DUCK TRACKS

By ELBERT HAWKINS

Ask quiet "Uncle Hec" Edmund son, Washington's veteran basketball and track coach, about his 15year-old son, Jimmy. Ask him about the good old days when he was a track man. Ask him about present day basketball officiating, about road trips, or about his athletes. He'll talk eternally. He's full

But then quiz the canny Washington coach of 19 years' experience about one thing-the Oregon-Washington basketball series-and he shuts up like a clam. For in-

What effects do trips have? "They don't bother me, I don't sleep so well, anyway," he chuck-

"Whenever it is possible," Hec Edmundson has his traveling Huskies spend their nights in hotels rather than on trains. They travel by day. For instance, on this trip to the Willamette valley his squad spent Monday night in Portland and then moved down to Eugene yesterday morning. When Washington travels to the Inland Empire from Seattle, the squad sleeps

Two reasons are offered by sei. Hardy, c entific-minded Hee for having his Pavalunas, g boys sleep in hotels.

One big reason, in which he agrees 100 per cent with Coach Jack Friel of Washington State, the gum-chewing Husky mentor hates to see pend on from year to year.

Hec used to play basketball at a time when three sets of rules were in vogue. They used the AAU, college rules, and then abided by a code set up by the YMCA. According to Hec, it just depended on who you were playing and when and where.

Not since a year ago when these same teams met on the McArthur maple have Eugene fans seen such basketball. They drove, those Ducks and Huskies, in a wild stampede to the finish that would have been a credit to the mightiest galloping of Seabiscuit and War Admiral. And they shot with uncanny wizardry.

But last night, just as last year, Oregon had the final kick that was necessary, a final kick that brought them from behind to a well-earned victory.
