FIRST ANNUAL BUSINESS MEET STARTS TODAY

Northwest Leaders To Talk 'Job-Hunting' With BA Students

Three-Day Meeting to Give First-Hand Practice Gained by Experiences of Thirty Businessmen in Every Field

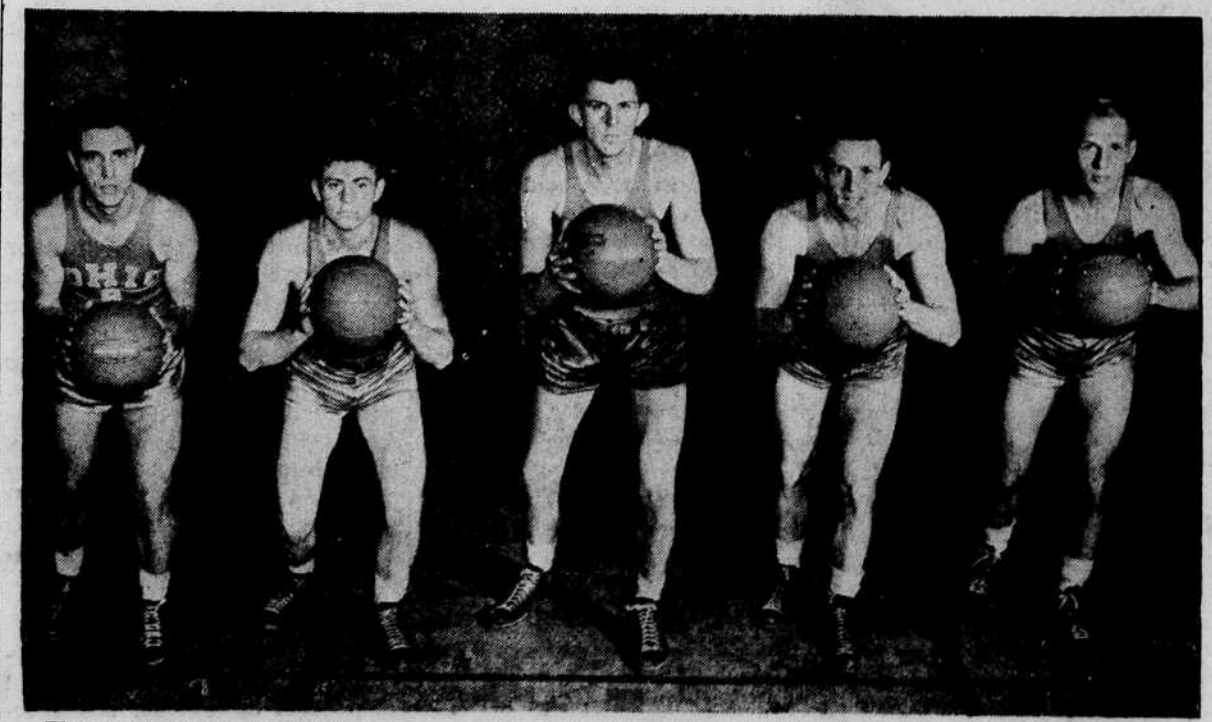

First hand practice on that most important part of a young man's or woman's business career, obtaining the job, will be available to students in the University of Oregon school of business administration when approximately 30 outstanding men of Oregon and the Northwest come to the campus for the first annual three-day business conference starting today, it was announced by Dr. Victor P. Morris, dean of the school.

The business men, all leaders in their lines, will advise the students on qualifications and training needed for employment, and will then sit in for conference on present day conditions and trends. Temporary "offices" will be set up for insurance, manufacturing and production, foreign trade, traffic, banking and finance, accounting, credits, office management and secretarial service, savings and loan, marketing, merchandising, advertising, and personnel work.

Legislator Coming
C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon Voter and keen observer of business and financial conditions in Oregon, will be the speaker for the banquet, tonight at 6:15 in Hendricks hall.

Bedlam

By P. D. Q.
(Pandemonium Editor)

Bedlam broke loose in Eugene last night: Two minutes after the news came through that Oregon had humbled Ohio State, 46 to 33 and the congratulators had hardly finished shaking peoples' hands back in Evanston, a swarm of hysterical Webfoot rooters whose ears had been glued to the words of a stammering radio announcer streamed onto the streets of Eugene.

With auto horns blaring, the victory bell clanging, cymbals crashing, firecrackers popping, and exhausts exploding they headed for the downtown areas. In despair the police turned off the stop lights—the Webfoot caravan was in no mood to be halted by a mere red flash.

At the center of pandemonium—Willamette and Broadway—a car full of Kappa Sigs flashed onto the scene with the Lemon and Green victory bell. Stopping their car and causing a major traffic jam, they placed the bell in the center of the intersection and the joyous peals sounded out almost being drowned out by the auto horns.

Cars traveled in all directions. Suddenly a group of pedestrian rooters shouting "Rally, Rally" forged through the middle of the auto parade gathering hundreds as they ran. Whipping up the street in a frenzy of celebration they were attracted by the McDonald theater.

Nation Hails Ducks After 46-33 Victory

They're national champions now, these tall Oregon boys who have no peer, no match wherever basketball is played in this old world.

They've waited a long time and marched a long way along the nation's hoop trails, and now they've reached the top, the highest pinnacle for which any hoopster can strive.

To the northwest championship, they added the coast title, then the all-western title, and finally the first national collegiate athletic association crown. Oregon's doors to athletic immortality swing wide, as Eugene, the state, and the nation hail these Oregon champions:

Coach Howard Hobson
Laddie Gale
John Dick
Slim Wintermute
Captain Bobby Anet
Wally Johansen
Matt Pavalunas
Bob Hardy
Ford Mullen
Ted Sarpola
Red McNeely
Earl Sandness

The Oregons, sporting their traditional green before a packed Patten Pavilion at Evanston, Illinois, throttled Ohio State university, the eastern champions, 46 to 33, last night. And in doing so they left no doubt of a basketball supremacy, the like of which the nation has not seen in many a year.

For 25 minutes, Ohio State gave the driving Webfoots a tremendous fight, but when the tall firs from the far west began to move, the Buckeyes didn't have a chance. Halftime score favored the Webfoots, 21 to 16.

Oregon last night was a team of destiny. Mighty Oregon it was when the Webfoots came out on the floor, and Mighty Oregon was

Orchids For the Team

Oregon's national basketball champions—victors over Ohio State last night—were highly praised by students, faculty, and Eugene townspeople in a brief survey of opinions taken last night.

The round of compliments was led by Dr. Donald Erb, president of the University, who in a telegram to Coach Howard Hobson expressed the feelings of the Webfoot backers. The telegram said: "Congratulations to you and the boys from 3000 University students, a million Oregonians, and me."—Signed D. M. Erb.

The opinions of citizens of Eugene was aptly expressed by the city council when that body passed a special resolution congratulating
