They Planned Dad's Day Program

Dads' Busiest Day Filled With Activities

Business Meeting, Election of Officers Slated This Morning; Exhibitions Open In Afternoon; Dr. Erb Speaks Tonight

The busiest day of Dad's weekend will open today with a business meeting at 10 o'clock in Johnson hall and climax with the big annual banquet in John Straub Memorial hall at 6 o'clock. With 194 banquet reservations, a record number already made in the special office in Johnson hall, Dean Onthank issued a warning that no guarantee could be made after noon today.

Officers' Election Slated

Slated to open the business meeting is the election of officers followed by reports of the various committees in the mass meeting in Guild theater, Johnson hall at 10 o'clock. The Oregon campus gates committee will make a report on plans and progress up to date, as well as on the campus traffic problem. Another report on student living conditions is scheduled.

Music Program Set For Dads Sunday

Joint Concert Will Present Symphony Band in Afternoon

University students and their "dads" who are in town this weekend, and residents of Eugene are invited to a free joint concert of the University band and symphony orchestra Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the music auditorium.

Under the direction of John H. Stehn, assistant professor of music, the band will play two overtures, the Rossini overture to "William Tell" and the "Morning, Noon and Night Overture" by von Suppe. They will also offer the intermezzo from Herbert's "Naughty Marietta."

Conductor Rex Underwood will lead the symphony orchestra in the playing of "Dance Macabre" by Saint-Saens, the overture to "Oberon" by von Weber, and "Beautiful Blue Danube" by Johann Strauss.

Eat Human Hair? North Carolina Prof Says So

By ANNA MAE HALVERSON
Food from human hair—that's one of the experiments Dr. James C. Andrews of the University of North Carolina and his colleagues have been working up for the past few months. What's more, they have been successful.

They dissolve the hair by boiling it in dilute acid, decolorize it with a charcoal treatment, and remove the "waste material and organic matter" and get a product which is called cystine. Cystine is one of several amino acids composing proteins and is digestible as food by humans and animals.

Dr. Andrews explained that only on rare occasions is cystine harmful. It may cause gall stones.—Daily Tar Heel.

A "Third Alarm ball," sponsored by the school of engineering, was held at the University of Washington Friday night with appropriate decorations, including miles of hose, hundreds of hydrants, and extinguishers by the dozens, all furnished by the Seattle fire department. To make things even more interesting, a real fire box had been installed with an authentic alarm switch and an automatic gong.

Sophs to Begin Beard Cultures For Wiskerino

A. Hannifin Named Dance Chairman; Goons Organizing

Sounding off on the eve of the sophomore two-week whisker-growing purgatory, Soph Prexy Stan Staiger last night named his dance chairman for the Whiskerino and issued an official decree ordering all second-year males on the campus to put away their shaving tools for two weeks.

Staiger named Art Hannifin to head the dance committee. Hannifin (Please turn to page four)

Entries Arriving for Oratorical Contest

Entries are starting to come in for the Jewett 2000-word oratorical contest February 8, reports John L. Casteel, head of the speech department.

Those who have entered are: Dorris Leighton, George Luoma, George Hall, Leonard Clark, Joel Thomson, and P. T. Chiolero.

Manuscripts are due on February 3. This contest is open to all undergraduates. The subject should treat a problem and advocate some solution.

Mr. Casteel expects seniors who are planning to enter the Fallingbeekman contest in the spring to go out for this one.

Production Staff Ingenuity Useful in Construction of 'Private Lives' Scenes

By E. A. JONES

From a modern Paris apartment to the jungles of the West Indies . . . it may sound a bit far-fetched, but it's no trick at all for members of the University theater workshop, who build complete sets for productions of Oregon's drama department.

The six women and one man who spend two days each week at the theater workshop on Onyx street can turn out a "set" depicting scenery from any part of the world, from any century, around the plot of almost any drama you could name, with no more concern than a newspaper staff takes to put out a new newspaper day after day.

Two New Sets Ready

The University workshop is just completing two rather remarkable sets for Noel Coward's "Private Lives," first 1939 production of the drama division, scheduled for February 3, 4, and 8 in Johnson hall. The set for the first act represents two adjacent balconies of a hotel on the coast of France.

The scene is an appealing one, with white wrought-iron furniture behind the stone banisters forming the background for action which takes place in the dusk of the cocktail hour.

Apartment Scene Effective

The set for the second act depicts the interior of an apartment in Paris, and is very effective from a dramatic point of view, because of the feature of a central elevation which gives a distinctive area for action.

Next undertaking of the carpenter-stage-hand-electricians will be jungle scenery for the West Indian next week-end.

Jeanette Hoss . . . as Sibil Chase, second-choice wife of Elyot Chase in "Private Lives" will have an important part in the University theater production starting next week-end.

Humanities Digging Job Nears Finish

Concrete Pouring To Follow Soon on $160,000 Project; Rock Causes Delay

Slowed down to a figurative walk by a week of tough going through unexpectedly hard rock, work on the new $160,000 humanities building yesterday neared speeding up again as excavation crews dug and pounded at the last few feet they will have to clear out before the concrete can go in.

Some Rock Left

All of the rock will not be out until the middle or end of next week, construction supervisors predicted yesterday, but they expect to begin pouring concrete footing before the end of the week.

The rock which accounted for the delay was not totally unlooked for, it was admitted, but the plan of the building made pouring impossible until all the digging was done. Pouring must begin from the west end, it was explained, in order to force standing water to drainage in the east end of the excavation, and it was in the east end that the rock was encountered.

