Dean Allen Receives Far East Journal

'Indian Home' Conceived by Oregon Graduate

By HAROLD OLNEY

The materialized dream of a former University of Oregon student Mr. America Laugh was received at the school of journalism offices this week. It was an anniversary copy of "Indian Home," the magazine which the originator, Kummar Sri Mohan V. Raj, started out to make "The Ladies Home Journal of the Far

The purpose of the publisher, as stated in his thesis, which he wrote for his master's degree at the University in June, 1935, was "to assist in the regeneration of the masses in India . . . to introduce improved scientific methods of agriculture and to innovate in the they must stay that way. The Emerald Reader's Page More About Mr. Kaufman, The Man Who Makes

Continuing the Tale of the Gloomy-Eyed Playwright Who Is a Genius for Dialogue, A Wizard at Poker, No Fool in Business

By LLOYD TUPLING

George S. Kaufman is gloomy-eyed, his thick eyebrows are arched plaintively over a pair of rimless glasses. He speaks quietly, he is exceedingly nervous-paces back and forth when a play is in early stages of conception.

When he directs a play he quietly explains what he wants and the actors try and give it to him. After a play has evolved through the trial and error stagings out of town, and the lines are definitely "set,"

Work Has 'That Touch'

As a workman, Kaufman is the soul of methodicality. A play that Kaufman has directed or helped to write invariably bears the mark of slick professional finish.
