Judge by the New Faculty

SEVERAL very sound reasons make themselves very much apparent this week for the belief that this year for the University will be the great one, possibly the start of a great period in the history of the University. Most of these several reasons to which this reference holds in particular, can be met almost any day, doing their jobs about the University—new faculty members, to be specific, and one of the finest groups ever seen here, in the opinion of some of the older hands among the faculty.

First attention to this rather unheralded addition to the University came with the initial faculty meeting, held last week. After this meeting old faculty member after old faculty member could not find enough to say in praise of the fine group of young men and women who this year join the faculty. Department after department, the long-tenured declared, showed new members with fine degrees, mostly Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, or other top ranking honoraries. High quality beyond a doubt.

RESPONSIBILITY for the quality of the new staff members could be laid at several doors. Of course the departments look their prospects over pretty carefully before they come to any decisions. They have rigid standards to measure by. But in the process the matter goes through the hands of one whose influence probably most shapes the course of the faculty and thus of the University as a whole—Dr. Erb, president of the University.

Dr. Erb's position in regard to new faculty members is mostly advisory. He only recommends. But in looking over the records for prospective University of Oregon faculty members Dr. Erb's investigations and decisions no doubt carry plenty of weight. This influence works on all the departments, for here is one man who sees the University as a whole, rather than as a building or an office. His ideas will be reflected in his work.

So the fine hand of the University's young president can be seen at its work of forever, ceaselessly making this a better University. No University is sounder than its foundations. By building thus soundly, President Erb is only insuring soundness from bottom to top.

The U.S.—Santa Claus by Air

WHEN the federal government, through congress, decided to promote civilian aeronautics, particularly in colleges, the full import of this innovation did not, of course, make itself felt immediately, either on this campus or on others—at least not to the average undergraduate. But to many high in affairs of the University it at once meant something which would make the University greater and develop better men and women. They prepared their case, presented it, and the success of their efforts is manifested in the present quota of 40, the number of students here who may enroll for the new course. Forty is a large number for a school of this size, and a comparison will show it is more than some larger schools are getting.

In a sense the new training is a gold mine. For the $40 fee the enrollee gets more than $300 worth of flying time. Hour by hour this figure speaks for itself. Anyone who has yearned to fly only to be stymied by the cost should see the answer to their prayers in the new program. It is practically phenomenal.

THERE are no strings to the offer, strange as it may seem.

It is not an army project. What the intention of congress was when it passed the measure, no one can tell. Possibly they considered the military aspect. Competent observers, however, feel that the idea is that many would fly if they had the chance, just as many would have driven automobiles in their earlier days if they had had a chance. If it were a military measure it would not be exactly the thing for exclusive girls' schools, which has happened. Even here enrollment may include 10 per cent women, which little scents of war.

Fly in the ointment is that, having won a larger quota than larger schools, this University must show its right to keep or increase its quota. Already enough applications are on hand to fill the 40 places. But this is not enough, there must be more applications. Sophomores and freshmen should grasp this chance to get their names on the list early, for next year if not for this year. And who knows, maybe they may get in with the first crop. "There is no telling who may fall by the wayside, either in the physical or other examinations," local administrators say. Anyone might be called.

A large number of applications would not only give the selection committee (which ultimately reverts to Washington) a good field to choose from. Not only that, it would demonstrate University of Oregon interest and ability to support the program. By Thursday night it will be past deadline. It might be suggested that those interested should not hesitate for any reason to apply. It is Oregonizing.

Ed Larson has been selected to carry the juvenile lead in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" which will be presented to Guild hall audiences October 12, 13, and 14.

"Several changes in the casting have been made necessary since the summer performance of this Pulitzer prize winning play," announced Horace Robinson, director.

"Jerry Lakefish and James Parsons are two more new faces who will be seen in principal parts," Robinson continued. These students have been selected to fill the vacancies left by the summer cast members who have left the campus.

New Doctor, Nurse Appointed to Infirmary Personnel

New staff members will make their appearance at the infirmary this year. Dr. Margaret Tingle, an Oregon graduate, will take over the work formerly done by Dr. Leslie Porter, who has been appointed to teach the men's hygiene classes.

Senior PE Students To Teach at Local City Playgrounds

Ned Johns, professor of physical education, and Miss Janet Woodruff, associate professor of physical education, are this year to inaugurate a system whereby seniors in physical education will receive their practice teaching at one of the six city parks. Under the supervision of Mr. Fischer, Eugene playground director, the seniors will be divided into three divisions, each division to teach one branch of the course each term, alternating throughout the year.

The courses to be taught are: health education, physical education, and recreation. This system will include all seniors majoring in physical education.

More than 300 freshman girls attended this affair which is sponsored every year by the "Y" cabinet to acquaint the girls with the YWCA and its activities. In the receiving line were Mrs. Marjorie Evans, executive secretary of the YWCA; and the four members of the cabinet, Bettylou Swart, Betty Lou Kurtz, Marjorie Montgomery, and Mary Failing. Bettylou Swart, president of the "Y" urges all girls to come often to the "Y" to rest or study whether they are members or not.
