Looking Back... WITH JIMMIE LEONARD

One year ago — The Webfoots won back first place in the northern division by defeating Washington State, 44 to 34. Laddie Gale was held to four points, while Slim Wintermute cornered 12.

Dr. Lawzorwitz, president of the hobo order, "Knights of the Road," visited the library. The hobo prexy was studying statistics on the growth of towns for the "enlightenment" of his brothers.

Five years ago—Chester Rowell, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, told students at a Gerlinger assembly that the United States was headed for fascism, and that although the nation was fighting to save it, democracy was insufficient for modern economic and social conditions.

An Emerald reporter believed Harold J. Noble, associate professor of history, when he told him that the history house would be painted orange and black.

Ten years ago—Seventeen of 19 women's living organizations agreed with the Women's league that no Oregon woman should smoke in public.

Arden X. Pangborn was editor of the Emerald. (Mr. Pangborn is now managing editor of the Oregonian.)

Twenty-five years ago—The one-step and the hesitation waltz were formally introduced into University dances at the Frosh Glee.

Civil Service Jobs Offered to Seniors

Graduating seniors will now have a chance to keep off the WPA, if they make arrangements to take the civil service examination which is to be given soon at the Oregon branch.

Of course, there are certain qualifications which the applicant must possess for this type of job. First of all, he must be a citizen of the United States. He must have successfully completed a four-year course leading to a BA degree in a college or university of good standing. He must not have passed his thirty-fifth birthday on the date of the close of receipt of applications. Finally, he must be in sound health.

Dr. Leavitt O. Wright, Spanish instructor, recently received several application blanks which are now in the employment office. Among the various types of positions offered are junior administrative technician, junior biologist, junior economist, junior examination assistant, junior geologist, and junior statistician.

Oregon's Browsing Room Not Only One In Country Now

University of Oregon's browsing room no longer retains the honor of being the only one of its kind in the country. Almost two years since the establishment of Oregon's individualistic browsing room, a similar browsing room has been established at Cornell university.

No studying is allowed in Oregon's counterpart. The description reads: "The homelike appearance of a blazing fire and comfortable chairs replaces the austere, scholastic atmosphere of reference libraries." This description also fits the unique room in the University's library.

The exquisitely furnished Oregon browsing room attracted national attention when it was opened nearly two years ago.

Two Trees Donated To University Offer Moving Problem

A huge scarlet oak tree and a large quantity of holly were donated to the University recently by Mrs. William Kuykendall of Eugene.

The holly will be planted in the president's holly hedge, according to Fred Cuthbert, University landscape architect.

The oak tree will offer a much greater problem, however. University officials do not have machinery necessary to move the huge tree which is 12 to 14 inches through the trunk.

Officials are attempting to borrow or rent such machinery as would be necessary to transport the tree from its present location between 12th and 13th on Williamette street, to its proposed new site just west of the library.

Investment Tradition

TRADITIONS that have value and meaning last. Others perish from the campus, despite the howls of some who would perpetuate them by force.

Down in Palo Alto at Stanford university a tradition has been established which seems to be a lasting one. It is the pick-up corner. Located on the edge of the campus beside direct lines of traffic, this traditional spot is of concrete value to students. Those who stand there know with a fair degree of certainty that they will be picked up by students, professors or townspeople and given a "lift" to town.

LOOKING underneath the surface of this custom we find other values, less measurable, but important nevertheless. The pick-up corner is sure to promote a measure of friendliness among the students, the faculty, and the people of the town. It brings each into contact with the other and makes the fact that students attend their university an introduction and reputation to each other and to strangers.

While here at Oregon the problem of getting to town is not as acute nor pressing to as many students as it is at Stanford, nevertheless the practice would be of concrete value to many. Doubtless a certain amount of friendly "lifts" are given, at present, but most of these are given to acquaintances or friends.

IT would not seem too difficult to build up such a tradition at Oregon. Some corner near the edge of the campus might be officially designated as the "pick-up spot." The entire campus community should be willing to cooperate in the matter; the dividends in friendliness and good feeling would be enough to see that the tradition maintained itself.

Wie geht's By V. GATES

The "Love and Marriage" lectures did an about-face in the results. A marriage bureau for single professors has been formed, but no guarantee was made about the love aspect. Students, we presume, will continue the status quo and we're right back where we started.

Art School to Hang Famous Quotations

"The school of architecture should be a happy home where students are helped to educate themselves,"—Saarinen, is the motto of the school of allied arts which will be imprinted on a cement tablet and hung over the entrance of the art building by Jean Sutherland, graduate assistant in the department.

"Here, like the kind of democracy we should strive for, is the minimum of restraint and the maximum of sense of responsibility"—Prince Campbell, will also be inscribed on the tablet, which will be put in place sometime in the near future.

Shoe Shop on the Rouge

It MAY surprise you to learn that a cobbler's shop runs daily at the Ford Rouge plant in Dearborn. But the Ford plant is full of surprises. Every one has a practical answer.

Hundreds of workers in the Rouge require special types of footwear. These the company furnishes. So a steady stream of worn-out footwear reaches the Rouge cobblers, and the busy tap-tap of their hammers joins the rhythm of ten-ton presses and heavy rolling mills.

The cobbler's shop is one part of the great drive that prevents waste in the Rouge. Lumber from incoming crates is sorted and used for outgoing shipments. Waste paper and wood chips go to the Rouge paper mill. Metal particles removed by grinding wheels and metal saws are reclaimed. Nothing is lost—nothing wasted.

All this plays a part in making finer, better Ford cars. Pennies saved are pennies earned. Multiplied at the Rouge into millions, they help build the value that keeps millions of Fords delivering dependable, economical service year after year.
