

DUCK TRACKS

By Sally Mitchell

Football players just weren't born with those wonderful physiques. No sir! It takes plenty of training and practice, and even dieting to keep them in condition. Right now during spring football practice you can see the squad out laying on their backs, doing a seven-day bicycle race upside down, kicking pigskins around, or showing at some sort of a go-cart with their shoulders. And Tex Oliver says they sometimes have to diet 15 or 20 pounds off a player, and then of course, the underweights have to drink lots of cream and eat potatoes to bring up their weight so that they won't get bounced around too much.

"It slows a fellow up when he's too fat," Tex said, "and then, too, he isn't such a tough customer to bump into."

It wasn't exactly Tex's idea to have spring football practice extended over such a long period of time, but in order to accommodate the Junior weekend committee, Tex and the boys agreed to put on an exhibition game.

"The fellows are all anxious for the Junior weekend game," said Vaughn Corley, line coach, "but maybe that's because it marks the end of their spring practice."

And little "Skipper Corley," Vaughn's young son, has certainly been brought up right. He says that with his daddy as coach even the Junction City high school team, could beat the Trojans.

It would have done Honest John Warren's heart good if he had been around to see his Ducks trim Milwaukie high yesterday. John is over in eastern Oregon now, where his mother is seriously ill.

Ray Foster, freshman baseball manager, who is also the runner downer for foul balls, tries to cut down on his own footwork by shouting bits of advice like this to the Oregon hitters. "Come on, fellows, keep the ball in the park."

And at the beginning of the game, Hank Nilsen, coach, kept spurring the boys onward with "Remember John, in eastern Oregon. He's counting on you."

Gale "Busher" Smith makes a crack a day. And yesterday when his girl friend, Eleanor Steele passed by the practice field, "Busher" who was up to bat, yelled: "Wait a minute, honey, and I'll put on an exhibition for you."

Every member of the Oregon basketball squad who made the trip east, Howard Hobson, the trainer, and the student manager, will receive a beautiful green and yellow robe as a gift from the associated students. The blankets are each inscribed with the title that the boys won, and each player's name is written in yellow across one end. They're really something, and Harold Weston, prexy, is planning an assembly so that the blankets can be presented in style.

Jack Bryant, who was well-known around the campus for his newsiness, was in town last night, having come from the Oregon normal school, at Monmouth. Jack doesn't like to boast, but he recently took individual point honors in a track meet with Willamette. He won the mile and two-mile, and came in second in the half-mile for 13 points.

Musselman Holds Milwaukie Hitless As Frosh Bang Out Three Homers

In a good old-fashioned slugfest Oregon's frosh baseball nine knocked out 15 hits, including three home runs, and held Milwaukie high school to a hitless game, yesterday afternoon, on Warren's mudflats. The final score was 16 to 1, in favor of the frosh.

In the absence of Coach John Warren, Hank Nilsen cheered the boys on to victory, making only two substitutions throughout the game. Bill Musselmann hurled a good game for the frosh, making seven strikeouts, allowing seven walks, and no hits.

Home runs were scored by Carney, Whitman, and Austin, with Carney collecting three hits in five times at bat.

The entire frosh team turned in an excellent performance, getting in some fine hits and brilliant base running, with only two fielding errors.

Following is a summary of the game.

VANDALS LOSE TO DUCKS

The University of Oregon golf team defeated Idaho Friday 24½ points to 2½ in a six man match at the Eugene country club course. After the morning singles round, Oregon was leading 15½ points to 2½.

Benny Hughes, Oregon, with a score of 69, and Harry Snead, Idaho, with a 76 were medalists for the match.

The day's singles scores were:

Oregon	Pts.	Idaho	Pts.
Watson	3	Cramer	0
Davis	1½	Newman	1½
Golden	2	Crowther	1
Near	3	Snead	0
Werschkul	3	McPhail	0
Smith	3	Rossi	0

In the afternoon doubles, Werschkul and Near, Hughes and Keller, and Quinlin and Smith, Oregon, all took 3 points over Idaho to bring in a total score of 24½ to 2½.

