In the Mail

IN-BETWEENS
To the Editor:
Are we always to be known as the "in-betweeners"? Will there never be any opportunity for us graduates to participate in campus activities, to really feel that we, too, are a part of this organization known as the University of Oregon?
If we are to overcome this feeling of not being included in the school activities or faculty affairs we must form some sort of organization for ourselves in which we can attain the things which we now lack.
There seem to be no definite reasons for not attempting such a project; in fact it appears that there is much enthusiasm among the graduates. But who will take the first step? Or will it be taken? If we grads don't take the initial step, certainly no one else will.
In many colleges the annual graduate ball ranks along with the senior ball and the Mortar Board formal. The main objective in organizing this group would be for social purposes such as this.
There are over 250 of us graduates who are prospective members in this "longed for" but never "sought after" organization.
—A Graduate.

Jewell, Macomber To Teach at Portland In Summer Session

Dean J. R. Jewell and Dr. F. H. Macomber, both of the education school, have been appointed consulting members of the faculty of a summer curriculum workshop in Portland, it has been announced by Dr. Kenneth L. Heaton of Lansing, Michigan, executive secretary of the commission on work shops and field service of the United States Progressive Education association.
Ten of these schools are being conducted throughout the United States by this national education association, the one for the four states, Montana, Idaho, Washington, and Oregon, being held in Portland.
The session will last from June 26 to July 28, and Professors Jewell and Macomber will arrange to be in Portland one or two days each week.
Dr. J. F. Cramer, superintendent of public schools in Eugene, has been made a member of the summer school faculty.
A student musical comedy will be produced at Yale this year for the first time since 1894.

Looking Back...

WITH JIMMIE LEONARD
One year ago—Business administration students issued their annual challenge to the law school for a softball game between the two groups. Softball, the BA athletes said, was a good conditioner for ditch-digging. The challengers also said that a pitiful $15 a week was better than sitting in a chair for 10 years waiting for a client.

Elisabeth Stetson was elected to the AWS presidency. Ruth Ketchum was named YWCA prexy.
In naming the things she said she liked about the University, a coed included a Phi Beta Kappa gent's definition of a kiss: "a kiss is the coordinating juxtaposition of two orbicular muscles in the state of contraction." ("I bet he's never had one," she said).

Five years ago — Oregon's basketballers dumped OSC, 33 to 25, to cinch second place in the conference standings.
The last Emerald of the winter term was published.
"Maybe you can get close to the soil in Corvallis," said Cynthia Liljeqvist, "but we've got a different kind of dirt over here."

Anna Sten was playing in "Nana" at the Colonial theater, and Greta Garbo's "Queen Christina," was at the McDonald.

Ten years ago—According to a freshman girl, final examinations should have been abolished long ago.

"Women are but children of a larger growth," said a well-known University professor. "No man with any sense takes a woman for granted. Frankly, the thing I admire most in women is greatness of nature. Prettiness doesn't last."
"The belles here are exterior decorators," the nervous professor continued. "Those with a timid, confiding manner, who look as though they need protection, are dangerous. A man who makes women his special subject knows less about them than anyone else."

'Crooked Trails' Is Topic of Talk Slated By Warren D. Smith

Dr. W. D. Smith, of the geology department will speak before the Geological Society of the Oregon Country, at its meeting on the Reed college commons in Portland tonight.
Dr. Smith will give an account of his experiences in Oregon over the last 25 years, in a speech entitled "Crooked Trails."
The geological society is the largest amateur organization of its kind in the state.

Rivals Rated

against Idaho as he came in second to the Ducks' Wetmore.
The Webfoots' diving trio—Elmer Mallory, Leo Gaffney, and Ralph Cathey—will see what can be done about the win record of the Beavers' Olsen.

To match the brilliant array of Orange free-stylers are Tom Starbuck, "Maui" Jim Marmie, Pierce Mallory, and Al Sandner, whose times have decreased since last the staters saw them. Sperm Wetmore helps these men in the 440-yard free-style.

Dick Smith, fast Duckling, will again attempt to take care of some first places in the rook encounter. Gerald Huestis will assist in the backstroke and breast stroke. Bob McAuliffe also bears down in the breast stroke. Other free-styling frosh include Ed Jacobs, Fred Vincent, and Jim Carney. Bob Range, who won the diving in the first frosh-rook mix, will again face the Beaver babes.
