

Presenting the Rulers of Wonderland..by Helen Angell

To a Brunette

What a busy girl is activity-girl Patsy Taylor . . . and what a secretive girl about her love life! From 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 8 last night the telephone wires from the Emerald shack to the Theta house were in constant use as an attempt to interview Princess Patsy got underway.

But to no avail. At 8:30 last night, one of her fellow-princesses revealed that she is to wear a yellow dotted swiss dress with brown grosgrain ribbon trim . . . and that is all that could be learned.

A complete survey of the membership of her sorority failed to learn the name of the "man of the hour" who will take Princess Patsy to tonight's prom. Though they didn't know whether Princess Patsy's escort is a "Masked Marvel" or just plain Joe College, Theta sisters knew she was going to be there.

With lovely dark hair, expressive brown eyes, and an engaging smile, Oregon's Princess Pat is indeed a grand girl, if a busy one, the co-rulers of the mythical Webfoot kingdom asserted in her behalf.

To a Red-Head

Vision of loveliness: Striking titian-haired Helen Gillam smiling graciously from the queen's platform in light green dotted swiss! She's a wise girl, this red-headed bit of royalty, for she'll show off her campus-famous locks with a long hob today.

Still working diligently at her job as circulation desk clerk in the University library late last night, Princess Helen admitted she was getting pretty anxious for today to dawn. "I think it's wonderful!" she smiled and said between customers.

Of course she'll be at the prom to view the salute of a student body in honor of Queen Maxine and her four princesses. Between bows to subjects, she'll let Carl Wester, DU, keep the admirers of royalty away.

Freshmen to

(Continued from page one) month ago but nevertheless the cement symbol of Oregon pride and joy is due for another paint bath. Tomorrow's paint party will not only give the frosh an opportunity to beautify the countryside, but also give them a chance to wear out their tin pants "a-slidin'" on the cement.

All Hail the Queen

She's such a democratic soul, this Queen Maxine I of ours, that it's hard to think of her sitting up on a throne "away from the milling crowd." No, Oregon's personification of Alice in Wonderland isn't the sophisticated type, but she's a "queen" by her own rights. Tell her that, though, and she'll scoff and declare she's just a happy, thrilled girl.

Last night, hair in curlers, Max anxiously awaited the dawn of Her Day. Asked what she expected to be the highlight of her reign, she quickly decided it would be the canoe fete. "At least it will be if I don't fall in the creek!" she laughingly said.

As any queen should, Oregon's ruler will wear white on her coronation. A simple hoop-skirted dress of mousseline de soi with square neck and fitted waist will be her royal gown.

Her hair she will wear with a tiara of curls on top to form a background of brown curly loveliness for the crown she will receive.

And the lucky man who will gaze into the big blue eyes of Oregon's "Alice" at tonight's prom is Phi Delt's Gordon Benson.

First Day Sees

All in all, about 1644 copies of the Oregonian were turned over to the purchasers yesterday. Of this number, 40 were delivered in Portland, while the rest went to students and faculty members of the Oregon campus.

Scabbard and Blade will perform a ceremony for Junior Weekend Queen Maxine Glad at the campus luncheon today. All Scabbard and Blade members are asked to be at the luncheon by 11:30.

To a Blonde

Only true blonde in this year's royal court is the distinction of Princess Margaret Williams, blue-eyed Pi Phi, who recalled last night that she was "nearly floored" when she first learned of her royal status.

Here to share her reign is her mother from Portland, who will see to it, she promises, that Princess Margaret gets safely into her pale blue dotted swiss dress trimmed with rose grosgrain ribbon. Like all the other princesses' gowns, Margaret's has a tight fitted waistline and quaint puffed sleeves. The neck is V shaped, and a full skirt lends distinction to the costume.

Margaret loves her work in the University art school, but she laughed and admitted she wouldn't mind doffing the artist's smock she wears to share the glory of Wonderland on the campus.

At tonight's Junior prom she'll be swinging to Art Holman's music with Gale Ferris.

Coronation of Queen

(Continued from page one) will be tapped by the black-robed Friars, senior men's honorary group, and of women who will be handed a rose as a sign they have been chosen to Mortar Board, senior women's honorary.

Pledges of Asklepiads, pre-medical honorary, will lend color to the lunch hour with their antics.

Although many work-a-day campus rulings will be scrapped for the gala carnival luncheon, a few new ones will take their places, namely: the traditional bans on neckties and white shoes for the fellows. Violation by any of the men of stringent rules against talking to coeds will be punished by dunking the offenders in the lily pond near Fenton hall. Order of the O men will enforce the regulations.

The Brunettes Have It

Beta's Nick Dallas will have a tiny fragment of royalty to take care of tonight, when he escorts Princess Alyce Rogers, demure personality girl, to the Junior prom.

Brown-haired, blue-eyed Princess Alyce was excited last night about the whole matter of being a weekend ruler. "I've lived in Eugene all my life and gone to almost every canoe fete given, but I never dreamed that I would ever be on the other side of the millrace!" she declared, a happy smile wreathing her face in gladness.

A journalism major and originator of the Emerald "Curb Cruising" column, Alyce will throw off her role of scribe today for a weekend of imaginative loveliness. She will wear pink dotted swiss when she sits beside Queen Maxine at the coronation.

Announcer for Fete Is Active

Freeman Patton, B.A., major chosen to act as this year's canoe fete announcer, has been active in all types of radio work since he came to the campus three years ago.

Besides reading poetry two nights a week on KORE's "Words and Music" program, Patton has won much popularity as announcer for the "Early Bird" program on that station.

Students who sleep through 8 o'clocks might picture this lad rising at 5:30 a.m., cooking his own bacon and eggs, and walking all the way to work to conduct a 7 o'clock program.

He batches with two roommates, who complain that he talks in his sleep—booms out in his announcer's voice and wakes them up in the middle of the night.

Ex-President of Gamma hall, Patton is quite well known at the University—he takes a course in radio production, and last year assisted with broadcasts here sponsored by KOAC.

Art School Receives Contemporary Prints

Two new prints of paintings by contemporary American artists have been received by the art school from the Living American Art association.

They are: "I'm Tired," by Yasuo Kuniyoshi, and "The Sentinels," by Alexander Brook.

Each month the school purchases, at a special price offered to members of the association, two of the prints for the collection.
