

Social dancing, which was first offered fall term, was allowed to go four above the limit. The limit was set at 30 men and 30 women.

The two bowling classes which were added winter term are also crowded to capacity. Thirty students signed up for the 10 o'clock class and 24 in the 1 o'clock class.

Another class which was added this term was advanced fencing.