Women Finish Intramural Golf

Tournaments to Be Finished by May 13; Round One Played

The second round of women's intramural golf starts Sunday, May 7, and must be played by Saturday, May 13, Jean Foster, WAA golf manager, announced last night.

All the matches in the first round must be completed today, and the results scored by match, not medal, play rules posted on the tournament flight in Gerlinger.

Results of the matches played thus far are:

Intermediate tournament—Donna Hanton defeated Patty Hamley by default; Kay Conroy defeated Bernice Hirter; Ann Ernest received bye; Ruth Stoddard a bye; Ruth Hingley a bye; and Beatrice Thompson won from June Justice by default.

The following intermediate matches must be played by May 7: Jean Kendall vs. Eileen Washburne, and Margaret Williams vs. Elizabeth Buckalew.

In the advanced tournament, the following results have been posted.

Mary Thatcher a bye; Phyllis Monson won from Ann Duden by default; Marjorie Moore defeated Alice Coggins; Darlene Berry a bye; Jean Foster defeated June Brown; Roma Theobald defeated Hope Dondero; and Majeane Glover won from Jeanne Wagg by default.

The match which must be played today is between Francis Roth and Bernice Vadnais.

All players should play matches according to schedule and watch the tournament flight in the gym for future matches.

UO Netmen Win From OSC, 4-3

OSC to Meet Ducks Today on Local Courts at 2 o'Clock

Oregon's tennis team, leaders in northern division conference play, defeated the strong Oregon State netmen 4 to 3 at Corvallis Friday afternoon.

Captain Les Werschkul won easily over the Beaver captain, Bob Trouton, 6-3 and 6-3 and Leonard Clark defeated Oregon State's Dick Phillippi 6-3, 6-3, and 6-0. Strong (Oregon State) defeated Phillippi (Oregon), 8-6, 6-2; Williams (Oregon) defeated Cope (Oregon State), 6-2, 6-4. Applegate (Oregon) defeated Sohier (Oregon State), 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Doubles: Trouton and Presley (Oregon State) defeated Werschkul and Clark (Oregon), 7-9, 6-3, 6-1; Strong and Cope (Oregon State) defeated Williams and Applegate (Oregon), 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Traffic accidents have claimed the lives of five Oregon bicyclists already this year, in contrast to a clean sheet for this type of fatality during the first three months last year, according to Secretary of State Earl Snell.

Oregon State will have an opportunity to avenge their defeat today at 2 o'clock when they meet the Oregon team on the University

CALLING 'EM QUICK

By SALLY MITCHELL

Editor's note: We don't know exactly what goes in this column, but our idea of calling 'em quick, or maybe calling 'em quicker, is to hang a nickname onto 'em. The following article explains the nicknames which have been given to various Oregon athletes.

Just as soon as a ball player proves to the fans that he can "play ball" he usually falls heir to a nickname.

They call Gale Smith "Busher" because over his athletic figure he used to wear loose-fitting and sometimes ill-fitting clothes, which prompted some fan to remark, "He's from the bushes!" And the name stuck.

From his namesake in the Popeye cartoons, Wellington Quinn was given the name "Wimpy," which he answers to without hesitation, "Flivver" is the name for Ford Mullen, and he only wishes he owned one.

They call Trainer Bob Officer "2-gun" because once when he and a party were hunting in the wilds of eastern Oregon they stumbled upon a creek in a deserted spot called "2-gun Officer." And Bob has yet to live the nickname down.

"Ever since he was named all-coast quarterback, Anse Cornell, athletic manager, has had the name "little giant." Although Anse was small, he was mighty fast and powerful.

Bill White got the name, "Whizzer" White from the all-American by that name, and he's really a whizz at chalking up an impressive batting average.

"Ollie" is the monicker for Bob Hardy, derived from funnyman Oliver Hardy.

Tex Oliver came originally from Texas, but it was while he was at West Point that his nickname was attached.

"We don't mind these nicknames, now," one of the fellows explained, "but they might be a little awkward when we're fifty."

Elmer Mallory, active fielder and consistent hitter, will play shortstop for the varsity when Oregon meets Washington on Howe field, Monday afternoon.