Project Has Hard Luck

The project, on which actual work was begun January 3, is now approximately two weeks behind schedule. Delayed at first by several days of bad weather, progress was retarded by the present rock problem, which adds a week to ten days, making the total at least two weeks.

First concrete to go down will be the footing, with the form-filling following soon after.

Arnold, Ryan Paint Museum Murals

Eastern Oregon Field Trips Depicted

Collaborating with the natural history department, David Arnold and Bryan Ryan of the allied arts school, have begun work on two murals for the natural history museum, Mr. Lance W. Hart, professor of painting and drawing, announced yesterday.

The drawings for the two murals, depicting field work in eastern Oregon where the University expeditions have worked in the summer under direction of Dr. Warren Smith and Dr. L. S. Cressman of the geology and anthropology departments, are nearing completion.

Geology, anthropology, and branches related to these sciences are primarily the subjects of the murals.

Arnold, who is graduate assistant in drawing and painting, is working on the mural which will be on the north wall of the museum. Bryan, laboratory instructor in embryology, will work on the mural for the south wall.

Lance Hart to Paint Early Logging Mural

"Building a Skid Road," will be the theme of the mural which Mr. Lance W. Hart of the allied arts department has been selected to paint in the postoffice of Snohomish, Washington.

The mural will give a picture of logging in the eighties.

Mr. Hart chose the subject because of the important part played by the lumbering industry in the history of Snohomish.

Co-op Store Issues First Finance Report; $1,624 Profit Shown

Releasing a report for publication for the first time in its history, the University co-op store yesterday issued its annual profit and loss statement through Jack Lochridge, president of the student-elected co-op board.

'Sermon on Mount' To Be Wesley Topic

Hayes Beal, Wesley club director, will lead the last of the series of meetings on the Sermon on the Mount Sunday evening. "The Sermon on the Mount and Our Day" is the topic.

The club will again join the Epworth league and adult group in the worship service in the church auditorium at 7 o'clock, adjourning to the club room at 7:30.

SO THAT'S THE REASON

In "The Art of Bundling" the author, Dana Doten, explains that factors contributing to the bundling technique were the isolation of country life, the infrequency of leisure, the relative costliness of light and fuel, and the meagerness of household furnishings.

Campus Rythms Entertain Dads Tonight

Gerlinger Scene Of Dance; Free To Father

Swinging out to the sweet strains of Babe Binford's "campus rhythms," University students tonight will have the opportunity of entertaining their dads as well as dance in Gerlinger at the annual all-campus "Krazy Kopy Krawl."

A reception for the dads beginning at 9 p.m. will be held in conjunction with the dance in the alumni hall of Gerlinger adjoining the ball room. Dads will be admitted to the dance without charge.

Proceeds of the dance will be used in building up the annual Alpha Delta Sigma scholarship fund of $100 awarded annually to the outstanding advertising student on the campus.

Maurie Binford's orchestra will be attired as gentlemen of the gay nineties period with bowlers, mustaches, and turtle-necked sweaters. Decorations by Dale Mallicoat will carry out this theme.

The reception before and during the dance will be open at all times to student couples to visit their fathers.

Patrons and patronesses for the dance are Messrs. and Mesdames W. F. G. Thacher, George Godfrey, Harry Schenk, and Frank Short.

House Librarians Will Meet at Dessert

Deans Schwering, Onthank to Be Hosts

Librarians of University living organizations are slated to be guests on Tuesday evening, February 7, at a dessert in their honor in alumni hall of Gerlinger. Dean of Personnel Karl W. Onthank and Dean of Women Hazel P. Schwering will act as hosts.

The campus organization of librarians has been accorded wide acclaim during the past few months in national magazines for their influence on increasing the scope of student reading. Each librarian keeps a supply of popular books on the shelves of his house constantly, and superintends choosing of literary types for the organization's library in keeping with members' tastes.

Dean Onthank said yesterday that the purpose of the dessert was merely social, and that only books in general would be discussed. The University library and the Oregon Co-op have each planned exhibits for the affair.

Faculty Club Slates Annual Meeting

The University Faculty club will hold its annual business convocation on February 4 at club headquarters on Emerald street, A. H. Kunz, associate professor of chemistry and president of the club, announced yesterday.

Dr. Donald M. Erb, president of the University, is scheduled to make the principal address. Election of a director and choosing the club's officers for 1939 will also be in order, Kunz said.

Main feature of faculty club activities here is their daily luncheon and nightly get-togethers. The yearly business meeting is necessary, the president said, so that the group may retain its standing as an incorporated group.

Gill's Team Outdriven in Late Spree

Hobson's Quintet Capitalizes on Free Throws; OSC Leads at Half

By ELBERT HAWKINS
Emerald Sports Editor

Slate's Gill's baffling Beavers of Oregon State shocked the natives by actually trying to ball with Oregon's basketball champs—the conference's "gallopingest" team—at McArthur court last night, and did it too, for over 20 minutes. But in the end it was Oregon, 46 to 39, and the Webfoots were pulling away.

An approximate 6000 customers were first amazed and then pleased by the tactics of Gill's lowly quintet which led at half-time, 19 to 14, and kept a nose ahead for almost ten minutes after that.

The Beavers cast off 51 times to 70 for the Webfoots and hit a far greater percentage of their shots. They got 15 field goals to 13 for Oregon and had an edge in shooting, .294 to .185 by average.

Hobby Hobson's Ducks made it their seventh conference victory in eight starts by collecting 20 points on 31 free throws to only 9 in 18 tossed by the Beavers.

The Orangemen clamped down on Oregon so tightly with their famous zone defense, they drew 28 fouls. Garbould, Mandic, Kolberg, and Romano were all ousted on personals.
