

House Grades To Be Published

The fall term comparative grade averages of University living organizations will be issued for public consumption this week, the first time in two years, an announcement from registration offices said yesterday.

The grade publication issue, which has raged in faculty meetings for the last year, came to the fore again this fall when the professorial group reversed its former decision and voted once again to make public the comparative scholastic standings.

Two years ago, when the group voted "thumbs down" on grade publication, it was Dr. Warren D. Smith, head of the geology department, who was chief backer of the keep - grades - secret movement. This fall the faculty decided that knowledge of house averages was beneficial to Oregon development.

"The house comparison publication, however, has no effect whatsoever on the usual University policy of keeping individuals' grades secret," Constance pointed out yesterday. The grades of each student will still be available only to the faculty, to the student, to his parents, and to persons with written permission from him.

Teachers Will Convene Here

The 1941 conference of the Teachers of Journalism on the Pacific Coast will be held on the University of Oregon campus, according to Professor George Turnbull, of the school of journalism, who attended the fourth convention of the group since 1935 with Dean Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism.

The conference, which was held on the Stanford university campus, was attended by 17 teachers of journalism from six different states. Schools represented were: University of Oregon, University of Washington, University of Idaho, Montana State university, University of Nevada, University of Southern California, and Stanford university.

It was noticed at the convention that in nearly all the states represented the faculty members were compiling histories of journalism for their own state. Professor Turnbull's book, "History of Oregon Journalism," went on sale at the University Co-op only a short time ago.

It was also decided at the conference, Professor Turnbull said, that the 1941 conference will be held during the Thanksgiving weekend rather than the Christmas weekend as has been done heretofore.

Personnel Office Completes Winter NYA Appointments

After a New Year's weekend marked by working far into every night, the University personnel staff yesterday announced that nearly all NYA appointments for winter term have been completed.

Because of the high scholarship rating of the greater part of the fall term employees of the National Youth Administration, Dean of Personnel Karl W. Onthank said, most of them have received winter term jobs.

A few vacancies have been left open for students who could not yet secure grades in certain courses, and therefore do not know their GPA's yet. These appointments will be made as soon as that material is available.

William C. Dedman, Brownsville, Robert W. Dent, Gresham; Jack H. Elle, Milwaukie.

Six University Girls Honored

Six University coeds Christmas day received checks for $35 from Oregon's Panhellenic association, as the Greek governing organization carried out its annual Yuletide scholarship activity.

The girls awarded checks were Mary Graham, Helen Angell, Jean Burt, Rebecca Anderson, Hope Hughes, and Avis Klemme. Awards were made on the bases of need of aid, scholarship, service to the school, and deserving characteristics of the applicants.

The six winners of the checks were selected by a Panhellenic executive committee consisting of Panhellenic President Aurelie Wolcott, Janet Goresky, and Ruth Hall. They worked in cooperation with Dean of Women Hazel P. Schvering, choosing the six girls from a list of over 50 applicants.

Reserve Librarian Travels to Mexico

Mrs. Marjorie Reynolds, reserve librarian at the University library, and her husband traveled extensively through the South during the Christmas vacation.

Among other places they stopped at Palm Springs, California; various spots in Mexico, and Tucson, Arizona.

We will be with you in spirit when you are celebrating the coming of the new year.