Forgotten Men---

By JOSEPHINE SOAP

To select a forgotten man for today's Emerald was a difficult task, for no one man could be found who warranted this title exclusively. It was decided finally that, since this issue is put out entirely by women, there was not just one forgotten man, but many. This column is therefore, dedicated to the former members of the Emerald staff.

The list of ex-notables is long, but there are a few who top this list of has-beens with "All-American honors." There was Bill Pengra, the managing editor, who kept the shack resounding with a steady slamming of drawers, as he frantically searched for something in his disorderly office. And then there was the news editor, Bud Jermain, who courted the associate women's editor. He is remembered as the strong silent type of man, unable to make himself heard above the confusion in the managing editor's office.

The editor, Paul Deutschmann, stood out as a diplomat, continually answering the summons of the telephone to talk his way out of an entangling alliance caused by Joe Soap.

Elbert Hawkins, a tall thin boy with an intellectual air about him, was the sports editor. It was his duty to keep his smooth-tongued assistant, George Pasero, away from the girls working in the news room. He also instructed another of his staff members, Doug Parker, the difference between a pole-vaulter and a javelin-thrower.

The paper went to press under the supervision of the night editor, Lyle Nelson, a steady, hard-working journalist. A handsome, suave heartbreaker, Wen Brooks, wrote a column called "Round 'n About." (And he did get around.)

We recall, also, a man behind the activities of the paper, George Turnbull. To him the women honestly say "thanks" for his part in making them the great journalists they will one day be.

He: Here's how.
She: Say when—I know how.

Strong Duckling Relaymen Lose Only Half-Mile Event To Oregon State Babes

Right in the run of things was the Duckling track team, which ran circles around the Oregon State Rooks to win four out of five events in the meet on Hayward field yesterday.

While their coach, George Stovel, and veteran mentor, Bill Hayward looked on approvingly, the Oregon cindermen out-sprinted and out-distanced the Rooks to cop the first meet in several years.

"My boys were capable of winning the entire meet," said Stovel, "and if it weren't for a bad change of batons and a few other minor mistakes, they would have. I'll get those things straightened out, Monday, though," he smiled.

With all the thrills of a varsity performance, the frosh exhibited fine form and endurance throughout the meet. The mile relay, a heated contest run in 3:35 flat, was won by Oregon with just a yard to spare.

Ducks Will Win UW Game, Says Ford Mullen

Husky Games Here Follow Their 2-Day Series With Beavers

Captain Ford Mullen is confident of victory when the Ducks meet the University of Washington nine on Howe field Monday and Tuesday. Mullen took over coaching duties yesterday while Coach Hobson went to Portland to attend a banquet.

"We're going to win," Mullen declared. "In fact we have to win."

Hobson's Ducks have been working hard all week to be in trim for the encounter with the Huskies. At the yesterday afternoon practice session the boys practiced hitting and fielding.

Lineups for the two games will be about the same as in previous games, Mullen said. Bob Hardy will pitch one game and Cece Walden will probably catch.

Tubby Graves' Huskies played the Oregon State Beavers yesterday and will meet them again today. Before the Husky-Beaver games the Huskies held down the cellar position in the northwest conference with one win and three losses. The Ducks, the Idaho Vandals, and Washington State Cougars, were in a three-way tie for second place. The effect of the Duck-Husky series on the northwest conference standing depends largely on the outcome of the Beaver-Husky series.

The two games with the Huskies are scheduled for 3 o'clock at Howe field. They will be the last chance for Duck fans to see the team in action until the Oregon State game May 27, which will conclude the home games.

Badminton is a minor sport with them, yet this record shows that they have taken the game seriously and are out to win. The team played the Oregon squad upon the invitation of Carl Robertson.

Members of the Oregon team were George Drach, Jack Newton, Jim Goodhew, and Carl Robertson. This is the first time that Oregon has entered the field of competitive badminton play.

Ducks Lose to Badminton Tilt

The powerful British Columbia badminton team won every game from the Oregon squad yesterday, 4 to 0. Honors were taken in both the doubles and singles by this team which has taken every victory in its Northwest tour.
